Rains Bring Relief To Scorched Midwest This Morning

HEAT WAVE MOVES OVER EAST TODAY

Chicago Bureau Holds Out Hope For More Moisture Within Few Hours

MANY FOREST FIRES

Temperatures Lower in All Sections From Rockies To West Ohio Border

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Rains that brought spotty relief to the drought-stricken middle west, today rolled the August heat wave eastward toward the Atlantic seaboard and southward to the fringes of the parched corn belt.

Temperatures that have hung around the 100 mark for days in the middle west sought lower levels today in the 70's and 80's after scattered showers and deluges had cooled the atmosphere and broke in many areas the drought that seared crops with hundreds of millions of damage.

The forecast from the Chicago weather bureau held out hope for more showers in the middle west with lowering temperatures. Eastward, however, the prediction was for warmer weather. The same forecast was made for the southern fringes of the corn belt.

From the Rocky mountains to the Ohio border, the drought region was splashed with showers and in some cases deluges. Welcome rains came in Colorado, sections of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana.

Farm leaders hailed the drought as a "blessing in disguise," which will force farmers to diversify their crops and place them in better position to withstand drought.

Forest fires in several sections of the country added their toll today to the drought damage.

Fires that destroyed timber and cottages in the Cape Cod, Mass., district ate their way in the town of Plymouth. Fanned by a west wind the fires pushed toward the oceans with fire departments and volunteers fighting a losing battle. A general rain seemed to be the only hope of quenching the blaze.

Ellisville, Mass., was reported to be within the path of a five mile wall of flames. Seven other towns in the district were threatened by the fires.

KIRKWOOD GRANTED DECREE OF DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(UP)—James Kirkwood and Lila Lee, once known as "Hollywood's ideal couple," were parted today in divorce.

Kirkwood, veteran actor of the stage and screen, won the divorce on a charge of desertion. He showed considerable emotion as he testified that he and Miss Lee had been regarded as a loving couple from their marriage in 1923 until they separated July 15, 1928.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Women live in the present and for it.

Calvin Coolidge Says

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of the United States

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 6.—Because in the past year there has been a trade recession that has been felt all over the world, most nations are making great efforts, often in the form of high protection and of practical exclusion of foreign goods, to recoup the losses which they have felt.

The United States has not gone that far, but the pressure from both business men and wage earners for measures that will insure to them the opportunity to produce the entire supply for the domestic market has become very insistent. It is the same action abroad which at present is converging upon the automobile trade.

For years almost all the automobiles exported in the entire world came from this country. It was inevitable that other nations should try desperately at least to keep more of their home markets for their home productions. Our cars were bound to face that problem sooner or later. Nothing we could do or refrain from doing would prevent it.

Temporarily, our manufacturers will encounter some difficulties. But, if they act with discretion and make proper contacts, the excellence and low cost of our cars will continue to commend them to foreign purchasers. We are far in the lead in this field.

NAVY BOARD TO ASK FOR 1000 NEW AIRPLANES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—A recommendation that the navy request congressional authorization for a huge new five-year airplane building program under which 1000 planes would be constructed ata cost of $85,000,000, was before the navy general board today.

The board must approve this plan if it decides to build up the navy to the limits of the London naval treaty ,it was said at the aeronautics bureau.

Planes built under the proposed new program, which would supplement the present 1614-plane authorization made by congress in 1925 and now in its last year, would be used on the 69,000 tons of new aircraft carriers allotted the United States under the treaty.

One obstacle that might prevent carrying out this program, it was pointed out, is the rigid economy policy which President Hoover has warned his cabinet officers to follow. It is the opinion of high navy officers, however, that the president will agree to building up to treaty limits.

The possibility congress might object to such a large appropriation was minimized by these officers, who pointed out the 1925 authorization carried an appproappriation of $85,078,750.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the aeronautics bureau, has endorsed the 1000-plane

Blodget Says Punch Boards Are Illegal

City Attorney of Huntington Beach and Council Runs Them All Out

THERE ARE NO punch boards or slot machines in the city of Huntington Beach simply because the city council there and the city attorney, Lew Blodget, said "no" when they were approached by slot machine and punch board operators, according to a statement made by Blodget today, in an interview asked by The Register.

"There are no slot machines or punch boards in Huntington Beach and there haven't been for a long time," Blodget said. "We just simply told them to get out. Told them that public sentiment was against them and therefore the city council did not want them to operate there," he said.

"I met with the city council regarding the punch boards and slot machines and told them that as far as I could find out there had never been a state supreme court decision in favor of the slot machines that are operated in this county, the kind that pay on the second operation, and so the council decided that there were to be none of the machines in Huntington Beach.

"I then informed the operator of the machines of the council's decision, and we went down the streets and turned all of them that were operating at that time against the wall. I told the operator that we would make a test case of the machines and allow the courts to decide the matter." Instead of the test case, he took all his machines out of the city. That is all there is to it," Blodget said.

Endurance Flight Planned By Three Oregon Brothers

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 6.—(UP)—A new attempt to shatter the airplane endurance flight record of 553 hours set by the Hunter brothers of Sparta, Ill., will be made here by the three Rankin brothers, Tex, Dick and Dud, it was announced here today by Tex Rankin.

The brothers, all three of whom will go aloft, will use a Stinson monoplane equipped with a Wasp motor.

Exact date of the start of the attempt was not announced. The flight will be made over Jantzen Beach on the Columbia river.

OPERATION OF MONEY BOARDS IN ORANGE COUNTY GOES ON DESPITE COUNTY'S WARNING

ANNOUNCEMENT of a meeting called by District Attorney Z. B. West Jr., to be held in his office tomorrow morning with the police chiefs of the county, for the purpose of discussing the proper method for uniform enforcement of the law relative to the operation of punch boards in Orange county, has apparently had no effect on the operation of the boards, according to an investigation made by The Register today.

Although the district attorney's office has announced that something will be done regarding this particular form of law violation, punch boards continue to be operated by the wholesale here.

The district attorney in a letter which was printed in the press of the county on Monday, said in part: "It is apparent, I think, that the many hundreds of merchants who have punch boards which they have believed to be proper, should not be arrested or prosecuted without first having been given a proper warning, and in order to be fair to them, I am releasing this letter to the press."

Not Frightened

From the manner in which boards were being operated here today, it was indicated that the merchants were not at all frightened by the warning sent out, but instead, expected to continue their operation until police officers either came around and arrested them or confiscated the boards.

In one place in Santa Ana six punch boards were lying on the counter. Three were money boards, where the player collected in cash if the lucky number was punched out. The others were cigaret boards and merchandise boards.

At place No. 2, visited, which was next door to No. 1, there was only one punch board. It was a money board. "If I punch out the lucky number, how do I get paid?" the proprietor was asked.

"Well, there's a check here for each lucky number, but we'll cash the check, so you really get cash if you win," he explained.

At place No. 3, there were three boards on the counter. One was a candy board, and two were money boards. There was one big money board there, where the puncher of a lucky number collected $50 in cash. Other prizes on the board were $5 and $2.50 winners, paid by check and the check cashed there.

At place No. 4, there were eight punch boards, one of which was different from any seen anywhere else during the investigation. It was called the "Reno National Bank" board. By punching a winner from the board, the player then was allowed to punch another number in a different place on the board, which told him how much cash he received. The other boards at the place were for merchandise, for cigarets, candy, knives and some other money boards.

At place No. 5 there were three boards, one that paid checks, one

HENRY J. ALLEN RUNS AHEAD IN KANSAS VOTING

At Same Time His Running Mate Governor Reed Is Falling Behind

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Henry Justin Allen, 61, staunch supporter of President Hoover in the senate, former newspaper publishers and reputedly one of the "best dressed" men in Washington, today was conceded the Republican nomination for junior senator from Kansas on the face of mounting returns from Tuesday's primary.

Allen construed his apparent victory over a field of three opponents as a vote of confidence in support of the presidential administration. He won over W. H. Sproul, former congressman, Ralph Snyder, Kansas farm bureau head, and James Getty, Kansas City, Kas., attorney. Allen held a two to one lead over his nearest trailers, Sproul and Snyder.

In contrast, Allen's Republican primary running mate, Governor Clyde M. Reed, 59, militant opponent of Alexander Legge's wheat crop policies, faced the possibility of losing by 40,000 votes in his race for a second term against Frank Haucke, 35, former World war sergeant.

Early returns today showed Senator Allen maintaining a two to one lead over his nearest opponent, Snyder. In 1250 precincts out of the 2668 in the state, Allen polled 61,385; Snyder, 29,908; Sproul, 22,306. Getty trailed far behind.

Returns from 1761 precincts gave Frank Haucke 112,302 votes compared with 85,986 for Governor Reed.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Ted Lundgren, who plans to hop off later this week on a round the world flight, arrived here at 10:47 a. m. today, completing a two-stop flight from Los Angeles.

Lundgren left Los Angeles Monday and stopped over yesterday at Amarillo. His plane is a high winged monoplane.

He will try to break the Graf Zeppelin's round the world flight record.

PHELAN'S CONDITION REMAINS UNCHANGED

SARATOGA, Aug. 6.—(UP)—The condition of farmer Senator James D. Phelan today was "weaker but otherwise unchanged," five physicians announced after a conference.

Since an attack of acute gastritis three months ago, Senator Phelan's condition has been grave.

He has shown little or no improvement during the past few weeks.

Says District Attorney Has Admitted It

Punch Board Evil Attacked By Candidate in Address Over Radio

HARRY WESTOVER, candidate for district attorney, in an address broadcast over Radio Station KREG last night, asserted there was open gambling in Orange county, through the medium of the punch board, and with the admitted knowledge of the district attorney.

Westover declared the district attorney has said that operators of punch boards are violating the law, but despite this fact they still are operating.

"The law is being violated," charged Westover. "The district attorney has said so. But punch boards continue and they are running wide open in this city and county tonight.

"Conditions are such that checks and money are used as prizes, and there has been no effort even to disguise the fact that it is open gambling. In some places of business there are as many as six boards."

Following is Westover's address in full:

"To the voters of Orange county:

"In every campaign there are those candidates who pussy-foot around and refuse to take their stand upon the issues involved. They attempt to appease every faction and refuse to take sides, feeling that they will alienate the support of various groups.

"I believe, however, that the people prefer a candidate who is not afraid to take sides, who will make issues regardless of where the chips may fly and who stands out for those things he believes to be right. A definite stand on the part

G. O. P. LEADERS TO CONSIDER SITUATION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—With the drought serving to add further complications, the Republican party's already complicated political situation will be taken up here tomorrow at a conference of party leaders.

Although the meeting was called for the purpose of receiving the resignation of Chairman Claudius H. Huston of the national committee and the subsequent installation of the Fess-Lucas regime, that part of the conference already has become a matter of mere routine.

The real business will be to caucus on the situation confronting the party, to discuss the way in which te nation regards the Hoover administration and to exchange opinions about what, if anything, should be done.

Wedding Not To Separate Eva and Topsy

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 6.—(UP)—It will take more than wedding bells to separate "Eva" from her "Topsy."

The world was definitely informed of this today by Vivian Duncan, "white" half of the famous sister team and bride of Nils Asther, Swedish moving picture star.

Vivian and Rosetta will start work in a new play early in November. The bride and groom planned to leave here shortly for Santa Monica, where they will make their future home. They have been honeymooning at Lake Tahoe, Nev., following their recent marriage at Reno.

HEAD OF CHINA TROOPS TURNS IN RESIGNATION

Shanghai Bankers Demand Termination of Civil War In 30 Days

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Aug. 6.—(UP)—A telegram received by an American firm here today from its Nanking representative said Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the National government, had submitted his resignation for consideration of the state council. The advices were not confirmed from other sources.

Chiang Kai-Shek, who gained the leadership of China's military and civil forces in the successful Nationalist campaign two years ago, recently has been called upon to resign by the northern rebel leaders at Peiping.

Chiang youthful and modern, has been endangered by the northern armies from Peiping and simultaneously by the raids of Chinese communist forces in Hunan and other provinces in the Yangtze region, where reports today indicated a checking of looting and massacres around Changsha.

At various times in the past the young war-lord who was charged by his enemies with corrupt and prejudiced administration has been re-

ARRANGE FUNERAL OF FAMOUS PADRE

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Funeral arrangements were being made today for Father Ramon M. Mestres, "padre of the restoration," who performed the wedding ceremony for President and Mrs. Hoover at Monterey, Calif., in 1899. He died here last evening at a sanatorium.

The father's friendship for the president began when Mrs. Hoover, then Lou Henry, was teacher in the public school at Monterey, and the president was "courting" her. He gained the undying affection of Mrs. Hoover when he converted his church into a school room when the local institution of learning was burned down.

RADICAL TO TAKE STAND THIS WEEK

Attorney Declares He Does Not Believe Witnesses Coached in 1916 Trial

FICKERT WILL TALK

Prosecutor in First Trial To Take Stand and Tell What He Knows of Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Although insisting that false testimony played an important part, Edwin V. McKenzie, attorney for Warren K. Billings, told the California supreme court today that he did not believe that witnesses had been coached in the murder trials of Billings and Thomas J. Mooney.

The attorney outlined his position to the court shortly after today's session of a hearing on a pardon application for Billings opened.

Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, was the first witness called today. He told the hearing that he believed San Francisco prosecutors and police had "framed" Mooney and Billings in connection with the preparedness day bombing July 22, 1916 in which 10 persons were killed.

It was at this point that McKenzie stated his position, denying that a "frame-up" had occurred, although insisting that, in his opinion, there had been a miscarriage of justice in the trials of Billings and Mooney in 1916 and 1917.

Billings, who has been in Folsom since his conviction, was not in the court room, indicating that the seven members of the court have decided to call him the latter part of this week or early next week.

Late yesterday McKenzie received permission to call Billings as a witness in his own behalf. Secrecy surrounds the time Billings will be called but undoubtedly it will be soon.

A set-back for the pardon hopes of Billings and Mooney was seen in a declaration of Edward A. Cunha, former assistant district attorney under Charles M. Fickert, the man who prosecuted and convicted Mooney and Billings.

"Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings are guilty and were justly convicted of the preparedness day bombing and do not deserve pardons," Cunha told the United Press as today's hearing got underway.

Cunha declared he had proof to to support his assertions. He will be called later in the day as a witness.

Fickert, known as the "thunderbolt," will follow his former assistant on the stand. Fred L. Berry, another of Fickert's assistants in the original prosecutions, acted as examiner today as a special representative of the people.

ST. LOUIS FLIERS IN AIR 389 HOURS

ST. LOUIS., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Although Dale Jackson, endurance flier, suffered from a cold, the monoplane Greater St. Louis droned in circles over Lambert St. Louis field today, Jackson determined his illness would not conflict with the attempt to break the Hunter brothers' record of 553 hours of continuous flight.

Forest O'Brine, companion of Jackson, was ready to act as nurse, and work a double shift if Jackson felt he needed additional sleep. The fliers messaged today, however, that Jackson's cold "is slight," and probably would not force them down.

At 12:11 p. m. the plane had been in continuous flight for 389 hours.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Aug. 6.—(UP)—The recent European conference ending the sound plotting patent controversy opened world markets to both German and American films, President Will H. Hays of the Motion Picture Producer's and Distributors' of America said in a statement today. The agreement will permit producers of all nations to obtain licenses under both German and American patents.

DEADLOCK ON PRICE OF PARK SITE MAY BE TAKEN TO COURT

Indications that the strip of beach land between Huntington Beach and Newport Beach proposed as a state park will be acquired by condemnation proceedings was seen yesterday as the result of statements made before the board of supervisors by Thomas E. Workman, of Los Angeles, representative of several of the property owners, who, accompanied by T. B. Talbert, of Huntington Beach, appeared before the board.

Talbert and Workman endeavored to persuade the board members that negotiations should be entered into with the property owners in an effort to arrive at a price where a deal could be made without resorting to court action, but they were informed by the board that they would be unable to consider any figure other than that which the two appraising bodies had reported, and that the matter had been placed in the hands of T. W. O'Melveney, of Los Angeles, member of the state park commission, to be carried to conclusion.

Workman previously had stated that O'Melveney, in a conference with the property owners at his office last Friday, had taken the attitude that condemnation proceedings would be resorted to if the owners did not care to accept the price which he formally offered them at that time. He had asked, however, that the owners consent to a friendly condemnation, agreeing to accept the price set by the court without taking an appeal, but Workman, who represents half of the owners, stated yesterday that the owners were not inclined to do this in face of the price offered, which is $618,800.

File $100,000 Damage Suit Over Child's Death

BUS ACCIDENT AT SCHOOL IS BASIS OF CASE

An echo of the death of Mildred L. Taylor, 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis G. Taylor, who was crushed by a school bus at the Ocean View school last March, was heard in the courthouse today, when it was learned that the parents had filed suit for $100,000 against the school district, trustees and bus driver.

The suit, which was filed yesterday afternoon, alleges that the driver, Harry Letson, as an agent for the school district, drove upon the school ground in a careless and negligent manner, on the day of the accident, and that he had been doing so for some time with the knowledge and consent of the members of the board of trustees, William S. Preston, Wellington De La Verne and Vernon C. Heil. The claim also is made in the complaint that no effort was made to prevent this alleged practice, to which is attributed the accident causing the death of the pupil.

It is asserted that through the negligent and careless operation of the school bus the plaintiffs lost the custody, society and earnings of their daughter to their damage in the amount of $100,000, which amount is asked for the asserted wrongful death of the child.

plan, which he discussed last week in a speech dedicating a new airport at Bay City, Mich.

It is not known how soon the general board will reach a decision in the matter as many of its members have left the city. Some opposition is expected to develop, however, as several board members are known to oppose the airplane as an adjunct to the battle fleet.

If the program is approved and authorized by congress 550 of the 1000 planes would be apportioned among the five new carriers, presumably to be built out of the 69,000 tons allotted under the treaty; among the 25 per cent of cruisers allowed to be equipped with landing decks; among the new super-dirigibles, ZRS-4 and ZRS-5, and possibly among the V-type fleet submarines, which may be remodeled to carry a plane apiece.

The rest of the planes would be held in reserve.

MRS. FITTS TALKS AT MEETING HERE

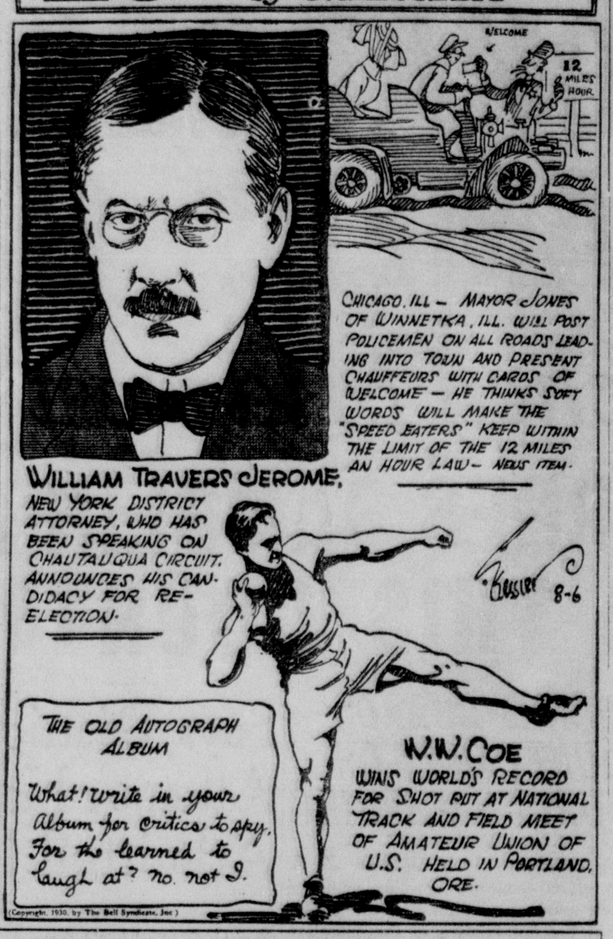

More than 200 residents of Santa Ana and Orange county gave an enthusiastic welcome to Mrs. Buron Fitts, wife of the Los Angeles candidate for governor, and two other workers in the campaign, as a reception given yesterday at the Santa Ana Ebell club.

Illness prevented the mother of Fitts from being present. Mrs. Fitts gave a short talk during the reception, as did Mrs. Ethel Hearst, who made the trip with Mrs. Fitts and Dr. C. D. Ball, president of the Orange county Fitts for Governor club. Mrs. Martha Becker, chairman of the women's division of the Southern California Buron Fitts for Governor club, was the other guest.

Arrangements for the affair were in charge of Mrs. Emma Chapman, chairman of the Orange country club. Punch and wafers were served to the men and women who attended the event.

There is to be another conference on the matter at the office of O'Melveney next Friday, and Supervisor John C. Mitchell, of Garden Grove, and County Purchasing Agent F. W. Slabaugh, were designated to represent Orange county at this conference.

The property, which it is proposed to acquire jointly by the state and county for the creation of a state park to be improved and maintained by the state, consists of 12,400 feet (approximately two and one-third miles) of ocean frontage, and 344 acres of back land.

Owners are Hanson Moore, whose holdings consist of 3361 feet of beach and 99.86 acres, which he values at $436,080; Harold G. Ferguson corporation, 1500 feet of beach, $150,000; Willow Land company, 7600 feet of beach, $760,000; A. C. Thorne, 114 acres, $57,000; and Pacific Ranch company, 130 acres, $65,000. There also is a strip of 45 feet of beach owned by the Pacific home, valued at $4500 in the owners' statement of values. The total valuation of the property as claimed by the owners is $1,472,580.

The price set by the county appraisal board of five men and the appraisal company engaged by the state park board is itemized as follows: beach frontage owned by Moore, Ferguson and the Willow company, $496,000; acreage owned by Moore, Thorne and the Pacific company, as follows, Moore, $50,000; Thorne, $37,050; Pacific ranch, $37,750.

Talbert, in addressing the board, stated that the price offered was a shocking disappointment to the property owners, pointed out that the site was centrally located and was ideal for a beach park and urged that negotiations be started for reaching a price agreeable to the owners.

Workman asserted that the appraisal was so low that the owners were dumbfounded and felt that it was too low to even start negotiations. He called the attention of the board to purchases of beach frontage that are being made in Los Angeles county at prices greatly in excess of the price of $40 per front foot, which is the price on which the appraisal is based.

When Workman asked what was the attitude of the board on the matter, Supervisor Schumacher asserted that they would be unable to face the people of the county on any other figure than that returned by the appraisers. Chairman Willard Smith advised Workman that the matter had been left in the hands of O'Melveney by the board.

24 Punch Boards

At Place No. 6, there were 24 punch boards counted under one roof. There are several businesses in the one place and many of them were equipped with boards.

At place No. 7, there were six boards. One was a big money board, paying $50 top prize, watch board, with smaller cash prizes on the same board; cigaret boards and other merchandising boards. It was at this place that the proprietor said he had heard that the boards were "going to have to go." Asked if he really thought so, he replied: "Sure, they'll get them this time."

At place No. 8, there was only one money board and one cigaret board. The man behind the counter there stated that he didn't care much about the money boards, that he would rather keep the merchandising boards as he believed they brought trade.

"Grabbing the boards will put a lot of little fellows out of business," one drug store operator said today when talking about the board. "There are a lot of those little fellows that make all their money that way," he said.

of a candidate must meet the approval of the voters.

"A candidate who refuses to criticise the things he believes to be wrong is not a fit man to have in the important office of district attorney. If he does not have the courage of his convictions; if he does not have 'backbone' enough to definitely come out against those things which are wrong, as a candidate, then he does not have 'backbone' enough to stand up for the things he believes to be right and proper after he gets into office.

Law Enforcement

"We have had a great deal to say during the past few weeks concerning the question of law enforcement. Law enforcement is one of the big issues of this present campaign. And along this line I wish to say a word or two about the situation which has developed in Orange county in respect to punch boards and slot machines. Many have thought it strange that in Orange county such devices can be used, while in other counties of the state, including the populous county of Los Angeles, they are banned. A friend of mine a few days ago told me that when he stopped at a gas station just this side of the Los Angeles county line, he spoke to the operator concerning the operation of punch boards, and the operator stated:

"'Well, you know this is Orange county. I couldn't use such boards if I were on the other side of the line.'

"Conditions are such that checks and money are used as prizes, and there has been no effort even to disguise the fact that it is open gambling. In some places of business there are as many as eight boards.

Raid Called Off

"A few days ago, according to reports, it was planned to make a raid on punch boards and slot machines. The raid, however, was postponed from time to time, the last postponement being until Monday of this week. On last Sunday, an important and interesting meeting was held. I have not been able to learn the names of all who were present, but I am reliably informed that one of the chief owners of punch boards was present and ways and means were discussed. I do know that on the following day, that is last Monday, the raid was called off and the district attorney of this county issued a letter in which he said that he wanted the various city attorneys and chiefs of police to come together in order to talk over the situation. In his letter, however, the district attorney states that the operators of punch boards were violating the law.

The law is being violated. The district attorney has said so. But punch boards continue and they are running wide open in this city and in this county tonight.

"A judge, in discussing the situation in Chicago, spoke of a 'reasonable understanding.' Meetings which are held, followed by action, or a failure to act, indicate frequently that a 'reasonable understanding' has been reached.

"Any understanding 'reasonable' or otherwise, between law enforcement officials and those whose special interests are opposed to law enforcement, should cease, and I promise the voters of Orange county that if elected district attorney it will not be a question with me, of who is going to be injured, or who will suffer, but the only question will be, has a crime been commited and who is guilty? When we have the evidence, prosecution will result, regardless of who the defendant is or what his connections may be.

"The district attorney's office must be divorced from political control. The district attorney is not the attorney of a privileged few. He is the attorney for the entire people, and it is not meet and proper that a district attorney should be at the beck and call of a few professional politicians.

No Affiliation

"I have no connection with any political ring or faction. I am under no obligations to any group. The thing I am interested in is the rights of the people. Their rights are supreme; they are more sacred to me than the rights of a privileged few. I am willing to risk my entire political future upon the proposition that I would rather be a servant of the masses than the tool of a few politicians. If elected to office I wish to be in a position to call my soul my own and to do the thing I consider right. I do not wish to keep my ears to the ground. I want to be free of entangling alliances and influence. I do not wish to be a party to any 'reasonable understanding.'

"Expressing such views, is it any wonder that I am an undesirable 'district attorney' as far as politicians are concerned? They wish some one in office who can be moulded to their will; they want some one to take orders and obey commands. Hence their cry, 'Why a change?' There are some candidates who are favorably known in political circles. They can be depended upon by politicians. Why a change in the district attorney's office?

"Now is the golden opportunity to clean out the district attorney's office. Now is the time to divorce the district attorney's office from political control. Let's have a new deal. It is time to make a change"

Driver Credited With Preventing Deaths In Crash

When C. W. Hensley, of San Pedro, driver of the Pacific Greyhound bus that turned over south of San Clemente yesterday, cut off the electric switch, he undoubetely saved the passengers from serious burns and possible death, according to an opinion expressed today.

The bus was going south at the time of the accident. A car was coming directly in the path of the stage and to avoid striking the car, Hensley swung the bus to the side of the highway. The wheels struck a pile of concrete and the steering knuckle was broken. Out of control, the big machine lunged forward and then turned over. The top was torn off but otherwise the bus was not seriously damaged.

Because the driver turned off the switch the machine did not catch fire. Eight of the passengers and Hensley were cut and bruised.

For use with electric radio sets a twin lightning arrester has been invented, one side preventing lightning entering from an aerial and the other through the light wires.

$29 wouldn't go far toward a vacation trip, but it will buy a Dixie Weave Suit that will make the rest of the summer a time of comfort at home.

A WORD OF COMFORT

The veil between this world and the next is not impenetrable even though the human mind and heart lack the power to proceed far into the mysteries of the Beyond.

You have enough data to make you absolutely sure that your loved one lives in a state of fuller knowledge, deeper understanding and richer joys.

Your own experience with love assures you that those who have gone to Paradise must know and share your eager endeavor to live worthily in the hope of the joyous reunion which the Christ has promised.

Cherish this conviction and live at your best. The time will not be long.

GETS $334,601 IN FIRST POOL OF VALENCIAS

This season's citrus crop will bring a net return of approximately $900,000 to the packing house of the Orange Mutual Citrus association at Orange, it was estimated today by F. L. Finley, manager, when he announced that the net proceeds at the house from the first pool, which closed July 1, were $334,601.58.

The first pool will bring to many of the growers a net price of over seven cents per pound, Finley stated. Finley said he was well pleased with the prices received and that they were better than those of last year at this time.

The first pool opened on April 21 and contained 139 cars of 462 boxes per car. The average price per packed box was $5.19 and the average price per field box at the house was $3.49, according to Finley.

The packing house is now working on the second pool, which will close on August 15 and which will contain approximately 60 cars of fruit, the manager stated, pointing out that there still are approximately 100 cars of valencias to be shipped. He said it still was too early to make any predictions about the navel orange crop.

The Orange Mutual Citrus association ships between 75 and 90 cars of lemons yearly. The estimate of $900,000 net returns at the house for this year's crop includes both oranges and lemons, Finley stated.

LUCAS SCORES SUPERVISORS ON CARRILLO CASE AND FOR ACTION ON COUNTY PRINTING

At a meeting held by the Lucas for Supervisor club of Paularino at Santa Ana Gardens last night, Lucas was introduced by the chairman as the man to whom a great part of the credit was due for the defeat of the water conservation bonds a year ago. Lucas replied that that was not the only matter in which the board of supervisors had acted in an unbusinesslike way.

He mentioned the Carrillo case, where the board stood pat behind Carrillo in spite of more than a score of affidavits, and the presence of some 40 witnesses. Again, in the suit for slander in which Carrillo sued a county editor, the case was dismissed on technical grounds which were apparently good law, but which prevented the public from reading the testimony ready to be heard and thus being able to form an opinion on the guilt of Carrillo, and his exoneration by the board of supervisors.

Also the matter of the county printing, for which the board is accused of spending some thousands of the taxpayers' money, more than is necessary for this year's official advertising, was mentioned.

"In conclusion," Lucas said, "it has been reported to me that the workers of one of my own competitors have made the statement: that Lucas was just a poor fellow, and the reason he was running was because he wanted a job.' Be that as it may," continued Lucas, "when has it become a crime for a poor man to aspire to office in Orange county?"

When asked how he stood on public beaches, Lucas said "that he was now interested in this matter along the coast in the southern part of the county, in which it appeared that the supervisors had not had the interest of the citizens at heart, inasmuch as the approach to one piece of public beach had been closed to the public, and in another instance some two miles of county highway had been abandoned. In both occasions those benefitting were large subdividers and promoters. I do not mean that I believe that all the beach should be public, but I certainly think that we now have not a sufficient proportion of the beach available for public use, and I am sure that what we have should be conserved and added to as occasion warrants."

Asked about secret meetings of the supervisors in which no discussion was publically made, the reply was that one of the fundamental planks of his platform was directed against such proceedings.

Mr. Moody, who was present, told of the work being done by the People's league in procuring data about all candidates in the field for the various offices. Such information of a public character as the investigators had been able to find, had been compiled and was available to all voters who wished to call at their office at 228 Spurgeon building, he said. He remarked that they had found nothing to the discredit of Lucas, possibly because apparently he never had held office. About 60 were present.

CANDIDATES TO BE GUESTS OF BREAKFASTERS

Practically every candidate for county office in this section will be presented at the meeting of the Santa Ana Breakfast club at St. Ann's inn at 7:15 a. m. tomorrow, according to an announcement today by Earl Morrow, who is in charge of invitations to the affair.

Each candidate will be introduced so that those present may become acquainted with the office-seekers, but there will be no speeches, Morrow pointed out. Mrs Clara Shortridge Foltz, candidate for nomination for governor, will be introduced by Judge F. C. Drumm. The other candidates for governor were extended invitations but sent their regrets because of prior engagements. Upton Sinclair, socialist candidate, said that he might be present, however.

"Noodles" Fagan, noted screen character, will introduce the candidates with the assistance of Norman Sprowl, manager of the Fox theaters in Santa Ana, who secured Fagan for the occasion.

In addition to the candidates, editors of newspapers throughout the county, secretaries and presidents of chambers of commerce, and political leaders have been invited to be present. Reservations for the affair will be made today, Morrow said. Entertainment will be provided under the direction of Eugene Kahen and will include music by the Elks orchestra.

ANAHEIM

Mrs. Babe Hart and Mrs. Hazel Hunt were visitors in Los Angeles Tuesday attending a millinery show.

Samuel E. Loose, physical director of the Anaheim grammar schools, and Mrs. Loose, who are spending the vacation months with friends and relatives in Ohio, are expecting to leave for home about August 17, according to word received here by friends.

Trestles with adjustable legs have been invented for use of carpenters and paper hangers on stairways and in other places that are not level.

INSURANCE IS PURCHASED FOR COUNTY AUTOS

Included in action taken by the board of supervisors yesterday at the regular weekly meeting of the county governing body at the court house was purchase of liability insurance for the county fleet of motor vehicles, consideration of requests for purchase of two autos, and two appropriations from the advertising fund. The board also heard an explanation from Judge F. C. Drumm as to why the maintenance district proposed for Dana Point was the only one that would work satisfactorily.

The public liability and property damage insurance matter, which has been before the board for the past two weeks, was settled when Mrs. Arthur Yarbrough, of Fullerton, withdrew her bid. There were two bids of the same amount, both in the same company, and the only solution which seemingly could be reached, as the other company would not consent to share the commissions, was to re-advertise for bids. Time would not permit this without leaving the cars unprotected for a period of two weeks, according to Dr. F. W. Slabaugh, purchasing agent, who presented the matter to the board, and Mrs. Yarbrough withdrew her bid. The contract was then awarded to the Union Indemnity company A. S. Ralph, agent, at a price of $2769.39. The high bid for the insurance was $6900, Dr. Slabaugh stated.

Requests for autos were made by the probation and flood control departments. The request o fthe flood control was granted, while that of the probation department was taken under advisement. Purchase of a truck for the road department at $3430 also was approved. Appropriations made were of $1000 to the California state chamber of commerce and $250 to the Brea post of the American Legion for the annual rodeo planned for the last of August.

A contract with John E. Berman was approved by the board and signed by Chairman Willard Smith, providing for furnishing water from the lines at Irvine park for use on a miniature golf course at a rate of $1.25 per 1000 feet.

On the maintenance district matter Judge Drumm explained that while there are many homes at Dana Point, they are not maintained as residences by the owners and that possibly only 10 signatures of resident free holders could be obtained to a petition to form a district in the manner which the board is accustomed to handling these matters. The petition under the form which the board usually works requires the signatures of 25 resident free holders. He pointed out that there was a need for the maintenance district and that the plan previously submitted was the only one under which it could be obtained with the present status of affairs.

Judge Drumm also informed the board that he would appear in the future to ask the formation of a sanitary district under the same plan.

Supervisor Charles Chapman inquired what percentage of the property was sold by the Dana Point company and was informed that approximately 50 per cent in the district to be formed was owned by the company. Chapman explained that he asked this so that he might know how the interests of the public were represented in the matter. Dana Point representatives assured the board that they could bring the signatures of many property owners before the board at the time of the hearing, approving the matter, and were asked to do so.

Receive $527,161 For 215 Cars Of Valencia Oranges

Returns of $527,161 on 215 cars of fruit were reported today by Frank H. Collins, manager of the Consolidated Orange Growers, Orange.

The fruit comprised pool No. 1, which opened April 28 and closed June 26.

The packing plant is now working on pool No. 2, scheduled to close August 15. Approximately 150 cars will be represented in the second pool.

The association expects to ship approximately 175 cars after the conclusion of the second pool,, Collins stated.

The manager expressed himself as highly pleased with the new pre-cooling plant of the association, which was completed just before the opening of the 1930 season. The building has a capacity of 60 cars of oranges.

OSCAR BLANCO TO APPEAR AT BAND CONCERT

BY RUTH ANDREWS

Music lovers of this vicinity will welcome the announcement that as a special feature of the "Russian Night" concert program, scheduled for presentation in Birch park tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock under the direction of D. C. Cianfoni, Oscar Blanco, formerly leading tenor of the Roumanian Royal Opera company, will be heard in a group of typical Russian songs.

Blanco is a favorite operatic tenor, with international reputation. He has sung in grand opera in Europe with such companies as the Berlin Opera company, the Bucharest Royal Opera company, and also in concert. In this country he sang with the Capital Opera company of Illinois, the Chicago Grand Opera company and the St. Louis Municipal Opera company, and later was engaged by the Loew's State theaters as a special attraction.

In Los Angeles Blanco has appeared at the Shrine auditorium and the big production "Hear, O Israel," as the principal soloist. He has a rich tenor voice with an exceptionally fine range.

At the present time Blanco is filling importane engagements in the Hollywood studios, M. G. M., Universal, United Artists and Paramount, singing in various languages. Those who have heard him broadcast over station KFI will probably remember having heard him.

Blanco's offering on tomorrow night's program will consist of Russian folk songs.

In addition to the Russian song group, a colorful Russian ballet furnished through the courtesy of the Claire Coutant School of Dancing will be seen in the characteristic Russian dance form, "The Czarina." Participants in this ballet will include Vera Getty, Lorren MacMillan, Nadine Ogden, Florence Rios, Thelma Trickey, Eileen Edwardson, Lorraine Turk and Le Vene Parks, also Thomas Carl Sutton.

It is anticipated that this dancing feature will add novelty to the unique program.

Among many especially characteristic Russian masterpieces to be rendered by the band will be the famous symphonic work, "Marche Slave" by Peter Tschaikowsky. In this work the composer speaks for all Slavs, and it has been said by critics that no work could be more thoroughly slavic in feeling and expression. The "Marche Slave" was written exactly a century after the American Declaration of Independence, during the war between Turkey and Siberia. Its premiere was given at a concert arranged for the benefit of the wounded.

NOTED TENOR

Oscar Blanco, formerly leading tenor with the Roumanian Royal Opera company and with prominent opera organizations in this country, will sing Russian folk songs tomorrow night in the concert to be presented by the Santa Ana Municipal band.

SERVICES FOR MISS WALKER ON THURSDAY

ANAHEIM, Aug. 6.—The entire community was saddened yesterday to learn of the death of Miss Elizabeth Walker, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas H. Walker.

Miss Walker was stricken Sunday afternoon while sojourning with her parents at their cabin in the San Bernardino mountains near Camp Baldy. She had not been subject to heart trouble and it was at first thought that she was suffering from acute indigestion. Her condition, however, grew worse and she was taken to the San Antonio Community hospital in Upland, where she passed away Monday afternoon without ever having regained consciousness.

The deceased came to Anaheim nine years ago with her parents from Los Angeles where the Rev. Mr. Walker was pastor of the Hollenbeck Heights Presbyterian church, coming to California 17 years ago from Baltimore, Maryland.

During her residence here Miss Walker had lived a most active life. She had for the past four years been teaching music and art in the Roosevelt school, Santa Ana. She taught a senior high school class in the Presbyterian Sunday school and for several years had acted as advisor to the Anaheim union high school Girl Reserves.

Besides her parents, Miss Walker leaves one sister, Mrs. S. K. Burgess, of Los Angeles, and four brothers, Thomas H. jr., Paul S. and Donald W., all of Los Angeles, and Kenneth, at home.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the church, with burial in the family plot in Fairhaven cemetery, Santa Ana.

Members of the Girl Reserves and alumni will attend services in a body, wearing their white uniforms with Girl Reserve ties.

YACHTING NEWS

BY STAURT LUCAS

The morning of the second day of the twin regattas opened with some fog but towards noon the sea breeze had cleared it all away.

As the preparatory gun was fired a 12-mile breeze from west-by-south ruffled the surface, and the absence of ground swells for the last few days permitted the deep blue of the channel to extend almost to the shore.

The two big classes, who started first, were sent away on a special course extending from the starting line to a mark off Huntington Beach pier and return, about 16 miles. With the wind as it was, it made an ideal windward and leeward course. At the start of the race, the Endymion came down to the line at the time of the start of the previous class. The Teva was really starting and poked her jibboom through the dinghy of the Endymion. No damage was done either boat other than the smashed tender.

Some of the boats sailed the proper course and some went around the course prescribed for the smaller boats, and secured no points for the race, but the sailing was good and the crews that went around the triangle twice had a lot of practice in handling the light sails, that will do them a lot of good, and that was denied the brothers that sailed the straightaway.

The star class, as usual, furnished the thrills of the day. Getting away to a perfect start, Webster, in Tom Robin, the winner of yesterday, bid fair to repeat. Keith, in the All Star, was second over, with Plumb, in Westmind, third. At the weather mark Hubbard, in Tempe, had worked into the lead, with Beardslee, in Moira, second, and Bill Lyons, in Veza, third. Keith had dropped to seventh and Plumb to eighth. Dan Murphy had drawn up into his favorite position of fourth and Cheesewright, in the Arrow, was fifth. This order was maintained throughout the first lap but in the second round Keith passed Murphy and Cheesewright on the run home and secured fourth, beating Murphy by one second and Cheesewright by 10. Hubbard never was headed after the first leg, when he secured the lead by a wonderful exhibition of pinching, as he approached the first mark. He increased his lead all the way round and passed all the P. C. boats but one and he gained over four minutes on her.

The San Diego boys consider the P. C. class the "works," but they not only have an extra 100 feet of sail area and have to give the stars time,, but yesterday's race shows conclusively that the stars are faster, in light weather at least.

PLAYFUL BOYS MISTAKEN FOR DOPE RUNNERS

Dope smuggling into Orange county via airplane having been the topic of conversation early Monday night at the sheriff's office while several officers waited for calls, the mysterious flashing of lights near El Toro, several hours later, when Chief Criminal Deputy Sheriff F. W. Howard and Deputy Jess Buckles were on a call to San Juan Capistrano, immediately caused them to stop and investigate.

The flashes were so regular, so true, that Howard and Buckles had it all figured out that the dope runners had landed. They started up the hill, guns in hand, toward the lights. Cautiously they crawled, for dope runners are wary sort of persons and the slightest sound might mean their getaway.

The officers even crawled the last 50 yards on their stomachs. Then raising up they lunged at two dark shadows. The shadows were two small 14 year old boys, who were whiling away the time before going to sleep by playing with a flashlight.

Instead of dope runners, they were just kids, guarding a lot of grain. They had selected a straw pile in which to stand duty.

Had the boys known how foolish the officers felt they probably wouldn't have been so frightened. Report of the investigation was not made at the sheriff's office.

Two will receive gold certificates, Irene Wycoff and Etta Launsbury.

The Edison senior boys played a league game with Lathrop. They won with a score of 10 to 3.

Lathrop Playground

The boys' elementary indoor team played the Edison boys on Monday and were defeated. They have been having bad luck all season but are not willing to give up yet.

Lathrop has been host to three croquet tournaments. Tuesday was elementary girls' singles, Wednesday was elementary boys' doubles, and Thursday was elementary girls' doubles.

The points have been more than piling up. There are several children ready for silver and gold certificates. There are some who will soon be ready for their playground monograms.

Lincoln Playgrounds

Lincoln challenges any playground to match its record. During the previous week it won six out of the eight croquet championships, won two league and three practice baseball games, and issued six silver and four gold certificates.

Lincoln playground led in money taken in through pageant ticket sales.

Lincoln's girls' indoor team challenges any or all girls' teams at the various playgrounds.

The elementary boys' baseball team established a city record when only 23 Edison boys went to bat against them Wednesday in seven innings. Youel and Partis allowed but one hit, Lincoln winning 10 to 0.

Al Cass and Bob Schwarm have won two doubles city titles and will be gunning for their third in paddle tennis.

The handwork is going along nicely. Everyone seems to be very enthusiastic on the pillow tops and paper belts. The junior high girls are working on the playground scrapbook.

Lowell Playground

At the Lowell playground assembly on Wednesday, silver certificates were presented to the following persons: Norma Area, Beryl Bates, Colleen Block, Neal Gammell, Eleanor Henry, Enola Lundack, Norma Lundack, Ralph Lambert, Helen Tart, Eugene Tart, Margaret Shane, Wesley Ewell, Sedalia Lundack, Irene Lundack. Colleen Block and Beryle Bates were presented with gold certificates. They were the first to win gold certificates at the Lowell playground.

Several of the girls are making nice pillow tops. They make their own designs in crayon and then embroider them in black outline stitch.

Roosevelt Playground

The Roosevelt Rough Riders defeated the Fremont team 14 to 3 in the league game. By doing so Roosevelt still holds first by winning four straight games in the junior playground league. Smoke Gregory struck out 11 batters to keep his average strikeouts to 12 a game.

—GEORGE DORSEY.

The Roosevelt playground won the first in the doubles and singles elementary girls croquet. Agness Iley and Lenor Eatella won the first in doubles and Patty Clark won the first in elementary singles.

LUCILLE KNOWLON.

Roosevelt won another victory over the Fremont team in the elementary indoor league by a score of 22 to 4. Roosevelt has won three games and lost only one.

Farm Centers Of Orange County To Meet August 15th

A meeting of the Farm center officers will be held on the night of August 15 at the American Legion hall, Orange. A questionnaire prepared by the Orange County Farm bureau was sent out to the Farm center officers, which will form the basis of the program.

The questionnaire deals with the problems and future plans of the district to which it was sent. There are 11 different Farm centers which will be represented.

In a letter sent by Roland D. Flaherty, secretary of the Farm bureau, to Farm center officers, along with the questionnaire, a survey of the principal crops was quoted, which shows that the major income in the county comes from oranges, lemons, walnuts, lima beans, avocados, dairy products, poultry, sugar beets, peppers, grain and cattle.

The letter stated that the major problems at this time center around water, taxation, public utility questions, agricultural education and fire control.

Supervisors Act On Protection Of Funds Of County

Decision was made by the board of supervisors yesterday to substitute a return of securities bond for the protection of securities from theft or loss in the office of the county treasurer, in place of the burglary and robbery policies that have been carried in the past.

It was pointed out that protection on approximately $300,000 worth of additional securities could be carried at the same cost as at present and that rate on burglary and robbery insurance was constantly increasing. The bond was placed with the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Maryland, through Swales and Farwell, but commissions are to be split at all times in the future with all insurance agents now carrying the burglary and robbery policies, in proportion to the amount they handled.

Is Bound Over On Booze Count

Following arraignment before Judge A. C. Eearley at La Habra yesterday, Francisco Marron was bound over to the superior court charged with violating his parole from the county jail, following his arrest Sunday by Constable William Tremaine on a possession charge.

Marron was arrested over a year ago for having operated a still in the La Habra Mexican camp and had served considerable time in the county jail, being out now on parole. A keg containing two gallons of whiskey was found in his possession where he was arrested. Tremaine said.

Belen Gonzalez was arrested with Marron and pleaded guilty yesterday in Judge Earley's court to a possession charge. He was fined $50.

Police News

Charged with being drunk, N. E. Jones, 53, of 122 Orange avenue, was arrested at First and French treets Monday night. He was lodged in the county jail.

J. B. Barker, 50, was arrested in the rear of 2435 Riverside drive early Monday night on a vagrancy charge. Police found him "camping" on the river bank, they reported.

W. A. Stump, of 378 South Orange avenue, reported the theft of his automobile Monday night from a place where he parked it on Third street between Birch and Ross streets.

Sleeper Answers Attack Of Opponent In Placentia

CANDIDATES IN TALKS BEFORE C. OF C. TUESDAY

PLACENTIA, Aug. 6.—Political talks enlivened the luncheon meeting of the Placentia Chamber of Commerce yesterday, with County Assessor James Sleeper and Hugh Miller, campaign manager for Leo Porter, candidate for sheriff, providing the fireworks.

Sleeper was the principal speaker of the day, answering statements of his opponent, George Montgomery of Anaheim, made at last week's meeting of the Placentia Chamber of Commerce. Miller, in a speech as brief as it was scathing, labeled as "criminal" a comment printed in last week's issue of the Placentia Courier to the effect that Leo Porter was reported to be spending $10,000 on his campaign.

Praises Candidate

Mrs. Belle Spangler, candidate for county tax collector, was praised in a short talk given by Mrs. J. V. Kelsey of Garden Grove, prominent P.-T. A. worker of Orange county.

"I have known Mrs. Spangler for a number of years, having worked with her on a number of committees, while I was county president of the P.-T. A. and she was county chairman of the supervised playground work," Mrs. Kelsey said.

"In every phase of her work she was very faithful and loyal and she will bring the same loyalty, the same faithfulness to the office of tax collector."

Mrs. Kelsey, as a member of the fair board, told something of the activities of the board.

Others present who spoke were Harley Brewer of Fullerton, candidate for constable of the Fullerton township; Mrs. Spangler, Leo Porter and Ralph McFadden, both candidates for sheriff; W. Birkel of Anaheim, who was introduced because he had the distinction of not being a candidate for anything.

Mrs. Kelsey-Sleeper Speaks

Sleeper, who was introduced by President A. S. Bradford, explained his reason for being there, and said, "Mr. Montgomery, to the best of my knowledge, has never been in my office; and yet he can tell me more about the business of the county assessor than I can after more than 20 years in the position. In answering Mr. Montgomery, I have prepared a speech based on concrete figures and not vague assertions."

"In replying to the talk made before your body last Tuesday by Mr. Montgomery, candidate for county assessor, I want to state that he made a great many vague assertions about the way I conduct the assessor's office. Why all these underhanded assertions? Why didn't he have his manager and advisor bring these matters before the board of equalization, which it was his duty to do, and insist that he subpoena these big interests before that board and show cause why their assessments should not be raised and equalized with other property? Why was it that no member of the late grand jury came before the board and asked to have the assessments of the big fellows raised? I can tell you why. Neither he nor the members of the late grand jury could show by the assessments that any big interests were favored by the assessments or in any other way. It begins to look to me as if some of the big interests are back of him and his manager and advisor to get me because they can not handle me.

$2,720,740 Value

"It was told around the north end of the county a few weeks ago that a certain oil tank farm near Cypress cost $13,000,000 and that I had assessed it for less than $3,000,000. I assessed this tank farm for $2,720,740, which was a just assessment and Mr. Montgomery's manager knows it. As a matter of fact I think that Mr. Montgomery and his manager and advisor are more interested in the vote of the taxpayer than they are in his financial welfare.

"Mr. Montgomery told you that the assessor's office is conducted in an inefficient manner. He cannot point to an assessor's office in this state that has a better set of records and maps than the assessor's office of this county. Ask the state board of equalization, the state controller or any government inheritance tax agent and they will verify my statement as they deal with all county assessors in the state. He told you of all the wrong things I have done in the assessor's office, but none of the good things as he was not looking for them. I will give you a few of the things I have done that are worth while to the taxpayer and which you should know about. When I became assessor of this county there were but three pieces of oil property assessed for as much as $100 per acre, some land with wells flowing 600 barrels per day assessed at $37 per acre. The same property today is assessed in the thousands of dollars per acre. He did not tell you that there was one oil company in the county which has averaged a tax for the past 10 years greater than the total paid by all the taxpayers of Orange county in 1910 the year before I became your assessor. This same company (Standard Oil company) has paid me for their mineral right tax in the past 10 years $5,108,533.70 and this does not include their real estate, wells, pipe lines, gasoline plants, service stations, shops and other equipment. He did not tell you that 10 of our largest oil companies paid in taxes in 1929 $1,210,686.75. He did not tell you that the Irvine company in 1910 paid a tax of $24,217.73 and in 1929 paid a tax of $205,938.72, they having sold off several thousand acres since 1910."

Sleeper was preceded by Hugh Miller, who said, "I have come here to undertake one of the most unpleasant tasks I have had to perform. Some time ago Henry Schmidt, of Buena Park, and Frank Rospaw, of Placentia, came to the office of Leo Porter, and said that if more campaign advertising did not come to their papers, they would start swinging for McFadden.

"They were told that Porter had no money for campaign advertising, and went away. Then in the August 1 issue of the Placentia Courier this statement appeared: 'There is a report that Leo Porter's office is spending $10,000 in the sheriff campaign. None for newspaper advertising. Just wait and see how this checks up when the votes are counted.' I brand this statement as criminal, for while I believe he is entitled to spend $800 on the campaign, he is not spending $10,000 nor has he it to spend. We submit the entire case to the people of Placentia, and we offer our candidate as a man and not as newspaper advertising."

James Tuffree, Ralph McFadden and Louis Jacobsen reported on the Associated Chamber of Commerce committee meeting in regard to the junior college survey, Harry Hale summing up the situation as follows: "Since the Placentia Chamber of Commerce kicked the junior college football into the Associated Chamber of Commerce, some four or five years ago, it has been continually kicked about and it about time they got hold of it and held it down. Fullerton and Santa Ana have nothing to lose except a few professors, for the junior colleges are using high school equipment and in any case what is best for the county as a whole should be considered."

BOARD REFUSES APPLICATION OF CLEANING FIRM

FULLERTON, Aug. 6. — New plans will be submitted by the Unique cleaners for a remodeled plant, it was decided last night, when the city council at a regular meeting at the city hall turned down the application of the cleaning establishment to erect a new plant at its present location at 122 East Amerige avenue after more than a dozen protests had been received from property owners asking the council to reject the application and order the plant to remove to another location.

The argument relative to the application started several weeks ago, when the Unique Cleaners, H. L. Dawson, manager, made application to erect a new building in order to conform to a new state cleaning law. At the same time property owners, headed by S. E. Reed, asked the council to order the dry cleaning establishment to be removed to some "industrial site" because the establishment was objectionable to the residential section.

Represented by Tom McFadden, attorney, Dawson asked the council to approve the application. The council replied that the city building code did not allow the erection of such a hazardous building in the present location. As a result the dry cleaner will submit plans for a remodeled building at the present location, all of which is in accordance with the city code provided the state fire marshal approves the plans. The council will consider the plans at the next regular meeting.

Bids were opened for a street roller, one and one-half ton truck and a "pick-up" auto for the street department. The bids were referred to the various departments to check up and report back at the next council meeting.

The assessment list for the Lansdowne Improvement district was presented for protests and with no protests made, was approved. The improvement consisted of street grading, olling, installing of curbs and sewer on Flower, Vine, Oak and Magnolia avenues. The tract is in the west end of the city limits, three miles from the center of town.

The council approved a request from Chief of Police J. M. Pearson for the placing of four "slow" signs at Harvard and Wilshire avenues.

Possibility that the city will cooperate with property owners in the widening and deepening of the barranca running through the western part of the city was announced following the receiving of a communication from W. M. Muckenthaler, property owner, requesting the assistance of the city. The barranca overflow in 1927 and flooded a greater part of the residential section from Richman to Nicholas avenue, although no serious damage was done. The city cannot do the work without the assistance and approval of the property owners as the barranca is private property, belonging to property owners, fronting on the barranca.

NEW GAS STATION FOR MIDWAY CITY

MIDWAY CITY, Aug. 6.—A new service station of tepee effect is being erected by Walter J. Hill on his property at the corner of Huntington Beach and Bolsa boulevards. The circular building with tower effect is to be exactly on the intersection and just north and west of the new stucco hotel which is rapidly assuming shape as the second story is nearing completion. The hotel will have eight rooms above and two rooms and two store rooms on the lower floor.

It is understood that the drive-in market which Hill is to put in will be built upon completion of the hotel, the same Long Beach contractor to be in charge of that building. The exact location for the market has not been decided as there are the two locations, one at the intersection of the Adams street cutoff and Bolsa boulevard, the other at the Adams street cutoff on the Huntington Beach boulevard, which seem to offer like locations for the new venture.

PHONE EQUIPMENT FOR SAN CLEMENTE

SAN CLEMENTE, Aug. 6.—The Southern California Telephone company through E. S. Morrow, district manager, announces that new dial central office equipment will be installed here at a cost of $4000. The new equipment will provide facilities for approximately 120 additional telephones, which will make the capacity of the San Clemente station 448 telephones.

Work on the installation in the Ed Bartlett building will start late in the fall. It is planned to have the job completed by the first of December.

The present central office equipment at San Clemente has a capacity of 328 telephones. This station was added to but a short time ago, it being the second addition made to the Spanish village office in about three years.

Mrs. Sarah Key, 100, has resided on the same farm near Beatrice, Neb., for 60 years.

WORK RUSHED ON DANA POINT HOTEL

DANA POINT, Aug. 6.—Pouring in the last of the concrete for the 200 feet runway tunnel at the new Dana Point Inn has been completed. The 100-foot shaft from the hilltop to the tunnel will be completed in about 10 days. J. M. Schuster, superintendent of construction on the building, states that as the shaft is but 9 by 12 feet, only 10 men can work on it. A larger crew will be put to work as soon as the shaft is completed.

The half million dollar inn will be completed next year, in time for summer travel. An outstanding feature of the hotel is the fact that every room but two will have ocean view. A 20-foot passenger elevator will carry guests from sea level to the fourth floor of the building. Construction is of steel, concrete and glass throughout.

250 AT O.E.S. CEREMONIES IN MASONIC HALL

BUENA PARK, Aug. 6.—The Buena Park Masonic temple was the scene of a delightful affair monday evening, when over 250 people, including visitors from all over the Southland, assembled for the official visit of Mrs. Myra Clara Moyse, worthy grand matron of the state, to the combined chapters of Brea, La Habra and Buena Park, with the local chapter as hostess. Walter Bradley, of Berkeley, worthy grand patron, also was a guest of honor.

The marshals of the three united chapters escorted the flag to its place in the east and Mrs. Clara Close, worthy matron of the Brea chapter, had charge of the escorting of the worthy matrons and worthy patrons, and Mrs. Ruth Jane Davis, worthy matron of the La Habra chapter, the escorting of the grand officers. Mrs. Zilmah Cummins, worthy matron of the Buena Park chapter, was in charge of the exemplification of the regular work.

Mrs. Cummins introduced Mrs. Moyse, who spoke briefly. Her gift from the combined chapters was a spray of flowers.

Ralph Cummins, worthy patron of the Buena Park chapter, introduced the worthy grand patron, and the presentation of the gift from the combined chapters was made by Claude Ridgeway, worthy patron of the La Habra chapter. The gift was a white kid case containing three gold coins. Charles E. Miller, worthy patron of the Brea chapter, also had a part in the ceremonies.

Mrs. Moyse wore a shoulder corsage of Cecil Brunner roses with silver ribbon streamers and Mrs. Cummins, Mrs. Close and Mrs. Davis wore shoulder corsages of roses in the pastel shades with silver ribbon.

The banquet room where the guests were invited for refreshments following the ceremonies, was transformed into a garden scene with crepe paper awnings of black and gold over the windows and umbrella plants in tile holders placed about the room. Zinnias in their myriads of bright colors were used in decorating the lodge rooms and as centerpieces on the tables in the banquet room.

The committee in charge of arrangements comprised Mrs. Martha Landall, Mrs. Geneva Greenawalt, Mrs. Margaret Robeson and Mrs. Emily Warren.

Among the guests present were past grand matron, Mrs. Stella Linscott and two deputy grand matrons from San Francisco, deputy grand matron from San Pedro, deputy grand matron, Mrs. Grace Gamble, of Artesia; grand warder and four other grand officers of the 1930 group, and the following matrons and patrons, Else Gligogly, of Orange; Rust Grey, of Anaheim; May Henry, of Garden Grove; Ida Clark, of Fullerton; Jennie Rowland, of Whittier, and Mary O'Brien of Covina.

SUBMIT SITES FOR LA HABRA CITY BUILDING

LA HABRA, Aug. 6.—Although the La Habra city council has virtually selected a site suitable for the erection of a fire hall on the Launer estate at the corner of Main street and Erna avenues, the members listened to a number of propositions last night. Members of the welfare committee of the Kiwanis club, composed of E. R. Berry, Ray Frantz, A. V. Dougless and others, suggested sites.

It was decided to adjourn the meeting until Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the city hall, at which time action will be taken on the actual selection of a site following a request from the committee at the last meeting that they be allowed a little time to secure a site and prices.

In the absence of Mayor L. E. Proud, who with his family is spending the week at Big Bear, the meeting was presided over by Councilman H. A. Robinson.

Members of the site committee are John Knudson, Albert Thurher and H. A. Randall. A definite decision on a site is expected Friday evening.

In making a selection for a fire hall to house the fire equipment already contracted by the city, the committee is bound by two limitations. First is the matter of price, as only $3500 has been set aside for the purchase of land and under the state law the city is resuired to pay cash for the property.

The second matter to consider is that the property must be a corner lot in order to use it to the best advantage in placing a city hall or other city buildings on the property.

Many of the propositions overlooked these requirements. Propositions submitted were the present city hall building and lot for $6000 by W. P. Mills, the house and lot of Louis Muchow on Central avenue with a year's option on a section of his orange grove for $6000 and a lot at the corner of Orange avenue and Erna street for $5,500.

A. J. Wilson submitted a lot on Central avenue in the Aldrich addition for $2500. Charles Brewster submitted a half acre on North Hiatt street with 103-foot frontage on Hiatt street, the central intersecting street of the town off Central avenue with a depth of 220 feet on Erna street. The property is improved with a story and a half house which the owner suggests could be used for a city hall. The price is $7,500 cash.

W. H. Wilber submitted a 50-foot lot on Central avenue in the Aldrich addition for $2500. E. H. Little offered frontage of three lots on West Central in the Little tract for $35 per front foot, or a total of $1750 per lot. An 82 1-2-foot lot at the corner of Central avenue and Lemon street was offered by C. C. Hamilton for $5000. A corner lot 100 by 140 feet on Central and Cypress streets was offered by Neal McEachran, of Bell, for $4000 cash. W. P. Mills submitted two lots on the corner of Main street and Second avenue for $1500 subject to street assessments.

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 6.—Reports, a discussion of finances and plans for the convention of delegates to the regional confernece formed most of the work coming before the local chapter of the American National Red Cross Tuesday at the August meeting.

Most detailed and comprehensive of the reports were those of Dana Lamb, chief life guard, who gave the history of work in salvaging an airplane several weeks agon and the methods pursued, with appreciation expressed for the cooperation of the first aid squad and the police with the beach guards. Another report listed those in the swimming and first aid classes. Two courses have been completed and a third is to be started August 11.

In a third report Mr. Lamb told of the beach organization which has been perfected. Aplication for charter has been made. Edward Fahey is president, and ten local seniors are enrolled. The report states:

The organization work of the local life guard system is now complete with 30 qualified members, whose duties are as follows: Children's guards, Lourella Marshall, Elizabeth Kane, Harriet Shattuck and Marjorie Burns; guards stationed at outlying beaches, Dell Schweitzer, Ed Hobart, Ralph Kennedy, Jack McFadden, John Marshall, William Shields, C. J. Hoffman and city guard Calhoun Beardsley; lokout men in charge of alarm system and life buoys, Bob Sneathen, Jeff Richards, Kimberlin Kane, Creed Watts, Vernon Comer, Clarence Kane and Bob Coleman; lifeboat men with available life boats, Curtis Burns, Freddie Schwankovsky, Graham Hudson and Sam Piety; substitutes for regular guards while performing rescue, Will Morgan, Jack Chambers and Donald Frank.

COUNCIL MODIFIES ACTION ON PAVING

PLACENTIA, Aug. 6.—Modifying its former action to include the south side of Chapman avenue from Murray street to Bradford avenue, and the east side of Bradford avenue to the school house in an improvement district, the city council of Placentia at the regular meeting Monday evening voted to include "that portion of Chapman avenue between Main street and Bradford avenue, and that portion on the east side of Bradford avenut between Chapman avenue and the school, and that for the purpose of constructing said sidewalks, there be acquired a five-foot strip along the aforesaid portion of Chapman avenue and a 10-foot strip along Bradford avenue."

Modification of the action was the result of the protests of property owners on Chapman avenue, who stated that taking a five-foot strip from their property would reduce the value of their property to a great extent, and that they would not only be forced to bear the expense of the sidewalk, but would have to tear down present retaining walls and copings and build new ones. Among the owners present were Grover Murdick, Mr. and Mrs. McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hochstein and Mrs. Sullivan.

Sun-glasses fitted with canvas nose-shields are now being worn by sun and sea bathers at some of the fashionable French resorts. They are intended to prevent freckles and to stop the nose from peeling.

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

CHAPTER 2

Peter replaced the overturned chair by the table. His movements were deliberate, purposely giving Mrs. Everett time to draw upon the reserves of strength which he had guessed lay behind her abandonment to hysteria.

When he turned, she was standing erect, shaking but composed. With a not unkindly hand on her shoulder, Peter pressed her gently into the chair, and with business-like precision drew up another on the opposite side of the table. Between them, inert and sinister, lay the pistol.

Julio, who had watched the scene with apparent indifference, sat stolidly in the corner, his broad shoulders hunched forward, his arms folded across his chest, his heavy-lidded black eyes staring into vacancy.

'You go to my car outside, and wait there," Peter ordered. "I want to talk with Mrs. Everett alone. But don't go any farther. Carter's there to keep an eye on you, and if you try to make a break, you'll find yourself in the hoosgow.. see?"

Julio's shoulders heaved in an immense shrug.

"I wait," he said, and without another glance at the woman in the chair, he lurched fro mthe room.

"Now, then," Peter said briskly, turning to Mrs. Everett. "You're up against it. And it's up to you to keep your head. This is the last time for quite a while that I can assure you that whatever you say won't be used against you."

"Who—who are you?"

Aline Everett was visibly gathering her forces. Gradually inteligence replaced the blank terror in the wide brown eyes fixed on Peter's face.

'I thought I told you. I'm Peter Piper of the Herald—"

"Oh! You're—"

"Yes, I'm just that—a newspaper reporter. What is life and death to you is just a story to me. Maybe that's all anything is—just a story. Maybe God is a good deal like a city editor—city editor of the Daily Universe. He doesn't make the news—He just reads the flimsies as they come in. And once in a while he yells out to an angel: 'Boy! Tell him to give the girl a break.'"

'But why—?"

Peter spread his hands helplessly, palm upward, on the table top.

"I don't know why, any more than you do. But here I am. Even if I'm a reporter, I haven't quite got over being a human being. And you're just part of the story to me, but you're a humen being too, in a hell of a jam." He suddenly laughed, an abrupt, embarrased laugh. Peter prided himself on being "hard boiled," and he always jeered at his own lapses into sentiment.

"Put it," he said harshly, with a cnange of tone which brought the brown eyes again to his face in startled attention, "that I want to stand in with you because I've stumbled on a hell of a big story, and got in on the ground floor. I can have all my lines laid before the other papers get their men on the job. And there's nothing so good as standing in solid with the defendant before the opposition gets started. Put it that way, if you want to."

Aline Everett's brows drew together in a puzzled frown.

"You might also consider," Peter went on after a brief pause, "that you're in for a lot of publicity anyway, and it might be useful to you to have a member of the press friendly. Mind you, that doesn't mean that I won't print every single thing that tells against you! Think it over."

"I am thinking. But I don't believe I want to put it that way. It's worse than you think. And there's nobody for me to turn to—nobody—" Aline's eyes dropped to the table and lingered with the horrified fascination on the pistol. A violent shudder shook her from head to foot. With an effort she clenched her chattering teeth nad forced her twitching muscles to be still.

"It's a nightmare! A nightmare. It couldn't have happened. I don't know how—"

The sound of heavy running footsteps checked her speech. In another instant a man had entered the room. The momentum of his entrance carried him half way across the open space before he brought himself up. He glanced briefly at Peter, dismissed him from consciousness, and riveted his gaze on Aline's face.

"Aline! What's the matter? Who are those people outside? And I saw the lights of another car coming up the driveway just as I got here."

"Max!" The single word, to Peter's ears, held an accent of infinite desolation. "When did you come?"

"Never mind that now. What's happened? Where's Marjorie?"

"Marjorie's—gone. And Mr. Mortison is—dead."

The sound of a heavy knock on the door frame almost obliterated the sighing whisper of the last word. The man addressed as Max wheeled sharply, facing the door.

"What do you want?" he said, challenging the intruder with an angry stare.

"Take it easy, folks. I want a lot. I want to know what all the shooting's about."

The voice, high pitched, with a nasal drawl, preceded the entrance of a tall, preposterously lank figure, whose bony wrists protruded from the too-short sleeves of his ready-made coat.

His head stooped forward from the shoulders, in the habit of men for whom ordinary doors are too low. An arched, bony nose was the most prominent feature in his sallow face—a nose set between small gray eyes, so light that they seemed almost as colorless as water.

"Hello, Everett. I b'lieve I've never met your lady. I'm Bill Simpson, ma'am—county clerk and county recorder and county auditor. I'm also county sheriff, and that's what I'm being now."

Simpson's eyes traveled enquiringly to Peter, but Peter for the moment said nothing.

"I hear that Mortison's been shot. Whose gun is that?"

With a startling change of tempo, Simpson dropped his habitual drawl. The last words came like the crack of a ship-lash.

For a moment no one moved. Aline had not risen from her chair. She sat perfectly still. Her expression was detached and remote, almost inattentive. She had passed the last limits of feeling and had reached a waste place beyond the rim of the world.

The figures in the lighted room looked curiously tiny, like men painted on a flat surface, very far off. Max turned to her with a beseeching look, but she made no response.

Peter watched the tiny globules of sweat appear on his forehead, like fog on a windshield. But his voice, when he turned to the sheriff, was composed.

"It is my gun," he said. He might have been claiming the ownership of a glove picked up in the road."

"Did you kill him?" the sheriff's voice drawled. There was something curiously soft and sympathetic in his tone.

Again Max turned to Aline. He was questioning her with his eyes, imploring her to give him some sign.

Aline's head jerked upward.

"Oh, no," she said like one startled out of a dream. "He didn't kill him. I did. Julio saw me with the gun."

"Aline!" The single word was a cry of agony.

The sheriff's eyes gleamed briefly, then fastened on the group by the table.

"So that's the way it was, "Why did you kill him, Mis' Everett?" The drawling voice was cold as the slow trickle of ice-water.

"I did it—for my sister." Aline stared straight before her. Her words came slowly. They fell like the footsteps of one who forces himself to walk on, when he is very tired, because a certain distance must be covered before he can rest.

"My sister Marjorie—has been staying with me — for several months."

The pale eyes of the sheriff traveled swiftly from one face to another. They were like narrow searchlights, Peter thought, picking out each object with pitiless intensity.

"Is she here now?" he asked.

"No, she left today. She left because—she told me—that Mr. Mortison had made love to her. He said they would be married afterwards—that it wouldn't make any difference. Then—today—he told her he never expected her to take his promise seriously—that he thought she knew—that is what men always say. I suppose I went out of my head with hate of the man who could do that—to my sister. So I took my husband's gun—and shot him."

"No, I wouldn't say you was crazy, Mis' Everett." The sheriff's eyes were like the gleaming points of icicles. "And where were you all this time, Mr. Everett? How come you weren't at the construction plant?" Again the words cracked out with explosive quickness.

Max Everett wrenched his eyes from his wife's face and sank heavily into a chair.

"My work was at a standstill, waiting for some machinery due from the east, so I came home." Everett's mind crept back, through infinite distance, to the sunshine of the morning, when he had seized with light-hearted eagerness on the unexpected holiday.

"All right. What then?" Again the sheriff's voice was very gentle.

"I got off the train at Hangtown, and walked out."

"The train gets in at three-fifty. You shoulda been home by five," Simpson suggested.

"I didn't come straight home. I walked up into the hills into a sheep herder's cabin in the canyon—the one they call Wild Hog Glory."

"Find him home?"

"No, as a matter of fact, I didn't."

"What did you want to go up there for?"

"Well, I—" For the first time Max hesitated. "I—I just went," he said confusedly.

"What for?" The narrow searchlights of Simpson's eyes played full on Everett's face. The words were less a question than a command.

"Can what I say be private between us?"

"That depends on what it is. I ain't makin' no promises. But you'd better tell what you went there for, and make it reasonable, because so far your alibi isn't worth a cocked hat. I don't know yet that you ain't an accessory to this murder."

'An alibi? I wasn't trying to make an alibi!" Peter saw a muscle at the back of Everett's jaw twitch spasmodically. Was that involuntary storm-signal evidence of anger—or anxiety?

"All right," the sheriff said noncommittally. "Why did you go to the sheep herder's cabin?"

"I went because, like a good many of the Basques around here, he makes wine. I wanted to get a bottle to bring home—to celebrate." Max showed no consciousness of the irony in that last incongruous word.

"So that's how it was," Simpson repeated. "But mightn't it have been some other way?" The nasal drawl became almost singing.

"Mightn't it have been that you'd heard gossip about your wife and Mortison, and come on a surprise visit to find out? Mightn't it have been that you came to the house, and when you didn't find your wife home, took your gun and went down to the lodge? Mightn't it have been that you found your wife and Mortison there together—or maybe you found him alone and taxed him with it and then shot him?

"Maybe Mrs. Everett came later, found the gun, and ran back to the house with it to put it away in its usual place, or maybe she was there right along and made off with it. You're no fool, Mr. Everett. You was scared into running away at first. But you know that would be as good as saying you done it, so you came back. I don't say that was it. I just say it might have been—and I don't know as I'd feel too hard on you if it was."

"That's—" Max half rose from his chair, then sank back. Again his eyes sought Aline's face in vain appeal.

Peter found himself mentally repeating the sheriff's words of a moment before. He had hoped for a dull-witted "hick" constable! but assuredly this man was no fool.

Suddenly the sheriff whirled and turned upon Peter the sharp directness of his narrow, transfixing eyes.

"Im ready for you now, young feller," he snapped. "Where do you come in on this?"

IMPROVEMENTS AUTHORIZED ON ORANGE STREET

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Almond avenue, which is being graded following the opening of the street from Main to Batavia, will be oiled and graveled, according to an order issued by the Orange city council at the regular meeting of the body yesterday afternoon.

Councilman L. H. Intorf brought the matter to the attention of council members and pointed out that as the soil was loose and sandy it would be very dusty during summer months and almost impassable after rains. Councilman C. E. Watson recommended that a thorough job of oiling and graveling be done. Approaches to the Santa Fe tracks are to be filled and rolled.

Intorf also called attention to the fact that there is no curbing or sidewalks and both should be put in as the street is used to a large extent by school children.

Following an informal discussion it was shown that a number of residents are planning to put sidewalks in shortly.

$75,000 STORM DRAIN PLANS ACCEPTED BY ORANGE COUNCIL; WORK TO START IMMEDIATELY

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Plans and specifications for a $75,000 storm drain were presented to the Orange city council yesterday and were accepted. A resolution of intention ordering work on the drain to follow the preliminary steps was accepted. A motion to accept the resolution of intention was made by Councilman G. A. Shoemaker and was seconded by Councilman Clyde Watson. Both resolutions received the unanimous support of council members all of whom were present. The plans were presented by City Engineer C. C. Bonebrake and the resolutions by City Attorney H. L. Dearing.

August 22 was the date set for hearing protests. The city council will meet at 1 p. m. at the city hall on this day.

Two other resolutions providing for easements across the property of the Orange County Fumigation company and that of Mrs. Emma Gardiner, were adopted. A resolution providing for an easement across the Pacific Electric property near the creek was secured a year ago when a storm drain was proposed at that time. The easement from the fumigation company provides that in case there is rainy weather the company's tents may be spread on city land to dry during the construction of the drain.

A communication from Mrs. Gardiner stated that unless the storm drain was installed within a year she would expect the city to quit claim the property.

W. G. Knox, of Santa Ana, appeared before the council in company with City Engineer C. C. Bonebrake when the plans were placed before the council for consideration. Knox stated that the city of Orange had ideal conditions for installing a storm drain.

The storm drain as planned will be 8600 feet long and will run along Lemon street from Walnut avenue to the Santiago creek. Laterals will serve the high school and the business section of the city.

The assessment district for financing the drain will include the entire city as the city as a whole will be benefitted by its installation. Bonds will be issued and will run nine years from July, 1932, or 11 years from the present time. Payments are to be made in 10 equal payments and the rate of interest will be 6 per cent.

Specifications provide for the installation of a conduit of concrete 24 inches in diameter at Walnut street, gradually increasing in size at each intersection until the maximum size of 48 inches is reached at Chapman avenue.

Along Pine avenue to Orange street and Chapman avenue the laterals will be 36 inches in diameter with two catch basins at each side of Orange street to take care of the water flowing down each side of Palm avenue and Chapman avenue.

Culverts are to be placed under the street intersections on Glassell street which will do away with the dips at Walnut, Sycamore, Palm, Maple, Palmyra, and La Veta avenues.

Mrs. Kruger Honor Guest At Social

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Lenore Kruger was the guest of honor recently at a lovely evening party given in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schohay in Tustin. Reports On Water Given At Council Meeting In Orange

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—While the month of July was the period in which the most water was consumed in this city this year there was one quarter of a million gallons more water consumed during July of 1929, according to figures given by Water superintendent W. J. Richardson at the council meeting yesterday. While days of extreme heat were experienced during July of this year, the heat was steadier in duration last year, Richardson says.

Last month, 35,785,000 gallons of water were used by residents of the city and in one day 1,500,000 gallons of water were used. This amount exceeded a record use of water used in one day of August, 1928.

INSPECTOR IS APPOINTED BY CITY COUNCIL

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Frank Dale was appointed to the office of building electrical and plumbing inspector at a meeting of the city council yesterday. Objection to Dale's appointment was made by Councilman G. A. Shoemaker, who declared that the appointment was out of harmony with conditions and that the burden of a salary of $150 had been put on the city.

"There is no use to pension a man through friendship," said Shoemaker.

Mayor Clement stated that the work of getting ready to work under the new building code required study and was more of a job than might seem.

Shoemaker declared that he was willing to withdraw his objections if it could be shown that Dale's qualifications exceeded those of the present inspector. Clement explained that Dale was a practical builder.

Councilmen Clement, Dierker, Watson and Intorf coted "yes" on Dale's appointment, with Shoemaker voting "no."

Dale's bond was set at $500 and his salary of $150 monthly was scheduled to begin August 1, 1930.

JOINT MEETING OF COUNCILS IS SET FOR AUG. 11

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—A friendly discussion of the discontinuance of the Pacific Electric passenger service between Orange and Santa Ana will be held by the city councils of the two cities Monday evening at the Santa Ana city hall, preceding a meeting of the council of Santa Ana. The meeting is scheduled for 6:30 o'clock.

The time and place for the conference was designated at the regular meeting of the Orange body yesterday afternoon, when a communication from the Pacific Electric asking for the privilege of discontinuance of the service was read by City Clerk Paul Clark. A communication from the railway commission which was the result of the Pacific Electric's application to that body to discontinue the service, was on file and attention of council members was called to its provisions, one of which was that the consent of both the Orange and the Santa Ana city councils must be obtained before the request could be granted.

In an informal discussion of the communication from the Pacific Electric, Mayor W. E. Clement stated that he believed a satisfactory schedule could be arranged to serve patrons on South Glassell street and also patrons of the carline who wished to go to the Santa Fe depot.

Clement said that the idea of a boulevard to replace the present car tracks between Santa Ana and Orange appealed to him personally. On the arrival of Mayor F. L. Purington of Santa Ana, Councilman Stanley Goode and Councilman J. L. McBride at the meeting, the interests of both cities were discussed. Mayor Clement explained the necessity of keeping the freight service of the railway in order to haul freight from the Anaconda Wire and Cable plant and the packing houses to the Southern Pacific tracks.

Mayor Purinton said that Santa Ana would never consent to abandonment of the passenger service unless the tracks were taken out. He stated that he thought two express cars and one motor to haul freight went to Orange from Santa Ana daily. Purinton suggested a joint meeting of the two councils with a representative of the Pacific Electric.

The fact that the Pacific Electric right-of-way between the two cities was mostly in the county and outside the city limits of both cities was brought to the attention of those present by Mayor Clement.

In their request to the council the railway company states that the service was being made at a loss of about $4,300 yearly and that as the Pacific Electric had recently purchased a two-thirds interest in the Motor Transit company a duplicate service was being made.

A great saving also would be made in the doing away with the interlocking plant on the Santa Fe tracks it was pointed out.

The proposed bus route as indicated on a map presented with the communication from the railway commission followed the present route of the Motor Tran-it buses.

It is understood that the 20-minute bus service would be provided and that the first bus would start from Santa Ana near 5 o'clock in the morning and from Orange about 6 o'clock running until nearly midnight.

SALARIES FOR POLICE RAISED AT BOARD MEET

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Salaries of police officers were raised yesterday when a request for such increases was presented to the city council.

The salary of Willett Winslow was raised from $150 to $160; that of Homer J. Davis, from $135 to $145; A. H. Westerman from $140 to $150; Joe Johnson, from $135 to $145 and A. M. Wunderlich from $135 to $145. Chief of Police Richards was allowed $40 a month for the use of his car. It was brought out that at present the city has but one car in the police department.

The increases were recommended by the police committee, L. H. Intorf and Clyde Watson. Intorf said towns of the same size were paying twice the salaries paid in Orange.

Chief of Police Richards presented figures from other cities showing salaries paid in the police department. Anaheim's monthly total was said to be $2400 against $1035 in Orange.

Councilman Shoemaker voted "no" when the resolution authorizing the advance in pay was presented, all other members of the council voting "yes."

Maybe the haberdashery shops are overlooking a good bet in advertising. Some of our favorite big leaguers, familiar enough in diamond toggery, but strangers to a lot of us as they stroll down Michigan boulevard or Woodward avenue, or lounge in the lobby of the Hollenden, the Chase or the Benjamin Franklin, would make fine "collar-ad" men. And some of them would not.

"Lefty" O'Doul of the Phillies hits .400 in the National league batting race and would rate 1000 per cent in a display of pulchritude in any man's league.

The honor of being the best-dressed man in baseball is vested on two big shots. One is William L. Veeck, president of the Cubs. The other is Billy Evans, general manager of the Indians. Evans several years ago relinquished his title of best-dressed umpire to compete in the unlimited division.

Some may have harbored the belief that Charles Arthur Shires is baseball's best-dressed performer. Art, however, is merely the most-dressed.

In spite of the fact that he spends $90 for sport suits and runs around bare-headed, Mickey Cochrane's ears won't stay back. And "Lefty" Grove, who wears flashy suits and neckties and carries a comb, fails to create any extra heart beats because of the cigar he chews continuously away from the park.

DISSENSION IN YANKEE DAVIS CUP TEAM OVER APPOINTMENT OF BILL TILDEN IS REPORTED

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Some of those who have been riding hard over American Davis cup affairs for several seasons are liable to be abruptly unseated as a result of developments in connection with the recent challenge round with France, it was learned today, following the return of the defeated and none-too-harmonious American forces. The apointment of William T. Tilden to one of the singles positions for the challenge round seems to have irked not only the United States Lawn Tennis association but some of Tilden's teammates as well.

The latter probably resent the last minute appointment because it forced them into a negative position after they had carried the burden of small-time play through the preliminary rounds. As for the tennis association, the mere mention of Mr. Tilden in any connection usually is enough to cause it to irk right in your face.

Subtle Discord Noted

Anyhow, a subtle undercurrent of discord was noted among the Americans when they returned yesterday and, when I asked an official whether a change in the administrative side of Davis cup play was possible next year, he said it was more than that. He said it "was very probable."

Another contemplated change, I was given to understand, would see George Lott paired with John Van Ryn for the doubles, thus breaking up the two-time Wimbledon championship combination of Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison.

The latter, it seemed, had fallen off so badly in his play, following his Wimbledon victory over Cochet, that there had been some talk of supplanting him with Lott before the challenge round began. In any case, Allison was strictly sub-normal against the French according to his own teammates, and is now talking of retirement from international tennis.

Three Men Picked Team

The naming of the team for 1930 was left solely in the hands of three men, Fitz Eugene Dixon, the team captain; Joseph B. Wear and Holcombe Ward, and of the three, only Mr. Dixon seems to have pleased everybody. Mr. Dixon, it appears, is like that. If there are to be administrative changes, it is highly unlikely that he will be affected, as for Messrs. Ward and Wear, it seems to be felt that their insistence on Tilden's participation,

REJUVENATION

It pleased me keenly the other day to read the headline, "Hellmann's hit Wins for Reds." Detroit shipped him away last year as a decadent bit of baseball freight. With Dan Howley cheering him on, the Hellmann has been slapping baseballs with unfeeling abandon.

On the same day, another headline took my fancy. It announced that the Braves had just won another ball game, thanks to the rude way George Sisler had treated one of the visiting pitcher. It gave me a picture of George, with his failing eyes,

De Hate, Macias End Training

STAR WELTERS BOX TOMORROW AT DELHI CLUB

When two "wild men" are thrown into the same ring for ten ruonds almost anything is likely to happen, and so the Orange County Athletic club may sound like a shooting gallery tomorrow night when Paul De Hate and "Wild Man" Macias start slinging leather in their ten-round main event.

Long known as one of the roughest, toughest "two-gun" fighters in Southern California, Macias will encounter a battler of exactly the same strain when he runs afoul of the Compton welterweight. That is why the bout appears so attractive on its surface.

De Hate has never taken a backward step in any of his bouts, and he has fought some of the ranking welters of the day. He was at his peak a year or so ago when a torn jaw ligament put him on the sidelines. At the time he was a main-eventer at the Olympic, Hollywood, Wilmington and San Diego, a fighter of the "Goldie" Hess style who always took a punch to strike a harder one.

Works in Films

Doctors warned him that he must quit the ring until his jaw healed and so De Hate took his handsome little son and went to work in the movies. The tot became a star in his own right and De Hate made up his mind never to pull on another glove but eventually the call was too loud, and De Hate answered.

It is understood his Delhi engagement in the first of a series of "tuneup" contests by which the hard-hitting Compton kid expects to work his way back into the Olympic and other uptown rings.

Record and reputation mean a lot in boxing and already De Hate has been made a heavy favorite to lace Macias. The odds are hardly justified because Macias has kept himself in good condition by hard work whereas De Hate will be starting for the first time ni a year and his timing and judgment of distance are sure to be off some. Macias has been knocked out but once and while he has never opposed fighters of De Hate's ability before, he looks like an even bet in every respect.

Macias Ends Training

Macias took a light workout yesterday, then announced he was going to rest until post-time. His last start away from home was in Ventura where he knocked out Matt Codan, well known Los Angeles welter, after putting Codan on the /oor 18 times in four rounds.

Blocks of seats will be sent to virtually every city in Orange county.

MAJOR-MINOR LEAGUE DRAFT WAR IS OPENED

BY DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—With the decision of the American association, Pacific Coast and International leagues to ignore the draft ultimatum of the majors, baseball men today prepared for open warfare between the Class AA organizations and the two major leagues.

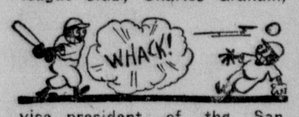

Representatives of the three Class AA leagues met here yesterday and went on record as refusing to conform to the universal draft, thus defying the major league threat to sever all player relations with leagues not accepting the draft before Dec. 1, 1930.

Although refusing to announce their plans for fighting the major league boycott, under which the big leagues would refuse to buy, sell, trade and transfer players to non draft circuits, Class AA leagues indicated that they would act in harmony and planned to seek the support of other minor leagues in their fight.

A committee of three, Walter E. Hapgood, general manager of the Montreal International league club; Charles Graham, vice president of the San Francisco Pacific Coast league club and Oscar Smith, president of the Toledo American association club, was appointed to make recommendations for a common policy in regard to the draft and other problems affecting relations between the majors and minor leagues.

The committee will report at a special conference in Montreal during the first week in December, immediately after the threatend boycott will beome effective.

By ignoring the draft ultimatum the minor leagues have put the issue squarely up to the major leagues. The Class AA organizations declared they were within their rights in refusing to accept the draft and said the threatened major league boycott would be a direct violation of the 1921 national agreement, in which leagues opposed to the draft were granted exemption from draft provisions.

Since that time the Class AA leagues agreed to a modified draft by which major leagues could draft players released to the non-selective leagues. The majors have made many efforts to make the draft universal but the three Class AA leagues and the Western and Three Eye leagues have rejected all proposals for a change in the agrement.

Anaheim 10, Whittier 1.
Olive 5, La Habra 4.
Huntington Beach 7, Fullerton 2.
Long Beach 4, Garden Grove 1 (first game.)
Garden Grove 4, Long Beach 3 (second game.)

Friday's Schedule

La Habra at Santa Ana; Anaheim at Huntington Beach; Olive at Whittier; Garden Grove at Fullerton; Orange at Long Beach.

So near and yet so far from that old tape, Santa Ana today was exactly one and one-half games to the good over the only other contenders for the second half championship of the National Night Baseball league—La Habra and Anaheim.

La Habra lost a full game to the Stars when it was defeated by Olive last night, 5 too 4.

Anaheim easily defeated Whittier, 10 to 1.

Santa Ana has four more games to play, three of 'em at hoome. La Habra and Anaheim both have three too go.

The Stars meet La Habra here Friday. Tickets went on sale today for this "gigantic." Whitties invades the Bowl next Tuesday. A week from Friday Santa Ana goes to Long Beach. After that Santa Ana must play a posotponed contest with Orange.

La Habra faces Santa Ana here Friday, Anaheim at Anaheim Tuesday and Garden Grove at La Habra Friday week.

Anaheim meets Huntington Beach at Huntington Beach Friday, La Habra at Anaheim Tuesday and Fullerton at Fullerton Friday week.

Anaheim undoubtedly has the better of the schedule, Huntington Beach and Fullerton being opponents of the easiest sort.

OLIVE HANDS LA HABRA 5-4 TRIMMING

Olive jolted La Habra's championship aspirations by defeating the Violet Rays 5 to 4 at La Habra.

The Packers made their hits off Chico Sabella count for runs in the early innings, Hatfield hit a homer back of Thomas' single in the first inning for two tallies. Turry was safe on an error in the second. He was forced by Sweet who scored on Heman's double. Heman then rang the bell on Thomas' double. The fifth, last and winning Olive run was made in the fifth when Griffith and Hatfield singled and Horn was safe on Wilkinson's error on Horn's grounder, Griffith scoring.

La Habra got two in the fourth when Johnson got a life on Griffith's error, Norton singled and Pancho tripled. The Violet Rays got a couple more but lost a chance to tie the score in the eighth. Rady led off with a double but was out stealing third. Johnson singled and North blasted a home run.

Heman struck out 12. Sabella whiffed 11.

The score.

The first half champions went completely to pieces in later innings, the Valencias pounding Lloyd Johnson to all parts of the park while Al Bushman was setting his opposition down in one-two-three order.

Bill Bushman, Anaheim catcher, sufered a severe cut over his left eye when accidentally hit by a bat in the hands of Hill of Whittier.

PIPING 'EM OFF

Bill Hunter, Santa Ana third baseman, was the goat and then the hero of Orange's fighting finish When he let Bell's snap throw to third get away from him he gave the Orangemen a toehold. A minute later he broke the back of the rally by picking up Pargee's torrid drive down the third base line and throwing perfectly to "Eeny" Wilcox at the plate for a forceout.

Mearl Youel, Santa Ana pitcher for Orange, showed the Stars as much "swift" as they have looked at this season. The practice won't hurt either, with Chico Sabella firing at 'em Friday night.

* * *

Randolph Bell had a busy night in left field. He caught six flys, two of them long fouls. He almost captured Harv Leichtfuss' triple, too, but that one just grazed his fingertips.

Santa Ana now meets La Habra, Whittier and Long Beach, three "hot shots," in rapid succession. Herb Salveson's boys also have a postponed game to play in the Bowl with Orange. This will not be run off unless it has a bearing on the championship.

Orange couldn't rustle a team for two of its games this half but it had a whole bunch of reserves last night. The league-leader never has a friend.

Harms, Orange's midfielder, is plenty fast. He came in nicely to catch Leavitt Daley's Texas leaguer in the eighth. A lot of outfielders

TAILEND TEAM GIVES LEADERS STRUGGLE, 5-3

..Soaring approximately two full games ahead of their field in the thrill-packed National Night league baseball steeplechase, Santa Ana's Stars were a happy set today—but they didn't care for any more of those "breathers" like Orange, thank you!

While Olive was upsetting La Habra, 5-4, making it pretty for Santa Ana, the Stars were put to one of their hardest tests to win from the lowly Orange tailenders, 5 to 3, at Orange.

Primed for their best fight of the season, the Orangemen actually extended the proud league-leaders to their utmost and "dug in" for a ninth inning rally that chilled the Stars to the marrow. They slipped one run across, had one thrown out at the plate and still had the tying margin on base when Joe Cornelius finally retired the side on a forceout at second base.

Orange Proves Troublesome

The Stars gave Joe Cornelius five runs to work on and their generosity was well received because the "iron man" was well fagged out and needed all the help he could muster.

It started out like a pitcher's battle, both Cornelius and Mearl Youel, transplanted Santa Anan, keeping well ahead of the swingers until the fourth when Youel weakened momentarily because he couldn't control his fast ones and had to slow up to put 'em over.

"Memphy" Hill gave the Stars their first run. He was first up in the fourth and beat out a bunt down the third base line. Richards made a nice play to stop the ball but was out of position to get away a quick throw.

Merrill promptly sacrificed, Youel to Suddaby, putting Hill safely on second.

Bell's Hit Scores Hill

Wayne Nelson dumped a single back of third base, sending Hill to third, and went to second himself without a play being made on him.

Randolph then singled infield, Hill scoring. The hit was a high bounder to Leichtfuss and the Orange shortstop had no chance to throw anyone out. Cole popped out and Hunter forced Bell at second.

watch. His kindly face always seems a bit tired.

The reddest neck in baseball belongs to Arthur C. Vance, with "Pinkie" Hargrave, Detroit catcher, occupying the place position. Ol' Dazz looks like a ball player should look when dressed up.

George Earnshaw has a corner on all the tricks of collegiate dress. Bill Walker looks like a Northwestern sophomore out on a date. Neither wear garters.

The southpaw pitching profession points with pride to Herb Pennock and Earl Whitehill as models of sartoral elegance.

Jack Quinn and Burleigh Grimes could pass for two old codgers in town for a Saturday night of revelry. Both wear their hair pasted down. And their shoes squeak.

Appearances are deceitful in the case of Walter Johnson, who looks like a Decatur groceryman. And "Pie" Traynor does not give out transfers, even though he resembles a street car conductor.

Curly-haired, well-groomed, prosperous-looking "Bucky" Harris might be mistaken for a bond salesman. His favorite pastime is shaking dice with the girls at the hotel cigar counters.

Charlie Grimm is good looking, pleasant, affable, smiling and what a dresser. He plays several musical instruments, in addition to first base.

You can make no mistake about the huge fellow whose expensive clothes fit his barrel-body perfectly. He is Babe Ruth, the "big batter and egg man."

SCRAP IRON CLOCK

STARS GET SCARE BUT BEAT ORANGE

Bill," Hunter sprinted clear to third from where he scored when Wilcox hit the first ball pitched him to right for another single. Cornelius sacrificed Wilcox to second and was safe himself when Thiery's throw to first hit him in the back. Youel then cut loose with a series of wild pitches that scored Wilcox and put Cornelius on third. Still another wild pitch sent Cornelius scuttling for the plate but Thiery made a quick recovery off the backscreen and tossed him out, Youel covering the pan.

Cornelius had allowed only two hits going into the seventh when Middlebrook started Orange's first real rally with an infield single. "Hen" Thiery forced him at second, Cornelius to Daley, but Harvey Leichtfuss boomed a long line drive over Bell in left field that easily scored Thiery. Leichtfuss' smash was well ticketed and would have been a home run had it not bounded into a dirt mound that stopped its flight abruptly. Leichtfuss immediately scored on a short passed ball, however.

Orange Rally Falls Short

That left the count 5-2, and thus it remained until the hectic ninth when Orange made its dramatic gesture for everlasting fame in the National Night league. Middlebrook led off with a single to right and "Hen" Thiery socked a single to left. After that things popped everywhere, and before anyone realized it Orange was in the thick of the ball game.

Taking Thiery's single on the first hop, Bell tossed to Hunter at third base ahead of Middlebrook. The ball caromed right out of Hunter's glove and rolled a dozen yards or so before the Santa Ana infielder could overtake it. Middlebrook made a break for third and Hunter made a play for him, but his toss got away from Wilcox who covered the sack and Middlebrook continued right on home and Thiery pulled up at third.

Cornelius then fanned Leichtfuss, one of the real Orange threats, for the first out of the inning.

Hunter Makes Nice Play

Pargee, who had replaced Ed Thiery in the Orange outfield earlier in the affray, was the next batsman. He smashed a terrific ground ball down the third base line. It looked every ince a two-base hit but Hunter, who had muffed a fearfully easy chance but a moment before, made a spectacularstop of it and easily threw Thiery out at the plate with a perfect peg to Wilcox.

Cornelius put the tying run on base with a walk to "Whitey" Edwards, batting for Suddaby, but Harms brough the contest to a close by forcing Edwards at second, Hill to Daley, on a nice play by the Star shortstop.

PIPING 'EM OFF

never would have touched it.

"Memphy" Hill said he would have hung up his glove for good had he booted Harms' grounder that ended the game. It was a tough chance at that, but the hustling little shortstop came up with a nice play in the clinch.

Bill Middlebrook slapped three singles to lead the hitting parade for both sides. Two of them were hard hit balls to right field, the other a high hopper which he just beat out.

"Rosy" Merrill had to work late and arrived at the park just in time to take his regular turn at bat in the first inning. He did not have the benefit of hitting practice and went without a blow for the first time in weeks. "Rosy" has averaged three swats a game for seven games.

Despite the unalluring prospect of watching a league-leader spank a tailender, the little Orange park was pretty well filled. Most of the spectators were Santa Anans, however.

Reserved seat tickets for the Santa Ana-La Habra scrimmage here went on sale today at the El Corral service station, Third and Birch streets, and at Baker's Bakery, 214 West Fourth street.

The sudden death of his sister, Elizabeth, a teacher at Roosevelt school in Santa Ana, prevented Kenny Walker from taking his scheduled place on the mound for Orange.

Santa Ana has been figuring its postponed game with Orange all the same as won. Doubtless this opinion has been reversed now. The "Fourth of July" affair now looms as a very important one to the Stars' status.

CLAIM DISSENTION ON DAVIS CUP TEAM

even in the face of the man's expressed disinclination, was contrary to the wishes of official tennis in this country.

As far as I can find out, official tennis in this country has arrived at the conclusion that it cannot win the Davis cup with Mr. Tilden and, therefore, would much prefer to lose it without him.

Much capital, for instance, has been made of the fact that Louis B. Dailey, president of the U. S. L. T. A., did not remain abroad for the challenge round, but returned to America, presumably on business.

Why He Returned

It is known that his return was not prompted by official differences with the selection committee; in fact, it has been pretty well established that he had no differences of any kind with the committee. But, at the same time, it is hinted that Mr. Dailey departed in some haste because he sensed that Mr. Tilden was to be named for the team and didn't care to be present when his worst fears were to be confirmed.

Thus, it would seem, a fresh chapter in the eternal vendetta between Tilden and the tennis association was written in the recent challenge round. It probably will be the last. Tilden, they admit, played inspired tennis in winning the Wimbledon championship, just as he did in victory over Borotra and in defeat before Cochet in the challenge round. But he never was a docile man, from their viewpoint, and they have no reason to believe that he ever will be, so it is not likely that he will be asked to play Davis cup tennis hereafter nor is it probably that the men who asked him to play will be in a position to repeat their offer.

It was quite apparent yesterday that, if the association never sees Mr. Tilden again, it will be strictly premature.

LA HARBA DEFEATED BY OLIVE PACKERS

This occurred in the eighth inning. Ochoa then went to the mound and Al Bushman took his brother's station behind the plate.

The Valencias made three in the fifth, one of them a homer by Al Bushman. They got a couple more in the sixth on Bill Bushman's singles and Schuchardt's home run, and five in the ninth on four hits, three walks and a sacrifice. The score:

Anaheim 000 032 005	10	14	0
Whittier 100 000 000	1	2	4

Batteries: Anaheim—A. Bushman, Ochoa and B. Bushman and A. Bushman; Whittier—Johnson and Rasmussen, Phelan.

GARDEN GROVE, LONG BEACH SPLIT TWO GAMES

Garden Grove and Long Beach divided two five-inning games at Long Beach, the Acorns getting the first one, 4 to 1, and the Peppers taking the second, 4 to 3.

Home runs played an important part in the opener, Maness and Davis hitting them for Long Beach and Hapes for Long Beach.

Ed Banta, Santa Ana "B" league pitcher, worked the afterpiece for the Peppers. Long Beach got all of its runs in the fourth when Ballard and Maness singled, and Landreth doubled, coming on home when Speed let the ball go through him.

Garden Grove got its winning runs in the fourth on Hapes' walk, Natland's safe fielder's choice and singles by Bowe, Banta, Heard and Fulsom.

(First Game)

Garden Grove 000 10	1	3	2
Long Beach 012 1x	4	5	1

Batteries: Garden Grove—Morrill and Hapes; Long Beach—Sheek and Maness.

Long Beach 000 30	3	5	1
Garden Grove 010 3x	4	6	2

Batteries: Long Beach—Sheek, Downer and Maness; Garden Grove—Banta and Hapes.

HUNTINGTON BEACH WINS FROM FULLERTON

Huntington Beachdefeated Fullerton. Henius hit a home run for the losers. The score:

Huntington Beach 7	10	2
Fullerton 2	6	5

Batteries: Huntington Beach—Morning and Geshert; Fullerton—Willhite and Lemon.

REFORESTATION

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 6.—Noble fir trees, noted for their peculiar sheen and blue-green color of the needles, are being selected in the Cascade National Forest for planting in Palo Alto, Calif., by Henry Stevenson, a resident of that city.

Approximately 500 trees are being taken from 18 to 30 inches in height. The trees were purchased here and are being removed under direction of Smith Taylor of the McKenzie Ranger Station.

It is estimated that 4000 persons were executed with the guillotine during the French revolution.

FIRE MARSHAL FOR COUNTY SUGGESTED

John Luxembourger, chief of the Santa Ana fire department, and W. B. Potter, of Fullerton, appeared before the board of supervisors yesterday and suggested the appointment of a county fire marshal to have jurisdiction in all outside territory. They advised that there was a need for such authority in combatting incendiary fires and cleaning up fire hazards.

The board advised the men, who represented the Orange County Firemen's association in the matter, that the recently appointed state ranger, Joe Sherman, was to co-operate in this regard and that they would find out how far the state intended to go in these matters. The committee also was referred to the district attorney for a legal opinion as to how the marshal would be paid and what authority he would have.

COUNTY VALUE IS PLACED AT $177,456,630

The total assessed valuation of Orange county for the year 1930-1931, exclusive of intangibles, is $177,456,630, according to a statement made by County Auditor W. C. Jerome to the board of supervisors yesterday afternoon. This is $3,464,595 more than the official figure for last year and shows a healthy increase in county valuations despite a decrease in valuations of oil properties.

The difference of $7,250,935 between the figure reported by the auditor and that announced on July 8 by County Assessor James Sleeper is accounted for largely by the fact that intangibles are not included in the figure submitted by Jerome, while they were included in Sleeper's statement. Part of the difference is due to duplications and errors that are weeded out in the auditor's office, it is stated. The segregation of intangibles has not been completed by the auditor's office, where work is being rushed on this phase of the statement.

The statement also shows that valuations in the 13 cities of the county have increased over $500,000, the valuation being $76,843,845 this year, as compared to $76,284,010 last year.

The figures submitted to the supervisors will be used in determining the tax rate that is to apply this year and the supervisors are working on the budget estimates which were submitted two weeks ago, in an effort to ascertain the least amount of money that will have to be raised to finance county government property.

The valuation of the district outside the incorporated cities, as comprised in the four road districts, reaches a figure of $100,612,785. This is itemized as follows: Second road district, $23,303,385; third road district, $44,913,445; fourth road district, $9,679,000, and fifth road district, $22,716,955.

In the city valuations Santa Ana maintains its rank as first with a valuation of $21,982,015, but Huntington Beach, with a material decrease from last year, drops from second to third place. Second place this year goes to Fullerton, which was third last year. Other rankings are the same as last year and are as follows: Fourth, Anaheim; fifth, Newport Beach; sixth, Orange; seventh, Laguna Beach; eighth, Seal Beach; ninth, San Clemente; tenth, Brea; eleventh, La Habra; twelfth, Tustin, and thirteenth, Placentia.

The valuations for the two years were as follows:

1930-31. City.	1929-30.
$ 8,188,260 Anaheim	$ 8,112,345
1,373,575 Brea	1,378,060
12,666,140 Fullerton ...	12,450,310
11,381,810 Hunt'g'n B...	12,638,030
3,346,045 Laguna Bch.	3,055,275
1,066,720 La Habra....	1,031,195
6,342,830 Newport Bch	6,503,580
5,922,695 Orange	5,683,025
467,820 Placentia ...	457,845
1,617,550 San Clemente	1,480,070
21,982,015 Santa Ana..	21,051,600
1,881,585 Seal Beach...	1,879,775
606,800 Tustin	562,900
$76,843,845 Total	$76,284,010

The tax rate last year was $1.45 per $100 assessed valuation inside cities and $1.85 outside cities. The additional 40 cents in the outside territory was for the general road fund.

CONTROLLER COMPUTES COST OF MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENTS

Orange had the smallest per capita cost of municipal government among the cities of Santa Ana, Fullerton, Anaheim and Orange during 1929, it was reported here in a statement from Ray L. Riley, state controller, who computed the figures from the census returns.

Anaheim had the highest per capita figure, with $41.31, Santa Ana was next highest with $32.76, Fullerton was third with $30.28 and Orange lowest with $25.46. The state official took into consideration total payments for all governmental functions in 1929, including general government, protection to persons and property, health, sanitation, highways, charities and corrections, education, recreation, public service enterprises, and redemption of and interest on bonds.

The total payments for the cities were Santa Ana, $993,822.02; Anaheim, $454,371.99; Fullerton, $328,877.43 and Orange, $205,345.41.

LAGUNA BEACH ARTISTS NAME HEADS AUG. 11

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 6.—William W. Riddell, recently re-signed member of the city council, will head the Laguna Beach Art association if the nominations returned by the nomination committee triumph at the election which is to be held the evening of August 11.

In the annual election of officers, interest centers chiefly in the selection of one to take the place of the late Anna A. Hills. Though Frank W. Cuprien was also suggested, he has been placed on the ticket for the place of vice president. Others named are John Hinchman as second vice president, Alice Parker as treasurer, Ida Randall Bolles as corresponding secretary, Maud Robertson as recording secretary. On the board of directors, Elanor Colburn, William A. Griffith and Bruce V. Crandall have been selected by the committee. The latter is made up of Joseph Kleitsch, Virginia Woolley and Mrs. A. B. Marshall.

Mr. Riddell is an artist and proprietor and manager of la Casa del Camino, a hotel in the Arch Beach section of the city. Mr. Cuprien has in the past headed the art association and is a close friend of Mr. Riddell. Bruce V. Crandall, named for the board of directors, is a motor boat manufacturer with his plant in Newport Beach. Mr. Griffith, selected for the board of directors, is vice president who has been in charge of the association since the death of Miss Hills.

It is not anticipated that there will be any serious objection to those selected by the nominating committee as the affairs of the association have been harmonious and elections usually following the list of nominations.

LASSO MUSTARD

SANTA ROSA, Calif., Aug. 6.—When you can't cut the mustard—lasso it! Supervisor Tom Ferguson noticed a mustard tree, or bush, or shrub, or whatever it is mustard grows on, spouting out of the coping on the courthouse here. After a long discussion about harvesting it, one of the employes got a rope, made a lariat out of it, and neatly pulled the mustard plant from its lofty perch.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Aug. 6—Several cars of equipment for the Ortega road project were unloaded yesterday. Ben Wells, general superintendent for the contracting company stated that eight points on the road, beyond the Clarence Brown place, will be worked over by steam shovels, to take out the curves.

MOON-EYE FISH RARE

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Aug. 6.—(UP)—The moon-eye, a species of fish once caught in abundance in waters here, is now so rare that it took a host of fish experts of the county to identify a specimen recently angled here.

A metal found in South-West Africa, known as zinc-blende, produces a bright light when struck or rubbed, even under water.

SUN CAN'T PEEK UNDER THIS

You can't stop the sun from shining, but you can do the next best thing by erecting a street awning to protect shoppers from Old Sol's scorching rays. A business man's association in a certain Philadelphia community hit on this novel idea, pictured below, to shade their street, and shoppers have been flocking their way ever since.

TWO EXCHANGE CLUBS JOIN IN MEETING HERE

At a joint meeting of the Santa Ana and Newport Beach Exchange clubs in the Santa Ana cafe yesterday noon those present were addressed by Roscoe A. Goodcell, public service manager for the Automobile club of Southern California. Goodcell explained the proposed international highway which would link the Pacific coast highway in the United States with roads through Canada and Alaska on the north and through Mexico and South America.

Goodcell related the story of the Auto club's expedition last spring on which a trail was blazed through Mexico on the proposed road as far as Mexico City. Governors of Mexican states pledged co-operation in the project, the speaker stated. He also said that the British government will provide funds for the road through Canada and that the United States will finance the building of the road through Alaska.

Carl Stein and Dr. Cassius Paul were in charge of the program, which included outstanding entertainment provided by Miss Louise McCain, who was warmly applauded for her eccentric tap dances and soft shoes dances, in one of which she provided her own music on the harmonica.

The Santa Ana club challenged the Newport Beach club to a miniature golf match. No action was taken yesterday in regard to the challenge.

The total length of Broadway within the limits of Greater New York is fifteen and one-half miles.

BOLSA

BOLSA, Aug. 6.—Gus Ward and Bud Justice returned home Monday from the Santa Maria mountains, where they hunted deer. One fine buck was killed but on account of the hot weather the meat did not keep long enough to bring home.

The water level in Bolsa district fell below 40 feet Monday, leaving practically every well here dry as the 40 foot level is the one which is in general use for pumps.

COUNTY CLERK PREPARES WAY FOR PRIMARIES

Preparations are being made today by a large crew of workers under the direction of County Clerk J. M. Backs for mailing out sample ballots, information concerning candidates on the state tickets and notification of the polling place to the 48,937 registered voters in the county who are entitled to vote at the primary election on August 26. This material, which constitutes a bulk almost unimaginable to persons who are not familiar with it, is to be sent through the mails commencing August 16 and the mailing must be completed by August 21, according to state law.

One entire corner of a room in the basement of the court house is stacked high with 287 bundles comprising 47,000 books of 104 pages each, containing information concerning the candidates for state offices which is required to be furnished to all voters. This booklet lists all candidates for the various parties, and contains their statements and lists of sponsors. An additional 2000 books has been ordered from Sacramento by County Clerk Backs to provide a sufficient quantity to furnish each registered voter with a copy.

The task of getting the sample ballots properly alloted according to district and political party and of getting the location of the polling place for each voter in the county is a huge task, requiring close supervision and efficient work.

One crew of workers is now engaged in addressing the envelopes which are to contain all this information. The sample ballots are being printed and will be ready within the next few days.

In addition to this great mass of information that must be sent to every voter, there are seven cases of election supplies which Backs must distribute to the 189 election boards.

DROWNS AFTER PULLING YOUNG LAD FROM SEA

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 6.—Sherwood Peak, 38, was drowned in Coast Royal, two miles south of this city, at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon after saving Frank Hartman, 8, from drowning when the latter fell from Table Rock, where they were fishing. The body was not discovered, despite efforts of the first aid squad of the fire department and others to locate it.

Peak, who was very fond of children, had been accustomed to take the six children of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hartman, living in the neighborhood, to the rock nearly every day to fish. When Frank Hartman fell into the water, Peak did not hesitate, but jumped in, rescued the boy, instructed him to climb over him to safety on the rock, and then himself slipped back, presumably given the impulse by the youngster in his efforts to scramble up the rock.

Peak came up three times, but help was not close enough to get him out. He had been employed as carpenter on a house, coming here from Riverside, where his parents live at Glenavon Heights. His wife and three children are in Canada, it is reported.

There are no fish in the Dead Sea. The salinity of the water is too great for fish life.

Young Girls Assembled For Dinner Party And Swim

Complimenting Miss Nancy White, popular little sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emrys D. White, who will leave tomorrow with her parents and brother, Emrys, Jr., for a six weeks' trip to Montana, Miss Mary Elizabeth Emison and Miss Frances Was entertained Monday with an enjoyable dinner party in the lovely colonial home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Was on Victoria drive.

The honoree was completely surprised and very much delighted when she was led to the attractively appointed dinner table, centered with a miniature beach, complete with mirrored sea and sand, gay umbrellas, and dolls in appropriate garb. The guests fitted into the scheme, for they wore attractive beach outfits in preparation for the swim which was to follow.

After the delectable menu course had been served the happy group, chaperoned by Mrs. Was, motored to Balboa Island, and completed the evening with a refreshing swim.

Those present were the honoree, Miss Nancy White, and the Misses Janet Diehl, Jean McCauley, Valerie Demetrion, Charlotte Mock, and the hostesses, the Misses Frances Was and Mary Elizabeth Emison.

Quill Pen Club Plans Another Picnic at Early Date

Running the gamut of themes from character developments to the ever popular mystery tale, last night's program of Quill Pen club held the interest of members for an hour or so, then yielded in importance to the friendly hospitality extended by Mrs. R. A. Cushman in her North Broadway home, so that the remainder of the evening was given over to more informal features.

Miss Dorothy Clarkson, Mrs. Frank Was, Mrs. Harry M. Smith, Mrs. J. U. Viau and Mrs. Emmet Elliott were among those contributing manuscripts all of which will represent their "assessment" for this quarter.

As the club members settled down for a thoroughly enjoyable discussion of the various points brought out in the different stories as well as of a multitude of other things, Mrs. Cushman added to the friendly enjoyment by serving ices, cake and coffee. She was assisted in this by Miss Clarkson and Vincent Elliott.

In accordance with the plan for informal affairs during the summer months, it was decided to make the meeting of Tuesday, August 19, a picnic supper in the garden of Mrs. Frank Was, 2019 Victoria drive. Mrs. S. B. Marshall was named general chairman and will advise the members as to requirements in the way of picnic fare.

Mrs. Cushman's hospitality was extended to Mrs. Frank Was, president; Mrs. S. B. Marshall, Mrs. Herman Reuter, Miss Dorothy Clarkson, Mrs. Maude Goff, Mrs. Blanche Brown, Mrs. J. U. Viau, Mrs. Henry M. Smith, Mrs. Marshall Harnois, Mrs. Emmett Elliott, and three guests, Mrs. Earl Lippincott, house-guest of Mrs. Brown; Miss Charlotte Harnois and Vincent Elliott.

Miss Marian Stanley Completes Work at Ohio University

Returning recently from their long summer trip back in Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Stanley of Tustin avenue, were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Marian Stanley, and a friend, Miss Ruth Rodamer of Waterloo, Ia., who will remain for an extended visit in their home.

The eastern trip was taken early in the summer, that Mr. and Mrs. Stanley might reach Athens, O., in time for the graduation of Miss Marian Stanley from Ohio University, where she received her A. B. degree in June. Miss Stanley, who is a native daughter of California, very much enjoyed the experience of attending the university in the little Ohio city which had been the home of her mother's people for many years, and where she, herself, represented the fifth generation.

Her grandfather, the late J. O. Hatfield, Mrs. Stanley's father, had taught Latin in the university for many years, so the place was rich in traditions for this young Californian.

Returning to California, the party traveled through the famous Black Hills country, and stopped also in the Yellowstone, enjoying the varied scenic wonders of the trans-continental trip.

Mid-Summer Bride Will Preside at Dinner Party Tonight

That intimate charm which attached to a congenial family party, promises to be in full play this evening when Dr. and Mrs. A. Karl Loerch, jr., will be hosts at dinner in their home on North Main street.

Dr. and Mrs. Loerch, it will be remembered, were numbered among those who chose June as a bridal month, and the young hostess will draw upon her supply of exquisite bridal linens and china too arrange her table. She has chosen the autumnal russets and golds for her color effect, blending all details with the centerpiece of giant zinnias in rust, burnt orange and golden yellow tones, grouped in an amber crystal bowl. Supplementing her china service will be silver encrusted amber crystal, while completing the charm of the setting, will be the soft light of orange tapers.

Guests will be confined to the little family circle, with covers laid for the hosts, Dr. and Mrs. Loerch, jr., Dr. and Mrs. K. A. Loerch, sr., Miss Esther Loerch and Alfred Loerch, all of this city.

Church Societies

World Wide Guild

Members of the World Wide Guild of the First Baptist church convened for a most interesting session Monday afternoon, when they accepted the hospitality of Mrs. O. S. Catland, and met in her home at 419 Wellington street. About 25 were present.

During the afternoon meeting the members were busily employed in the art of making headbands for the guild, and when the dinner hour arrived they were more than ready for the appetizing meal which had been prepared. Amidst an attractive setting of shrubs and garden flowers at the rear of the house, the menu was served and thoroughly enjoyed.

The business meeting later in the evening concluded the delightful session, with Mrs. Benjamin Brubaker presiding. Plans for the year's work were made at this time.

Las Meninas Members Entertained in Metzgar Home

Miss Eleanor Metzgar again proved a charming hostess last evening, when she extended a gracious hospitality to her sister members of Las Meninas club, of which she is president. The spacious rooms of the Metzgar home, 816 Bush street, were increased in charm, by the lavish use of the prettiest of the season's flowers.

Initiation rites were first in order for the evening, for Pledge Miriam Samuelson, one of two new pledges able to be present. Miss Samuelson was compelled to don a hula costume and perform an intricate Spanish dance, also to wear the costum for the rest of the evening, and serve the other members.

The group later adjourned to the Tom Thumb golf course on South Main street, where moonlight filtered through stately palms, together with the courtesies extended by the management made a happy occasion for the players. After a highly entertaining hour spent on the greens, the party again returned to the Metzgar home.

There the most delectable of refreshments were served on individual trays by the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. J. H. Metzgar. Music and conversation continued until a late hour, together with a brief business meeting, in which officers for the coming year were unanimously elected. Miss Helen Lee received the office of president. Miss Catherine Walbridge, vice-president; Miss Juliette Taylor, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Miriam Samuelson, social chairman.

Members present in addition to the hostess, Miss Eleanor Metzgar, were the Misses Mary Ford of Fullerton; Dorothy Harman of Anaheim; Faye Stinson, of Orange; Mildred Staples of Irvine; Miriam Samuelson of Tustin; and Helen Lee, Corrinne Nelson, Mary Louise Wallace, Catherine Walbridge, Lillian McDonald, June Arnold, Katherine Spicer, Catherine Harwood, and a guest, Miss Helen Heil, Santa Ana.

Dinner Party Is Given In Celebration of Birthday

A lovely little dinner party of last evening was that presided over by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Waldring in their home on Hickory street, given in honor of their daughter, Lois, in celebration of her fifteenth birthday anniversary.

The rooms were decked with gladioluses, asters and zinnias in a variety of colorful hues, while the table was centered with asters flanked with fall yellow candles. An array of lovely gifts presented the honoree added to her evening's peasures.

Following the dinner, some of the group attended a local theater, while others remained in the Waldring home for a social hour. Those present were the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Waldring, and the honoree, Miss Lois Waldring; Mr. and Mrs. Georoge Chapman of Long Beach, Miss Jorvis Hendrickson of Temecula, Miss Myrtle Hynes of Winnebago, Minn., and Max Plake of this city.

A short business session was presided over by Mrs. P. T. Asherwood, president, at which it was decided to hold a steak bake at Irvine park, Tuesday evening, August 12.

WETTLIN SPEAKS IN BEACH CHURCH

Making a strong plea for law enforcement in Orange county, David G. Wettlin, Santa Ana attorney, candidate for district attorney at the elections this month, last night was the principal speaker before some 150 persons at the First Christian church at Huntington Beach.

Wettlin's subject was "Religion As An Investment," and in his talk he brought out the importance of religion in the enforcement of the laws in this country and the need for more religion in enforcing the laws.

The meeting held at the church started with a pot luck dinner.

County Clubwomen Join In Attendance at Board Meeting

"Every phase of our ordinary every-day life is affected in some measure and to some degree, by legislative action" yesterday declared Mrs. Agnes McEuen of Riverside, legislation chairman of the Southern District Federation of Women's clubs, and chief speaker on the afternoon program of the executive board meeting of the Orange county federation, in session in this city.

Santa Ana Woman's club members with their president, Mrs. W. H. Kuhn, formed the hostess organization to executive board members and many other clubwomen, and the all-day sessions were held in the Y. W. C. A. on East Fifth street. Mrs. McEuen's address in the afternoon followed an interesting morning presided over by Mrs. E. E. Smith of Anaheim, vice president of the county federation.

Especially valuable to the assembled clubwomen were the morning discussions of program features and themes, in which a round table conducted by Mrs. Albert Launer of Fullerton, brought out many points worthy of note. Luncheon at noon provided an enjoyable social interval during which clubwomen from various communities, exchanged suggestions and details regarding their work.

Tables were flower centered in harmony with the attractive decorations of the pretty clubrooms, all of which had been supervised by a committee from the hostess club, consisting of Mrs. W. A. West, Mrs. William Castler, Mrs. E. C. Wilson, Mrs. James Clark and Mrs. William Whitehead.

Mrs. Kuhn, Woman's club president, was assisted by Mrs. M. J. Marks and Mrs. Clark as a reception committee to greet arrivals, and the club's hospitality was recognized when Mrs. Launer made a formal motion of appreciation to the women for their many courtesies.

Mrs. Smith presented Mrs. McEuen as the speaker for the afternoon, and her informal talk was heard with much interest, as she presented her facts with such forcefulness, and yet with a touch of humor that made it an extremely interesting feature.

This humor was especially pronounced in the replies to the storm of questions that followed her address, many of the questions relating to the means of ascertaining the qualifications of men who will appear for office in the forthcoming election.

Mrs. McEuen stressed the importance of the current year, as the fall elections are of state import as well as local, and need to be approached by woman voters with much thoughtful consideration. She warned her hearers against too strong a faith in political propaganda, advising them to "believe only half of what is said either for or against candidates."

Several mistaken beliefs on the part of woman voters were corrected, including a prevailing idea as to taxes. She explained that many people believed that their taxes went to the state funds, but that is not the case, as taxes go into city and county funds, with public corporations and utilities, banks, railroads, etc., being the source of the state's tax revenues.

Mrs. McEuen was sweeping in her assertion that woman was out of place in political office under existent conditions, and that "until she could use her ideals of purity in politics and interests of the public, she could have no real place in politics—and that seems a long way in the future." According to her belief, it means unending patience on the part of woman voters, and in the meantime, they should be educating themselves to a thorough knowledge of political and legislative conditions. Men, she declared, maintain two consciences—one for their families and personal affairs, the other for big business and politics.

She dwelt upon both the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments, and said that they had been adopted but that it would take time for them to be fully accepted by men and the nation as a whole, but that unending patience on the part of the women and the dry forces would bring that to pass.

The district federation has adopted as its theme for the year, "Our Higher Citizenship," and Mrs. McEuen credited the choice to Mrs. Smith, who had proposed the theme. Mrs. Smith explained that it had been used with much success as a foundation for the Fullerton Ebell's program year.

County club presidents were to be introduced at this meeting and Mrs. Smith had the pleasure of presenting such leaders or their representatives, as were present. These included Mrs. Kuhn of the hostess club; Mrs. Clyde A. Bach, representing Mrs. Robert G. Tuthill of the Santa Ana Ebell society; Mrs. Joseph Walter, vice president of Anaheim Ebell; Mrs. E. E. Anderson of Brea Woman's club; Mrs. A. P. Nelson, Costa Mesa Woman's club; Mrs. Anna Brookhauser, La Habra Woman's Improvement club; Mrs. Elmer L. Johnson, Los Alamitos Woman's Improvement club; Mrs. Hiel, vice president of the Midway City club, latest to join the federation; Mrs. Lee McGavren, Civic League of Newport Beach; Mrs. Leon Des Larzes, Orange Woman's club, and Mrs. Arthur Staley, Placentia Round Table.

bury's sister, Mrs. Bertha Stanley and baby, and upon their return to her home in the evening they were entertained as her dinner guests.

Popular Santa Anans Wedded Today In Pasadena

Counteless Santa Ana friends were eagerly awaiting details of the quiet wedding this afternoon, of two of the city's best-known young people, Mrs. Irene Roach, daughter of Mrs. Clara Tolifaro of Spurgeon street, and R. Fred Chambers, director of religious education in the First Baptist church, of which the Rev. Harry Evan Owings is pastor.

The happy young couple motored to Pasadena this afternoon accompanied by Mrs. Tolifaro, Miss Gladys Dunn, Miss Ruth Dunn, Miss Marie Foldesi, and George Ashe. The wedding was to be held in the Pasadena First Baptist church, with the pastor, the Rev. Stanley Silke, reading the service.

Mrs. Roach chose for her costume, a smart ensemble in deep glowing red with white hat and accessories, all extremely becoming to her vivacious brunet beauty.

Following the ceremony, the members of the wedding party were to dine at the Maryland hotel following which, the new Mr. and Mrs. Chambers planned to motor to Arrowhead where they will spend a week among the pines of that beautiful mountain resort.

It is the present plan for Mr. Chambers to return east this fall, where he will study for his degree at Yale university. Mrs. Chambers will remain in Santa Ana with her mother, and plans to continue her duties at the Madden drug store where she has charge of the cosmetics.

TENTATIVE TAX RATE SAME AS FOR LAST YEAR

After several weeks of work on the requests made by department heads for funds with which to operate the county government during the fiscal year commencing July 1, the county board of supervisors last night determined a tentative total and fixed the tentative tax rate for the year. The figure is the same as that of last year, $1:85 outside of incorporated cities and $1.40 inside incorporations.

Although the total rate remains the same, there were numerous changes in the various items comprising the total, with increases in six divisions and decreases in two divisions. The rate remained stationary on three items.

County Auditor W. C. Jerome, who has worked with the board for the past three weeks in arriving at the totals to be used, stated today that the tentative rate, although remaining he same, would result in an increased revenue of approximately $40,000 based on the increased valuations. Practically all the balances in county funds are lower than they were last year, Jerome stated, and the officials were faced with a difficult task in working out sufficient revenues to meet the increasing demands on government caused by the growth of population and improvements.

The tentative budget is required by law to be published in pamphlet form before August 10 and notice given to the public of a hearing at a time to be fixed by the board on or before August 20, at which time objections to the budget in its tentative form may be presented by the tax payers before it is formally adopted by the supervisors. This meeting may be held on August 19, it was indicated today.

Variations of 14 cents occur in the different divisions of the items making the total tax rate, with increases of that amount in six of the funds, being off set by an equivalent decrease in two other funds.

The largest increase is that of the county hospital rate, where a new rate of 19 cents is five and one-half cents higher than the rate of 13 and one-half cents last year. This is accounted for, according to Jerome, by the fact that the budget request has increased from $316,000 to $380,000, a reflection of the hard times, which require more financial relief at this county institution.

Increase of two and one-half cents also is indicated in the tentative rate for each of the county general and salary funds. The increase in the county general fund is to provide for election expenses this year and for increased expenditures in the flood control department. The increase in the salary account is required to care for legal increases in salaries provided during the year and to building up a balance which has been depleted.

The largest percentage of increase is in the county park rate, where it is now 300 per cent of what it was last year, the rate being increased from one cent to three cents. Necessity of providing additional and increased sanitary facilities and building up the park fund are assigned as the cause for this upward trend.

Other increases are provided in the interest and sinking fund rate, which is boosted one cent, and the advertising fund rate, which gets an additional one-half cent this year.

The decreases are in the county good roads fund, where it was found possible to lop off six cents from the 14 cent rate of last year, and in the unbudgeted reserve, where a rate of eight cents last year was wiped out entirely. These decreases were made possible by the fact that the roads are now in good shape and the eight cent rate is expected to bring sufficient revenue to take care of necessary work, and that there is a large balance totaling $600,000 in the unbudgeted reserve and general reserve funds of the county.

The tentative rates as determined by the board last night are as follows: county general, 27½ cents; salary, 15 cents; hospital, 19 cents; interest and sinking, seven cents; advertising, two and one-half cents; county school, 38 cents; county high school, 25 cents; county park, three cents; county good roads, eight cents; total inside cities, $1.45; road, 40 cents; total outside, $1.85.

The school rates remained the same as they were last year, and were the only ones which sustained no change, with the exception of the general reserve, for which no provision was made either last year or this year.

How to Make a Dressing Table

If you can handle a hammer efficiently, have a stray mirror and an eye for color, you can make a love of a dressing table for ten dollars.

First buy an unpainted dressing table with a kidney shaped top, drawers in it if you wish, but the one I saw had none. Draw the exact dimensions of the top on a piece of paper, take it to a shop selling mirror glass and have a piece cut to the pattern, the edges bevelled.

Drape the table in anything your taste and purse runs to, but I am going to drape mine in a long shirred skirt of apricot-peach marquisette over plain glazed chintz, same shade—finished at the bottom with a 3-inch ruffle held in place by a thick cord of robin's egg blue taffeta. A deep valance finishes the top of the able and this is ruffled to match the bottom.

Hang your stray mirror over this lovely table with heavy silk cords of apricot or robin's egg blue. Of course you aren't going to let the dressing table get away with all the ruffles and the color scheme—

Buy two sets of ruffled marquisette-gauze curtains and enough of the one shade to make a ruffled valance. Two sets of rods are necessary also. On the under set hang the apricot curtains and on the outer set hang the contrasting shade. Loop each set of curtains back with its own color but tack the tie-backs securely in place with the one ornamental fastener. The top of the window is finished by the ruffled valance.

I saw just such a pair of windows so treated, and in the shades described for the dressing table. The effect was indescribably lovely, the sheerness of the gauze, and the delicate shades made one think I was looking at an early sun rise.

TODAY'S RECIPE
CHEESE ROLLS
1 Philadelphia cream cheese
½ cup Maraschino cherries
Mayonnaise
Very fresh white bread

Mash the cheese fine with a fork and use just enough mayonnaise to blend to creamy softness. Drain and mince the maraschino cherries, mix with the cheese and use for filling. Get the freshest bread possible, cut off all crusts, and cut in very thin slices, spread liberally with the filling, roll up, put in a bread tin close together and chill until ready to serve.

MINCED LOBSTER SANDWICH
1 small can of lobster
1 small bottle of capers
Mayonnaise
Paprika and salt
Bread and butter

Pick over the lobster and run it through the food chopper to mince. Season it with paprika, salt and a little lemon juice and mix to a soft paste with mayonnaise. If possible buy a round loaf of bread, it not, cut the crusts off a white or dark loaf and then with a cooky cutter and a doughnut cutter of equal size cut an equal number of slices into rounds. Spread with soft butter, on the bottom round spread the lobster paste and in the center of this round drop a few capers or finely chopped pickle. Put the slice with the hole so that the capers are left exposed. It is best to have everything ready but make the sandwiches up just before serving, they get messy looking if left too long.

Each of these sandwiches has a calory value of 150. The filling makes them a distinct energy making food, but on picnics the excess oxygen and exercise take the curse off them.

Several Guests Share Honors at Pretty Dinner Party

Unique in the fact that practically all the diners were there as honor guests was the prettily appointed dinner presided over Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Thornhill in their home at 502 East Fifth street.

Centering the table were pastel-toned garden flowers in every imaginable variety, harmonizing with those used as decorations throughout the rooms. Equally prominent, although losing its identity with the dessert course, was the delicious white cake, elaborately decorated. This was a tribute to Mrs. Guy Thornhill, who was celebrating her natal day anniversary, and to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tatum, of 519 South Parton street in honor of their fifth wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Conaway shared honors as recent arrivals here from Freeport, Ill., who are spending the summer at 611 West Fifth street.

Those who were present to share in the delightful dinner and the social evening which followed it, were the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Thornhill, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tatum and daughter Jackie May, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Conoway and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Thornhill.

Feature Women's Matinees At Fox Theaters Here

Announcement was made today by the Fox theaters of Santa Ana, that starting on next Tuesday, August 12, a Ladies Bargain Matinee schedule would go into effect, doing away with the usual two for one coupon matinees which have been in vogue here for the past several months.

Special prices will be in effect for the "Ladies Matinees" according to Manager Norman Sprowl, who stated that the bargain shows would be held at the Fox West Coast theater on Mondays and Thursdays of each week and at the Fox Broadway theater on Tuesdays and Fridays.

The first show to which women will be admitted on the bargain prices will be "Our Blushing Brides," latest Joan Crawford picture, which comes to the theater for four days starting next Monday. The first bargain matinee will be held on Tuesday.

To every woman who attends the first matinee, a bottle of "Gerty" perfume, Joan Crawford brand will be given with the admission ticket, it was announced.

"THIS MAD WORLD" STARTS THURSDAY

"This Mad World," the William C. de Mille M-G-M all-talking production which will open at the Fox West Coast theater Thursday, is a Clara Beranger adaptation of a story about the love of a French spy and a German princess, behind the German lines in Alsace. DUNCAN SISTERS AT WALKER'S THEATER

"It's a Great Life," opening tonight at Walker's State would be a very interesting story even if it were not enlivened by the antics of the inimitable stars, the Duncan Sisters, and nearly a dozen brand-new catchy songs.

It plants the Duncans as clerks in a department store who are fired because Rosetta "ad libs" on a rah rah type of "organization song," euphoniously named "Smile, Smile, Smile, with Mandelbaum and Weil." That makes the opportunity for the formation of a team, the Hogan Sisters, with James Dean at the piano. Dean's courtship of Vivian, and Rosetta's resentment of his overflowing vanity, lead to a split. The story follows throughout to the final reuniting of the girls, with a side, by-plot concerning Rosetta and "Parker," played by Jed Prouty.

'MANSLAUGHTER' FILM CONTINUES

A society girl, rich, beautiful and reckless, kills a man in an automobile accident. She was driving in a reckless manner at the time. She is arrested and sent to prison by the very man who loves her more than anything else in the world.

In a nutshell, that is the story of "Manslaughter", great Paramount production which is now ploying at the Fox Broadway theater. The picture opened there Monday and plays through tomorrow night.

Claudette Colbert has the principal feminine role in the production. She will be remembered here in "The Big Pond" and "The Lady Lies". The male lead is played by Frederic March.

The story of "Manslaughter" is not new. It was a great stage play, and in 1922 it was made into a silent picture, with Thomas Meighan in the leading male role and Leatrice Joy as th egirl.

"Manslaughter" is the kind of a picture that appeals to any audience. It has romance, adventure, a number of particularly good court room scenes and a climax that will jar and thrill throughout.

A Fox Movietone news reel, together with an all-talking comedy and other short subjects also are shown.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

All afternoon the Tinymites walked 'round the town, just seeing sights. "By night," exclaimed the Travel Man, "we'll sure be all tired out. But, while we're here, it seems to me, 'tis best to see all we can see. Then, when we leave you'll just know what this country's all about."

So, on they went till Scouty cried, "Where's Clowny? Is he trying to hide? I cannot see him anywhere. Perhaps he's dropped behind." And, sure enough, as Scouty feared, he suddenly had disappeared. Said Coppy, "If he's fooling us, he isn't very kind."

The Travel Man was much concerned. Down several streets they quickly turned, but nowhere was poor Clowny seen. He'd simply dripped from sight. "We must find him, at any cost," said Coppy. "Now, I'm sure he's lost. I only hope, where'er he is, that he is quite all right."

The search kept on till almost dark. Then Scouty loudly shouted, "Hark! I think I heard wee Clowny's voice. Somebody's shouting, 'Hey'!" Then, for the bunch there came a treat. They spied poor Clowny down the street. He ran right up to them and said, "Oh gee, I've been away.

"I hopped a cart that passed our way and then the pony ran away. When someone caught him I jumped off. That was a trip quite rare." "Well, have your fun, lad, now and then, but please don't pull that trick again. We've all been looking 'round for you. You gave us all a scare."

That night the Tinies slept real sound and in the morning they were bound for some new land. The Travel Man was teasing them. Where they were bound he would not tell, but said, "I know you'll think it's swell." They took a train and then a boat and sailed right out to sea.

(The Tinymites arrive in a big city in the next story.)

Missing Letter Links

RULES:

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters can not be changed.

YARD to WIDE—Today's hole is a YARD WIDE. Therefore, you should have no difficulty in shooting a par three.

CULEX PITINES

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 6.—People in Portland are taking pains to see that no basins of water are standing idle around their homes.

Dr. M. V. King, government entomologist, said he had discovered culex pitines in Portland. Culex pitines, it might be added, is a species of home mosquito which breeds in standing water around the house.

Previous to this time, it was said, culex pitines had not been found in the Pacific Northwest.

URGES CHAPPARAL FOR STATE FORESTS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Rather than plant trees, which take from 100 to 150 years to attain their full growth, to protect California's water supply areas, chapparal, a natural growth of the mountains, should be planted, according to Rolf N. Newman, past president of the local chapter of the American association of engineers.

Newman, who recently spoke before the Los Angeles City club, stated that chapparal takes from 10 to 15 years to attain full growth and does not require the care given to forests.

"It does not have to be planted again after a fire," Newman said, "because the life of the plant is preserved in the roots and in the course of a few years a new growth will appear."

Newman declared that more than 100 different kinds of chapparel grow naturally in California and the preservation of planted areas now existent will give immediate benefits to the present generation and posterity.

TO PEDAL ACROSS CHANNEL

Pedalers are allowed—in the English channel—and beauteous Aimee "Flapper" Pranner (left) and Mello Pierrette, of Paris, intend to pilot this hydro-cycle from France to England. The swimming suits won't prove such a "wet" idea if there's a storm. And the two girls say they won't quarrel over who's to be captain—for they have two minds that run in the same channel!

A NEW EFFECT

We were glad to see Stribling score that quick knockout over Otto Von Porat, not because of any animosity we bear toward the Norwegian, but because it marked an important phase of Stribling's battle to come back. For the same reason it was like meat and drink to hear Strib had socked Mr. Scott.

Sande's great comeback last spring in the Wood Memorial and his subsequent victories on Gallant Fox gave us an honest thrill.

IT DOES US GOOD

The other day the Athletics beat the Senators, but in the ninth inning a large gent came to the mound for the Washington team and struck out three men in a row. We thought back to 1925 when the same Firpo Marberry won a pennant for Washington, pitching in 55 games and never starting one! Why are we so happy every time the ancient Jack Quinn or venerable Clarence Mitchell pitches another well-earned triumph? Why are we so glad to read that a great athlete has come back?

Is it because we all must slide down the same old hill ourselves? Because we like to see our own physical limitations surpassed by an effort that seems to be superhuman?

Father time is not often cheated. The odds are on his side every time It's good to win a bet from the Old Gent now and then.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

In five months, Hal Finney, the young catcher for the Pirates, has missed writing to his sweetheart just three nights. . . . She lives in Buffalo, Ala., and is quite a lot older than Hal. . . . she happens to have the same family name as Hal . . . yep, it's Mrs. Finney . . . she's his mother. . . . When Willie Stribling reaches these shores, he will go to Madison Square Garden at once, where he will be signed for a match with somebody, probably Campolo . . . between you and me, Lucius, he would ruin the big horse. . . . He would beat Schmeling, too, I think, but Sharkey? I just don't know. . . . John McGraw says the drinking problem among big league ball players is more acute now than in ye olde wide-open days. . . . He says the drinking ball player today isn't content with a few beers, but doesn't know when to stop.

FINANCIAL AND MARKET NEWS

NEW YORK CURB

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Selling of oil stocks and special issues spread reactionary tendencies to other sections of the list on the curb exchange today and the market as a whole drifted irregularly lower in continued dull trading.

Increase in production of oil during the last week increased bearish sentiment regarding the oil shares and selling came in to Gulf and Humble, the former declining almost 2 points and the latter a point. Cosden, Vacuum and Standard of Indiana made fractional recessions.

Deere and Co. was subject to another bear drive in the general list and dipped to a new low for the year on a decline of more than 2 points. National Family Stores was another weak spot, breaking more than a point. Exceptions to the trend were Mead Johnson and Saxet company, which moved up fractionally to new highs for the year.

An early displjay of resistance to selling on the part of the utilities vanished when offerings became more plentiful and an early gain in American Gas was ubstituted with a loss, while declines took place in Electric Bond, Cities Service, United Light, Niagara Hudson and American Superpower.

Investment trust issues drifted lower in apathetic trading.

EVENING SALUTATION

"There are social problems enough to keep an army of keen-thinking and doing women busy for a generation to clear them all away."

A CANDIDATE SPEAKS OUT

We would like to call the attention of the readers to the advertisement in last night's Register of Harry Westover, candidate for district attorney. We hope you read it. We are going to repeat two or three sentences from it. To quote him, he says:

I promise to divorce that office (district attorney) from control of the political bosses.

I promise actual and real enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and all other laws, and prosecution in any case the facts warrant.

And last:

I expect opposition from those who do not want this program, but it is fair and just, and I will stay with it.

We recall when Wendell Phillips was about to rise to address a public meeting where there was feeling on both sides of the slavery question, his wife turned to him and said: "Now, Wendell, don't shilly-shally."

We want to express appreciation of the fact that there is one candidate for the most important office, in our judgment, in Orange county, who is not shilly-shallying. Law enforcement conditions in Orange county need officers of ability, energy and conviction, and it is refreshing to find a man who embodies these qualities and is actually willing to inform the people without equivocation exactly where he stands and what he stands for. There is no side-stepping or pussyfooting, and he frankly says that he knows there will be those who will oppose him.

Yes, every man who is violating the law for profit will oppose him. Every one who is exploiting the weakness of other people as a bootlegger will oppose him, and they will oppose any one else who stands as he does. Those whose interests are advanced by law officials selecting what laws they are to enforce and selecting those against whom they will be enforced, will oppose him.

What we want to say also is that by the same token, if he is nominated and elected, some of this same ilk in the county who are profiting from their violations will fold up their tents and steal out of Orange county, for they will prefer leaving the county to going to jail.

We have had requests from all over the county for information as to whom to vote for. Certainly here is one candidate whose personal reputation squares with his public declaration, and for whom the voter can safely vote, knowing that he will be their servant.

From declarations of Mr. R. E. Haynes of Fullerton, we judge that he is the same type of man. Orange county can count itself fortunate that at this crucial time, men of this type will offer themselves as candidates for the people's suffrage.

Cyril Tolley, former British golf champion, is considering locating in Chicago. Probably in an effort to improve his shots.

THE RUSSIAN DEBT

The question of Russia paying the debts that the Czar incurred is again before the public mind. There is a great deal that can be said on behalf of the Russian in his determination not to consider these obligations as a part of the national debt.

Much of this money was incurred by the Czar in the very act of keeping these people in a practical bondage and punishing them. If the debt is attached to people and not to the country, certainly there is nothing to be said on behalf of the payment of the debt. But debts of nations, even with changing governments and revolutions have usually been recognized, and they have been recognized on the theory that people outside of the state cannot be responsible for the good faith of the people inside, or pass judgment upon the government of whether it is a good government or a bad one.

We can well see how Russia should refuse to pay debts of the Czar's government to nations or to people of nations which refuse to recognize her present government, but those nations that do recognize it, and have adopted a policy of accepting any government of another nation that establishes itself and keeps itself in power for a fair length of time, should certainly have the debt of Russia paid to them. The truth is that if the people, even those who have not had a revolution, repudiated debts that were incurred through unwise, foolish or even corrupt management, there would be no credit for nations anywhere.

If debts are to be paid by people and not by property, and if creditors are to loan simply on the theory that a nation is just and the people contented, how could Russia now expect to negotiate credit? Certainly there are thousands who believe that eventually certain elements in Russia will rise and overthrow the government. Debts, whether public or private, cannot be repudiated without misfortune by either private or public debtors.

Men, according to the headlines, used to end their lives over their fiancees, but now it's because of their finances.

A NON-SPIN AIRPLANE

They claim now to have a non-spinning airplane, one that is insured against either a nosedive or a tailspin. Soon we hope they will have them insured against a fall regardless of what may happen.

We wonder if it will ever come to pass that in order to get people up into a plane, they will have to advertise that there are some elements of chance in the particular plane. It almost appears at times that people desire to take a chance.

EXTENSIVE READING

Miss Jeanette McFadden, head city librarian, reports that 327,109 books were circulated during the year ending June 30th. The figure represents a gain this year of 25,000 books.

The other day we quoted the opinion of Aldous Huxley, who maintained that reading is a vice, a means of escape from thought. Miss McFadden's figures bear out Mr. Huxley since more than sixty per cent of the books circulated were fiction, thirty-three per cent juveniles, with biography, the nearest approach to the story type as the second most popular with adult readers. The per cent of juveniles and fiction combined leaves but four per cent for biography and other types of books, which would include books on poetry, drama, essay, science, domestic arts, political economy, history, and every other type.

But granting that the bulk of the reading was done for amusement or a means of escape, it is one of the best occupations for the individual. He does absorb ideas as he reads. He cannot help doing so for the very novelty of some of them, to the reader, makes an impression and the mental vacuum is filled.

Wise folks have said, long before Mr. Huxley came along to startle us, that the boy or girl who read a great deal would not go wrong.

Joseph Wood Krutch says: "I never found a triple-brass cynicism acquired anywhere except in a library." That presents another phase of discussion on reading. At least the cynic is not hurt as much by the world as other folks, because he doesn't expect much. But on the other hand cynicism and courage are not kindred qualities.

Now that Denmark has decided to dispose of its only two cruisers, opponents of disarmament will be expected to laugh it off with the remark: "There's something rotten in Denmark."

RADIO SEEMS DRY TO HIM

A man down in Charleston, West Virginia, a coal operator, declares that the drought is due to the radio broadcasting institutions. He is writing President Hoover requesting that all radios be closed for a period of time to determine whether this be true.

In looking around for possibilities of reasons for the drought, we do not wonder that he has struck upon the radio. Something has caused this terrible unusual drought. We have no idea that the radio has anything to do with it. We have had droughts in other years, and years ago. The cause of them has never been determined. We doubt if there is anything that man can do to either prevent or bring a drought.

People in certain sections of this country now have been setting apart days of prayer when they shall petition the Creator, the God of the weather to bring forth an abundance of rain. When either water is withheld or when it comes in unusual and unprepared for quantities, man beholds how puny he really is.

Developing a Father

Imperial Valley Press

A good deal has been written about the importance to any growing boy of having a father to train him in the way that he should go and see that he develops properly. Not so much has been said on an equally vital subject—the importance to a man of having a son.

For the truth is that the son's influence on the father is usually greater than the father's influence on his son. No man, however educated, talented and cultured he may be, is truly developed the way nature intended until he has had the companionship of at least one son.

Mr. Solomon Levitan, state treasurer of Wisconsin, pointed this out very neatly in a speech made recently to a Wisconsin Father and Son's banquet.

"Sons," he declared, "are a vital factor in the development of fathers. From the moment a son rises on the horizon of a father, the father's hopes and interests are transferred from himself to his son, freeing him from self-centered ambitions and giving him the joy of planning for another's good.

"A man with a son better understands the problems of other men with sons, and he is more sympathetic and understanding in his endeavors to solve these problems."

It is just as important for the father as for the son, says Mr. Levitan, that the two develop as pals.

"The son," he says, "should have the benefit of his father's wisdom gained from the experience of living, but the father needs even more to gain a sympathetic understanding of his boy's needs. It keeps him from growing old and renews the enthusiasm of living."

There is sound sense in all of this. We owe our sons more than we dream. Haven't you ever seen some man, ordinarily brusque, thoughtless and somewhat self-centered, soften up and become pleasant, kindly and thoughtful simply because his son, all unconsciously, has taken him in hand? Of course you have. It happens every day.

The man who hasn't had a son—or who, having one, has failed to be a real father to him—has missed something priceless.

Hazy Geography Not Always Indifference

San Francisco Chronicle

Governor Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico protests against American lack of information as to the island. Letters come to him addressed to "Porto Rico, Cuba," "Porto Rico, Central America," and one friend asked him when he expected to return to the Philippines.

Some people are like that. Georgraphy is often a closed book to minds otherwise alert. A sweet voice called The Chronicle the other day to ask: "Is it Idaho or Iowa that lies between Oregon and Montana—no; I mean Oregon and Arizona?" A woman eminent in education circles confesses to her friends that she never can remember how far north of Sacramento she rides to get to Fresno.

Wasn't it Governor Roosevelt's famous father who told about stopping at a wayside ranch in Wyoming and asking how far it was to Laramie? "Well, stranger," replied the native, "it's about 24,996 miles if you keep going the way you're headed."

There are a lot of things besides latitude and longitude worth knowing about Porto Rico. If Governor Roosevelt quickens curiosity and interest among Americans he will serve continentals as well as islanders.

More Truth Than Poetry

ON THE ROAD TO WISDOM

If little Ramon doesn't try
To get his lessons well,
To add, subtract and multiply
And read and write and spell,
To learn the story of the Cid
In early literature,
And find out what his forebears did
To drive away the Moor,
And how Columbus sailed his ship
Another world to seek,
He cannot make a gala trip
To bullfights once a week.

No town that is not justly proud
Of it's scholastic lore
And mental fitness, is allowed
A local matador
Of all the things that educate
The cranium must be full,
Or people can't appreciate
The throwing of a bull.
No bulls will bellow, roar or mill
If erudition nods,
The fighters cannot waste their skill
Upon a crowd of clods.

And so the tiny tots of Spain
Continuously grind,
So that they finally may gain
Great qualities of mind.
And when they sit, an eager band,
And shout with all their might
One knows they fully understand
The fine points of a fight.
And thus we see that very soon
The carefree Spanish nation
Is on its happy way to universal education.

The Blood-Letting Doctors of Despair

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

The economic Doctors of Despair still have their most doleful bedside manner. Commercially, they say, the country has been on a spree. There must be a letting of blood. Wages and prices must be further reduced.

In unison, the Doctors chant: "To every action, there MUST be an equal and opposite reaction; and we have not yet had reaction enough."

What is enough? Already, in one short year, we have gone back to the Pre-World War level of prices. How much further back must we go? Will a return to the prices of Pre-Revolutionary days mark the complete recovery of health?

The Doctors of Despair do not say. Possibly they are aware that prices will react even further than that, if it really is true that every action MUST be followed by an equal and opposite reaction.

But in affairs ecenomic it is not true; and it wever was true.

The level of prices is determined almost entirely by the level of wages; and both are almost entirely subject to human control. There is no scientific basis whatever for making a law of PRICES out of a law of PHYSICS.

It may be that the declining rate of gold production will force the world to accept a long period of slowly declining prices. We do not think so. Ways have been found in the past of making a given volume of gold support a larger volume of money. Other ways can be found in the future.

In any event, a decline in prices, over the next twenty years, having to do solely with the world's stock of monetary gold, is nothing for the Doctors of Despair to shake their heads over. Such a decline would be too gradual to send the patient to the hospital.

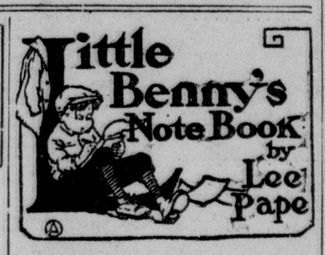

The Doleful Doctors demand more than that. They want to operate at once. The deeper the wage-cuts the better. The life-blood of the body economic must be drawn.

The blood-letting Medical Doctors of the age of ignorance and superstition are now forbidden to practice.

The blood-letting Economic Doctors are still at large.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

IF JEFFERSON COULD SPEAK

If inter-stellar radio and postal communication were established between the mortal and post-martal worlds, I think Thomas Jefferson would want just now to write a letter of counsel to the Democratic party.

And here are some of the things I think he would have in mind as he wrote:

I think he would, first of all, want to advise his followers to be more scientific and less sentimental about democracy.

I think he would confess that the experience of the last century had convinced him that the rights of man may prove worthless after they are won unless the right man is brought into the position and power of leadership.

He would, I think, urge the Democratic party to assume as its special responsibility in contemporary America the revision of the theory of democracy in the light of later experience and newer knowledge of the actual way the mind of the citizen and the mind of the crowd work.

Now that the quantitative extension of political democracy has been virtually completed, I think Jefferson would urge his followers to buckle down to the job of its qualitative development.

I think he would remind the Democratic party of the fact that when he was an active participant in American politics, he was, along with other colleagues of the time, very skeptical of the soundness of the permanent political party system, that he thought the permanence of a party and its need to win elections would inevitably lead it to keep intellectual honesty, moral courage, and disinterested statesmanship in the background, when these qualities threatened to spilt the party. He would doubtless document this part of his letter with such current instances as the disgusting dishonesty and evasion practiced by all parties in the face of an issue like prohibition.

But, for all his theorizing, Jefferson was a practical man, and he would know that there is not the ghost of a chance that America will, within the lifetime of any of his followers now living, evolve any workable substitute for the permanent political party, and so, I think he would content himself at this point with an appeal to the Democratic party to do its best to substitute courage for compromise when it comes to writing its next platform.

And, finally, I think Jefferson would urge his followers to work out in detail the obviously necessary new application of his opposition to centralization and his advocacy of decentralization.

Were Jefferson alive and leading the Democratic party, I think this is the point on which he would try to focus the statesmanship of the party, but this is a point that deserves separate treatment tomorrow.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

SUMMER COACHING

It often happens that a child falls behind his class in one subject or another and the teacher says, "Bobbie can do the work of the next grade but he is a little behind in grammar. It might be well to give him a little practice during the summer."

Some children need an hour or so of study during the vacation months. Usually they have failed in class because of illness, absence from school, change of school, or like causes. The others those a little behind the class but fit for promotion, are different.

These children usually profit most by complete rest from school work. Let the lessons go and allow the child to turn his mind toward other subjects and activities.

We find that many children have to be allowed a certain span of time for mental digestion. They have stored away the facts but they have to wait until the mind digests the material before they can call upon it for daily service.

Perhaps you have worked with a child in despair of ever getting him to understand what is expected of him only to have him surprise you with sudden power? That is what happens many times. The child's mind needed time to season the idea.

This process cannot be hurried. It is a hidden mysterious working of the mind. It is not always evident. Some children seem never to have to pause for it at all. Others seem to have to wait for long periods, as long as 27 days. Some children have to wait for one subject and not for others. When this characteristic shows itself the wise teacher and parent gives the child slow, steady, well-proportioned work during the school term. Then sits by to wait the perfection of the process.

So, if your child has been poor in a subject and you have decided to coach him, watch what happens. If the child makes no progress, if he yawns, fidgets, looks uneasy and appears to be very dull, tell him he has done enough work for the term and forget all about the matter.

Change the child's activities. Give him the benefit of some new experience, even though he seems to want to stay in his rut. The change of work, of environment, will stimulate his mind and bring it to better health. Mental growth is not a single, isolated process at any time. It is a varied and multiple process that draws from a large field of experience. The broader that field the better during the vacation months.

This is why it is often better to send the failing child off for a visit to the farm, off on a fishing trip, off to a camp, or a berry picking, than to coach him. Try it and see.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY OF—

THE TRANSFIGURATION

On August 6, Greek and Latin churches commemorate the anniversary of the Transfiguration, when Christ ascended Mount Tabor with his three favorite disciples, Peter, James and John, and revealed a supernatural change in his personal appearance.

A chapel dedicated to the Transfiguration caps the highest peak of Mount Athos in Greece, where a great annual service is performed on the recurrence of the festival. Tozer describes the scene as follows:

"As we approached from the east we first heard the sound of chanting from within the chapel, and when we came round the platform in front a scene appeared which I shall never forget. Distinctly seen in the moonlight were the weird, ghostly figures of the monks, closely wrapped in their gowns, with long black beards and mushroom locks, some sitting close to the little window of the chapel, where the service was going on, some lying about in groups, like the figures of the three apostles in Raphael's picture of the Transfiguration. . . . At intervals, as we sat there, the priest came out arrayed in gorgeous vestments and swung the incense about us. The vigil lasted a whole night."

Rains Bring Relief To Scorched Midwest This Morning

HEAT WAVE MOVES OVER EAST TODAY

MANY FOREST FIRES

Temperatures Lower in All Sections From Rockies To West Ohio Border

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Rains that brought spotty relief to the drought-stricken middle west, today rolled the August heat wave eastward toward the Atlantic seaboard and southward to the fringes of the parched corn belt.

Temperatures that have hung around the 100 mark for days in the middle west sought lower levels today in the 70's and 80's after scattered showers and deluges had cooled the atmosphere and broke in many areas the drought that seared crops with hundreds of millions of damage.

The forecast from the Chicago weather bureau held out hope for more showers in the middle west with lowering temperatures. Eastward, however, the prediction was for warmer weather. The same forecast was made for the southern fringes of the corn belt.

From the Rocky mountains to the Ohio border, the drought region was splashed with showers and in some cases deluges. Welcome rains came in Colorado, sections of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana.

Farm leaders hailed the drought as a "blessing in disguise," which will force farmers to diversify their crops and place them in better position to withstand drought.

Forest fires in several sections of the country added their toll today to the drought damage.

Fires that destroyed timber and cottages in the Cape Cod, Mass., district ate their way in the town of Plymouth. Fanned by a west wind the fires pushed toward the oceans with fire departments and volunteers fighting a losing battle. A general rain seemed to be the only hope of quenching the blaze.

Ellisville, Mass., was reported to be within the path of a five mile wall of flames. Seven other towns in the district were threatened by the fires.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(UP)—James Kirkwood and Lila Lee, once known as "Hollywood's ideal couple," were parted today in divorce.

Calvin Coolidge Says

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of the United States

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 6.—Because in the past year there has been a trade recession that has been felt all over the world, most nations are making great efforts, often in the form of high protection and of practical exclusion of foreign goods, to recoup the losses which they have felt.

The United States has not gone that far, but the pressure from both business men and wage earners for measures that will insure to them the opportunity to produce the entire supply for the domestic market has become very insistent. It is the same action abroad which at present is converging upon the automobile trade.

For years almost all the automobiles exported in the entire world came from this country. It was inevitable that other nations should try desperately at least to keep more of their home markets for their home productions. Our cars were bound to face that problem sooner or later. Nothing we could do or refrain from doing would prevent it.

Temporarily, our manufacturers will encounter some difficulties. But, if they act with discretion and make proper contacts, the excellence and low cost of our cars will continue to commend them to foreign purchasers. We are far in the lead in this field.

NAVY BOARD TO ASK FOR 1000 NEW AIRPLANES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—A recommendation that the navy request congressional authorization for a huge new five-year airplane building program under which 1000 planes would be constructed ata cost of $85,000,000, was before the navy general board today.

The board must approve this plan if it decides to build up the navy to the limits of the London naval treaty ,it was said at the aeronautics bureau.

Planes built under the proposed new program, which would supplement the present 1614-plane authorization made by congress in 1925 and now in its last year, would be used on the 69,000 tons of new aircraft carriers allotted the United States under the treaty.

One obstacle that might prevent carrying out this program, it was pointed out, is the rigid economy policy which President Hoover has warned his cabinet officers to follow. It is the opinion of high navy officers, however, that the president will agree to building up to treaty limits.

The possibility congress might object to such a large appropriation was minimized by these officers, who pointed out the 1925 authorization carried an appproppriation of $85,078,750.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the aeronautics bureau, has endorsed the 1000-plane

City Attorney of Huntington Beach and Council Runs Them All Out

THERE ARE NO punch boards or slot machines in the city of Huntington Beach simply because the city council there and the city attorney, Lew Blodget, said "no" when they were approached by slot machine and punch board operators, according to a statement made by Blodget today, in an interview asked by The Register.

"There are no slot machines or punch boards in Huntington Beach and there haven't been for a long time," Blodget said. "We just simply told them to get out. Told them that public sentiment was against them and therefore the city council did not want them to operate there," he said.

"I met with the city council regarding the punch boards and slot machines and told them that as far as I could find out there had never been a state supreme court decision in favor of the slot machines that are operated in this county, the kind that pay on the second operation, and so the council decided that there were to be none of the machines in Huntington Beach.

'I then informed the operator of the machines of the council's decision, and we went down the streets and turned all of them that were operating at that time against the wall. I told the operator that we would make a test case of the machines and allow the courts to decide the matter." Instead of the test case, he took all his machines out of the city. That is all there is to it," Blodget said.

Endurance Flight Planned By Three Oregon Brothers

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 6.—(UP)—A new attempt to shatter the airplane endurance flight record of 553 hours set by the Hunter brothers of Sparta, Ill., will be made here by the three Rankin brothers, Tex, Dick and Dud, it was announced here today by Tex Rankin.

The brothers, all three of whom will go aloft, will use a Stinson monoplane equipped with a Wasp motor.

Exact date of the start of the attempt was not announced. The flight will be made over Jantzen Beach on the Columbia river.

OPERATION OF MONEY BOARDS IN ORANGE COUNTY GOES ON DESPITE COUNTY'S WARNING

ANNOUNCEMENT of a meeting called by District Attorney Z. B. West Jr., to be held in his office tomorrow morning with the police chiefs of the county, for the purpose of discussing the proper method for uniform enforcement of the law relative to the operation of punch boards in Orange county, has apparently had no effect on the operation of the boards, according to an investigation made by The Register today.

Although the district attorney's office has announced that something will be done regarding this particular form of law violation, punch boards continue to be operated by the wholesale here.

The district attorney in a letter which was printed in the press of the county on Monday, said in part: "It is apparent, I think, that the many hundreds of merchants who have punch boards which they have believed to be proper, should not be arrested or prosecuted without first having been given a proper warning, and in order to be fair to them, I am releasing this letter to the press."

Not Frightened

From the manner in which boards were being operated here today, it was indicated that the merchants were not at all frightened by the warning sent out, but instead, expected to continue their operation until police officers either came around and arrested them or confiscated the boards.

In one place in Santa Ana six punch boards were lying on the counter. Three were money boards, where the player collected in cash if the lucky number was punched out. The others were cigaret boards and merchandise boards.

At place No. 2, visited, which was next door to No. 1, there was only one punch board. It was a money board. "If I punch out the lucky number, how do I get paid?" the proprietor was asked.

"Well, there's a check here for each lucky number, but we'll cash the check, so you really get cash if you win," he explained.

At place No. 3, there were three boards on the counter. One was a candy board, and two were money boards. There was one big money board there, where the puncher of a lucky number collected $50 in cash. Other prizes on the board were $5 and $2.50 winners, paid by check and the check cashed there.

At place No. 4, there were eight punch boards, one of which was different from any seen anywhere else during the investigation. It was called the "Reno National Bank" board. By punching a winner from the board, the player then was allowed to punch another number in a different place on the board, which told him how much cash he received. The other boards at the place were for merchandise, for cigarets, candy, knives and some other money boards.

At place No. 5 there were three boards, one that paid checks, one

At Same Time His Running Mate Governor Reed Is Falling Behind

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Henry Justin Allen, 61, staunch supporter of President Hoover in the senate, former newspaper publishers and reputedly one of the "best dressed" men in Washington, today was conceded the Republican nomination for junior senator from Kansas on the face of mounting returns from Tuesday's primary.

Allen construed his apparent victory over a field of three opponents as a vote of confidence in support of the presidential administration. He won over W. H. Sproul, former congressman, Ralph Snyder, Kansas farm bureau head, and James Getty, Kansas City, Kas., attorney. Allen held a two to one lead over his nearest trailers, Sproul and Snyder.

In contrast, Allen's Republican primary running mate, Governor Clyde M. Reed, 59, militant opponent of Alexander Legge's wheat crop policies, faced the possibility of losing by 40,000 votes in his race for a second term against Frank Haucke, 35, former World war sergeant.

Early returns today showed Senator Allen maintaining a two to one lead over his nearest opponent, Snyder. In 1250 precincts out of the 2668 in the state, Allen polled 61,385; Snyder, 29,908; Sproul, 22,306. Getty trailed far behind.

Returns from 1761 precincts gave Frank Haucke 112,302 votes compared with 85,986 for Governor Reed.

LUNDGREN ARRIVES AT ROOSEVELT FIELD

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Ted Lundgren, who plans to hop off later this week on a round the world flight, arrived here at 10:47 a. m. today, completing a two-stop flight from Los Angeles.

Lundgren left Los Angeles Monday and stopped over yesterday at Amarillo. His plane is a high winged monoplane.

He will try to break the Graf Zeppelin's round the world flight record.

PHELAN'S CONDITION REMAINS UNCHANGED

SARATOGA, Aug. 6.—(UP)—The condition of farmer Senator James D. Phelan today was "weaker but otherwise unchanged," five physicians announced after a conference.

Since an attack of acute gastritis three months ago, Senator Phelan's condition has been grave.

He has shown little or no improvement during the past few weeks.

Says District Attorney Has Admitted It

Punch Board Evil Attacked By Candidate in Address Over Radio

HARRY WESTOVER, candidate for district attorney, in an address broadcast over Radio Station KREG last night, asserted there was open gambling in Orange county, through the medium of the punch board, and with the admitted knowledge of the district attorney.

Westover declared the district attorney has said that operators of punch boards are violating the law, but despite this fact they still are operating.

"The law is being violated," charged Westover. "The district attorney has said so. But punch boards continue and they are running wide open in this city and county tonight.

"Conditions are such that checks and money are used as prizes, and there has been no effort even to disguise the fact that it is open gambling. In some places of business there are as many as six boards."

Following is Westover's address in full:

"To the voters of Orange county:

"In every campaign there are those candidates who pussy-foot around and refuse to take their stand upon the issues involved. They attempt to appease every faction and refuse to take sides, feeling that they will alienate the support of various groups.

"I believe, however, that the people prefer a candidate who is not afraid to take sides, who will make issues regardless of where the chips may fly and who stands out for those things he believes to be right. A definite stand on the part

G. O. P. LEADERS TO CONSIDER SITUATION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—With the drought serving to add further complications, the Republican party's already complicated political situation will be taken up here tomorrow at a conference of party leaders.

Although the meeting was called for the purpose of receiving the resignation of Chairman Claudius H. Huston of the national committee and the subsequent installation of the Fess-Lucas regime, that part of the conference already has become a matter of mere routine.

The real business will be to caucus on the situation confronting the party, to discuss the way in which te nation regards the Hoover administration and to exchange opinions about what, if anything, should be done.

Wedding Not To Separate Eva and Topsy

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 6.—(UP)—It will take more than wedding bells to separate "Eva" from her "Topsy."

The world was definitely informed of this today by Vivian Duncan, "white" half of the famous sister team and bride of Nils Asther, Swedish moving picture star.

Vivian and Rosetta will start work in a new play early in November. The bride and groom planned to leave here shortly for Santa Monica, where they will make their future home. They have been honeymooning at Lake Tahoe, Nev., following their recent marriage at Reno.

HEAD OF CHINA TROOPS TURNS IN RESIGNATION

Shanghai Bankers Demand Termination of Civil War In 30 Days

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Aug. 6.—(UP)—A telegram received by an American firm here today from its Nanking representative said Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the National government, had submitted his resignation for consideration of the state council. The advices were not confirmed from other sources.

Chiang Kai-Shek, who gained the leadership of China's military and civil forces in the successful Nationalist campaign two years ago, recently has been called upon to resign by the northern rebel leaders at Peiping.

Chiang, youthful and modern, has been endangered by the northern armies from Peiping and simultaneously by the raids of Chinese communist forces in Hunan and other provinces in the Yangtze region, where reports today indicated a checking of looting and massacres around Changsha.

At various times in the past the young war-lord who was charged by his enemies with corrupt and prejudiced administration has been re-

ARRANGE FUNERAL OF FAMOUS PADRE

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Funeral arrangements were being made today for Father Ramon M. Mestres, "padre of the restoration," who performed the wedding ceremony for President and Mrs. Hoover at Monterey, Calif., in 1899. He died here last evening at a sanatorium.

The father's friendship for the president began when Mrs. Hoover, then Lou Henry, was teacher in the public school at Monterey, and the president was "courting" her. He gained the undying affection of Mrs. Hoover when he converted his church into a school room when the local institution of learning was burned down.

RADICAL TO TAKE STAND THIS WEEK

Attorney Declares He Does Not Believe Witnesses Coached in 1916 Trial

FICKERT WILL TALK

Prosecutor in First Trial To Take Stand and Tell What He Knows of Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Although insisting that false testimony played an important part, Edwin V. McKenzie, attorney for Warren K. Billings, told the California supreme court today that he did not believe that witnesses had been coached in the murder trials of Billings and Thomas J. Mooney.

The attorney outlined his position to the court shortly after today's session of a hearing on a pardon application for Billings opened.

Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, was the first witness called today. He told the hearing that he believed San Francisco prosecutors and police had "framed" Mooney and Billings in connection with the preparedness day bombing July 22, 1916 in which 10 persons were killed.

It was at this point that McKenzie stated his position, denying that a "frame-up" had occurred, although insisting that, in his opinion, there had been a miscarriage of justice in the trials of Billings and Mooney in 1916 and 1917.

Billings, who has been in Folsom since his conviction, was not in the court room, indicating that the seven members of the court have decided to call him the latter part of this week or early next week.

Late yesterday McKenzie received permission to call Billings as a witness in his own behalf. Secrecy surrounds the time Billings will be called but undoubtedly it will be soon.

A set-back for the pardon hopes of Billings and Mooney was seen in a declaration of Edward A. Cunha, former assistant district attorney under Charles M. Fickert, the man who prosecuted and convicted Mooney and Billings.

"Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings are guilty and were justly convicted of the preparedness day bombing and do not deserve pardons," Cunha told the United Press as today's hearing got underway.

Cunha declared he had proof to to support his assertions. He will be called later in the day as a witness.

Fickert, known as the "thunderbolt," will follow his former assistant on the stand, Fred L. Berry, another of Fickert's assistants in the original prosecutions, acted as examiner today as a special representative of the people.

ST. LOUIS FLIERS IN AIR 389 HOURS

ST. LOUIS., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Although Dale Jackson, endurance flier, suffered from a cold, the monoplane Greater St. Louis droned in circles over Lambert St. Louis field today, Jackson determined his illness would not conflict with the attempt to break the Hunter brothers' record of 553 hours of continuous flight.

Forest O'Brine, companion of Jackson, was ready to act as nurse, and work a double shift if Jackson felt he needed additional sleep. The fliers messaged today, however, that Jackson's cold "is slight," and probably would not force them down.

At 12:11 p. m. the plane had been in continuous flight for 389 hours.

MARKETS OPENED

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Aug. 6.—(UP)—The recent European conference ending the sound picture patent controversy opened world markets to both German and American films, President Will H. Hays of the Motion Picture Producer's and Distributors' of America said in a statement today. The agreement will permit producers of all nations to obtain licenses under both German and American patents.

File $100,000 Damage Suit Over Child's Death

BUS ACCIDENT AT SCHOOL IS BASIS OF CASE

An echo of the death of Mildred L. Taylor, 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis G. Taylor, who was crushed by a school bus at the Ocean View school last March, was heard in the courthouse today, when it was learned that the parents had filed suit for $100,000 against the school district, trustees and bus driver.

The suit, which was filed yesterday afternoon, alleges that the driver, Harry Letson, as an agent for the school district, drove upon the school ground in a careless and negligent manner, on the day of the accident, and that he had been doing so for some time with the knowledge and consent of the members of the board of trustees, William S. Preston, Wellington De La Verne and Vernon C. Heil. The claim also is made in the complaint that no effort was made to prevent this alleged practice, to which is attributed the accident causing the death of the pupil.

It is asserted that through the negligent and careless operation of the school bus the plaintiffs lost the custody, society and earnings of their daughter to their damage in the amount of $100,000, which amount is asked for the asserted wrongful death of the child.

GOUVERNEUR, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Clue Carr, a painter by vocation, has taken up bee raising as an avocation. While sitting on his front porch Carr heard a strange buzzing sound. Investigation led him to the chimney in the rear of his home, here he found a large swarm of bees. Now he gathers honey and sells it in the village.

plan, which he discussed last week in a speech dedicating a new airport at Bay City, Mich.

It is not known how soon the general board will reach a decision in the matter as many of its members have left the city. Some opposition is expected to develop, however, as several board members are known to oppose the airplane as an adjunct to the battle fleet.

If the program is approved and authorized by congress 550 of the 1000 planes would be apportioned among the five new carriers, presumably to be built out of the 69,000 tons allotted under the treaty; among the 25 per cent of cruisers allowed to be equipped with landing decks; among the new super-dirigibles, ZRS-4 and ZRS-5, and possibly among the V-type fleet submarines, which may be remodeled to carry a plane apiece.

The rest of the planes would be held in reserve.

MRS. FITTS TALKS AT MEETING HERE

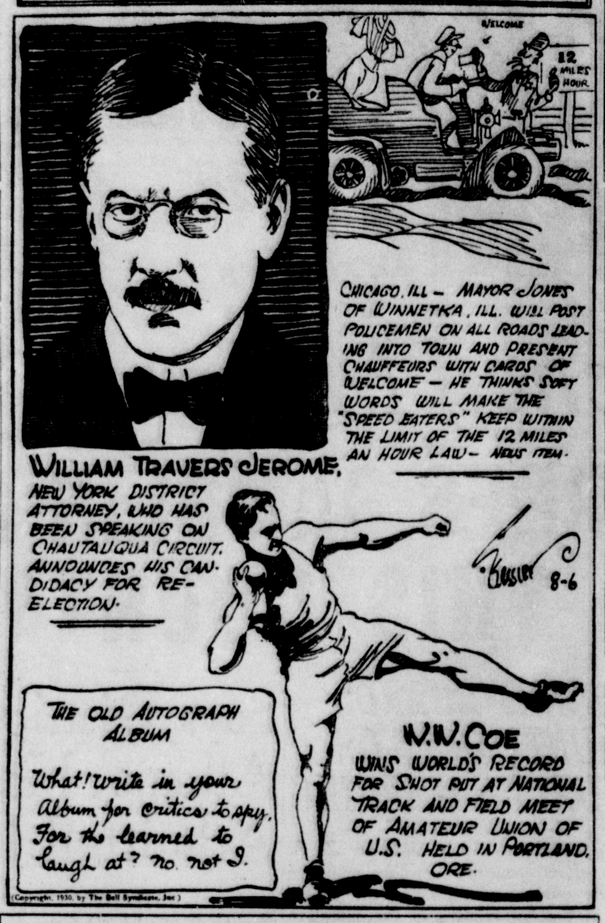

More than 200 residents of Santa Ana and Orange county gave an enthusiastic welcome to Mrs. Buron Fitts, wife of the Los Angeles candidate for governor, and two other workers in the campaign, as a reception given yesterday at the Santa Ana Ebell club.

Illness prevented the mother of Fitts from being present. Mrs. Fitts gave a short talk during the reception, as did Mrs. Ethel Hearst, who made the trip with Mrs. Fitts and Dr. C. D. Ball, president of the Orange county Fitts for Governor club. Mrs. Martha Becker, chairman of the women's division of the Southern California Buron Fitts for Governor club, was the other guest.

Arrangements for the affair were in charge of Mrs. Emma Chapman, chairman of the Orange country club. Punch and wafers were served to the men and women who attended the event.

There is to be another conference on the matter at the office of O'Melveney next Friday, and Supervisor John C. Mitchell, of Garden Grove, and County Purchasing Agent F. W. Slabaugh, were designated to represent Orange county at this conference.

The property, which it is proposed to acquire jointly by the state and county for the creation of a state park to be improved and maintained by the state, consists of 12,400 feet (approximately two and one-third miles) of ocean frontage, and 344 acres of back land.

Owners are Hanson Moore, whose holdings consist of 3361 feet of beach and 99.86 acres, which he values at $436,080; Harold G. Ferguson corporation, 1500 feet of beach, $150,000; Willow Land company, 7600 feet of beach, $760,000; A. C. Thorne, 114 acres, $57,000; and Pacific Ranch company, 130 acres, $65,000. There also is a strip of 45 feet of beach owned by the Pacific home, valued at $4500 in the owners' statement of values. The total valuation of the property as claimed by the owners is $1,472,580.

The price set by the county appraisal board of five men and the appraisal company engaged by the state park board is itemized as follows: beach frontage owned by Moore, Ferguson and the Willow company, $496,000; acreage owned by Moore, Thorne and the Pacific company, as follows, Moore, $50,000; Thorne, $37,050; Pacific ranch, $37,750.

Talbert, in addressing the board, stated that the price offered was a shocking disappointment to the property owners, pointed out that the site was centrally located and was ideal for a beach park and urged that negotiations be started for reaching a price agreeable to the owners.

Workman asserted that the appraisal was so low that the owners were dumbfounded and felt that it was too low to even start negotiations. He called the attention of the board to purchases of beach frontage that are being made in Los Angeles county at prices greatly in excess of the price of $40 per front foot, which is the price on which the appraisal is based.

When Workman asked what was the attitude of the board on the matter, Supervisor Schumacher asserted that they would be unable to face the people of the county on any other figure than that returned by the appraisers. Chairman Willard Smith advised Workman that the matter had been left in the hands of O'Melveney by the board.

cigaret board and another merchandise board.

24 Punch Boards

At Place No. 6, there were 24 punch boards counted under one roof. There are several businesses in the one place and many of them were equipped with boards.

At place No. 7, there were six boards. One was a big money board, paying $50 top prize, watch board, with smaller cash prizes on the same board; cigaret boards and other merchandising boards. It was at this place that the proprietor said he had heard that the boards were "going to have to go." Asked if he really thought so, he replied: "Sure, they'll get them this time."

At place No. 8, there was only one money board and one cigaret board. The man behind the counter there stated that he didn't care much about the money boards, that he would rather keep the merchandising boards as he believed they brought trade.

"Grabbing the boards will put a lot of little fellows out of business," one drug store operator said today when talking about the board. "There are a lot of those little fellows that make all their money that way," he said.

The present critical position of the administration recently has made his position less secure than at any time since the Nationalist armies drove northward to complete "the unification" of China under the republic.

of a candidate must meet the approval of the voters.

"A candidate who refuses to criticise the things he believes to be wrong is not a fit man to have in the important office of district attorney. If he does not have the courage of his convictions; if he does not have 'backbone' enough to definitely come out against those things which are wrong, as a candidate, then he does not have 'backbone' enough to stand up for the things he believes to be right and proper after he gets into office.

Law Enforcement

"We have had a great deal to say during the past few weeks concerning the question of law enforcement. Law enforcement is one of the big issues of this present campaign. And along this line I wish to say a word or two about the situation which has developed in Orange county in respect to punch boards and slot machines. Many have thought it strange that in Orange county such devices can be used, while in other counties of the state, including the populous county of Los Angeles, they are banned. A friend of mine a few days ago told me that when he stopped at a gas station just this side of the Los Angeles county line, he spoke to the operator concerning the operation of punch boards, and the operator stated:

"'Well, you know this is Orange county. I couldn't use such boards if I were on the other side of the line.'

"Conditions are such that checks and money are used as prizes, and there has been no effort even to disguise the fact that it is open gambling. In some places of business there are as many as eight boards.

Raid Called Off

"A few days ago, according to reports, it was planned to make a raid on punch boards and slot machines. The raid, however, was postponed from time to time, the last postponement being until Monday of this week. On last Sunday, an important and interesting meeting was held. I have not been able to learn the names of all who were present, but I am reliably informed that one of the chief owners of punch boards was present and ways and means were discussed. I do know that on the following day, that is last Monday, the raid was called off and the district attorney of this county issued a letter in which he said that he wanted the various city attorneys and chiefs of police to come together in order to talk over the situation. In his letter, however, the district attorney states that the operators of punch boards were violating the law.

The law is being violated. The district attorney has said so. But punch boards continue and they are running wide open in this city and in this county tonight.

"A judge, in discussing the situation in Chicago, spoke of a 'reasonable understanding.' Meetings which are held, followed by action, or a failure to act, indicate frequently that a 'reasonable understanding' has been reached.

"Any understanding 'reasonable' or otherwise, between law enforcement officials and those whose special interests are opposed to law enforcement, should cease, and I promise the voters of Orange county that if elected district attorney it will not be a question with me, of who is going to be injured, or who will suffer, but the only question will be, has a crime been commited and who is guilty? When we have the evidence, prosecution will result, regardless of who the defendant is or what his connections may be.

"The district attorney's office must be divorced from political control. The district attorney is not the attorney of a privileged few. He is the attorney for the entire people, and it is not meet and proper that a district attorney should be at the beck and call of a few professional politicians.

No Affiliation

"I have no connection with any political ring or faction. I am under no obligations to any group. The thing I am interested in is the rights of the people. Their rights are supreme; they are more sacred to me than the rights of a privileged few. I am willing to risk my entire political future upon the proposition that I would rather be a servant of the masses than the tool of a few politicians. If elected to office I wish to be in a position to call my soul my own and to do the thing I consider right. I do not wish to keep my ears to the ground. I want to be free of entangling alliances and influence. I do not wish to be a party to any 'reasonable understanding.'

"Expressing such views, is it any wonder that I am an undesirable 'district attorney' as far as politicians are concerned? They wish some one in office who can be moulded to their will; they want some one to take orders and obey commands. Hence their cry, 'Why a change?' There are some candidates who are favorably known in political circles. They can be depended upon by politicians. Why a change in the district attorney's office?

"Now is the golden opportunity to clean out the district attorney's office. Now is the time to divorce the district attorney's office from political control. Let's have a new deal. It is time to make a change"

Driver Credited With Preventing Deaths In Crash

When C. W. Hensley, of San Pedro, driver of the Pacific Greyhound bus that turned over south of San Clemente yesterday, cut off the electric switch, he undoubetely saved the passengers from serious burns and possible death, according to an opinion expressed today.

The bus was going south at the time of the accident. A car was coming directly in the path of the stage and to avoid striking the car, Hensley swung the bus to the side of the highway. The wheels struck a pile of concrete and the steering knuckle was broken. Out of control, the big machine lunged forward and then turned over. The top was torn off but otherwise the bus was not seriously damaged.

Because the driver turned off the switch the machine did not catch fire. Eight of the passengers and Hensley were cut and bruised.

For use with electric radio sets a twin lightning arrester has been invented, one side preventing lightning entering from an aerial and the other through the light wires.

$29 wouldn't go far toward a vacation trip, but it will buy a Dixie Weave Suit that will make the rest of the summer a time of comfort at home.

The veil between this world and the next is not impenetrable even though the human mind and heart lack the power to proceed far into the mysteries of the Beyond.

You have enough data to make you absolutely sure that your loved one lives in a state of fuller knowledge, deeper understanding and richer joys.

Your own experience with love assures you that those who have gone to Paradise must know and share your eager endeavor to live worthily in the hope of the joyous reunion which the Christ has promised.

Cherish this conviction and live at your best. The time will not be long.

GETS $334,601 IN FIRST POOL OF VALENCIAS

This season's citrus crop will bring a net return of approximately $900,000 to the packing house of the Orange Mutual Citrus association at Orange, it was estimated today by F. L. Finley, manager, when he announced that the net proceeds at the house from the first pool, which closed July 1, were $334,601.58.

The first pool will bring to many of the growers a net price of over seven cents per pound, Finley stated. Finley said he was well pleased with the prices received and that they were better than those of last year at this time.

The first pool opened on April 21 and contained 139 cars of 462 boxes per car. The average price per packed box was $5.19 and the average price per field box at the house was $3.49, according to Finley.

The packing house is now working on the second pool, which will close on August 15 and which will contain approximately 60 cars of fruit, the manager stated, pointing out that there still are approximately 100 cars of valencias to be shipped. He said it still was too early to make any predictions about the navel orange crop.

The Orange Mutual Citrus association ships between 75 and 90 cars of lemons yearly. The estimate of $900,000 net returns at the house for this year's crop includes both oranges and lemons, Finley stated.

LUCAS SCORES SUPERVISORS ON CARRILLO CASE AND FOR ACTION ON COUNTY PRINTING

At a meeting held by the Lucas for Supervisor club of Paularino at Santa Ana Gardens last night, Lucas was introduced by the chairman as the man to whom a great part of the credit was due for the defeat of the water conservation bonds a year ago. Lucas replied that that was not the only matter in which the board of supervisors had acted in an unbusinesslike way.

He mentioned the Carrillo case, where the board stood pat behind Carrillo in spite of more than a score of affidavits, and the presence of some 40 witnesses. Again, in the suit for slander in which Carrillo sued a county editor, the case was dismissed on technical grounds which were apparently good law, but which prevented the public from reading the testimony ready to be heard and thus being able to form an opinion on the guilt of Carrillo, and his exoneration by the board of supervisors.

Also the matter of the county printing, for which the board is accused of spending some thousands of the taxpayers' money, more than is necessary for this year's official advertising, was mentioned.

"In conclusion," Lucas said, "it has been reported to me that the workers of one of my own competitors have made the statement: that Lucas was just a poor fellow, and the reason he was running was because he wanted a job.' Be that as it may," continued Lucas, "when has it become a crime for a poor man to aspire to office in Orange county?"

When asked how he stood on public beaches, Lucas said "that he was now interested in this matter along the coast in the southern part of the county, in which it appeared that the supervisors had not had the interest of the citizens at heart, inasmuch as the approach to one piece of public beach had been closed to the public, and in another instance some two miles of county highway had been abandoned. In both occasions those benefitting were large subdividers and promoters. I do not mean that I believe that all the beach should be public, but I certainly think that we now have not a sufficient proportion of the beach available for public use, and I am sure that what we have should be conserved and added to as occasion warrants."

Asked about secret meetings of the supervisors in which no discussion was publically made, the reply was that one of the fundamental planks of his platform was directed against such proceedings.

Mr. Moody, who was present, told of the work being done by the People's league in procuring data about all candidates in the field for the various offices. Such information of a public character as the investigators had been able to find, had been compiled and was available to all voters who wished to call at their office at 228 Spurgeon building, he said. He remarked that they had found nothing to the discredit of Lucas, possibly because apparently he never had held office. About 60 were present.

CANDIDATES TO BE GUESTS OF BREAKFASTERS

Practically every candidate for county office in this section will be presented at the meeting of the Santa Ana Breakfast club at St. Ann's inn at 7:15 a. m. tomorrow, according to an announcement today by Earl Morrow, who is in charge of invitations to the affair.

Each candidate will be introduced so that those present may become acquainted with the office-seekers, but there will be no speeches, Morrow pointed out. Mrs Clara Shortridge Foltz, candidate for nomination for governor, will be introduced by Judge F. C. Drumm. The other candidates for governor were extended invitations but sent their regrets because of prior engagements. Upton Sinclair, socialist candidate, said that he might be present, however.

"Noodles" Fagan, noted screen character, will introduce the candidates with the assistance of Norman Sprowl, manager of the Fox theaters in Santa Ana, who secured Fagan for the occasion.

In addition to the candidates, editors of newspapers throughout the county, secretaries and presidents of chambers of commerce, and political leaders have been invited to be present. Reservations for the affair will be made today, Morrow said. Entertainment will be provided under the direction of Eugene Kahen and will include music by the Elks orchestra.

INSURANCE IS PURCHASED FOR COUNTY AUTOS

Included in action taken by the board of supervisors yesterday at the regular weekly meeting of the county governing body at the court house was purchase of liability insurance for the county fleet of motor vehicles, consideration of requests for purchase of two autos, and two appropriations from the advertising fund. The board also heard an explanation from Judge F. C. Drumm as to why the maintenance district proposed for Dana Point was the only one that would work satisfactorily.

The public liability and property damage insurance matter, which has been before the board for the past two weeks, was settled when Mrs. Arthur Yarbrough, of Fullerton, withdrew her bid. There were two bids of the same amount, both in the same company, and the only solution which seemingly could be reached, as the other company would not consent to share the commissions, was to re-advertise for bids. Time would not permit this without leaving the cars unprotected for a period of two weeks, according to Dr. F. W. Slabaugh, purchasing agent, who presented the matter to the board, and Mrs. Yarbrough withdrew her bid. The contract was then awarded to the Union Indemnity company A. S. Ralph, agent, at a price of $2769.39. The high bid for the insurance was $6900, Dr. Slabaugh stated.

Requests for autos were made by the probation and flood control departments. The request o fthe flood control was granted, while that of the probation department was taken under advisement. Purchase of a truck for the road department at $3430 also was approved. Appropriations made were of $1000 to the California state chamber of commerce and $250 to the Brea post of the American Legion for the annual rodeo planned for the last of August.

A contract with John E. Berman was approved by the board and signed by Chairman Willard Smith, providing for furnishing water from the lines at Irvine park for use on a miniature golf course at a rate of $1.25 per 1000 feet.

On the maintenance district matter Judge Drumm explained that while there are many homes at Dana Point, they are not maintained as residences by the owners and that possibly only 10 signatures of resident free holders could be obtained to a petition to form a district in the manner which the board is accustomed to handling these matters. The petition under the form which the board usually works requires the signatures of 25 resident free holders. He pointed out that there was a need for the maintenance district and that the plan previously submitted was the only one under which it could be obtained with the present status of affairs.

Judge Drumm also informed the board that he would appear in the future to ask the formation of a sanitary district under the same plan.

Supervisor Charles Chapman inquired what percentage of the property was sold by the Dana Point company and was informed that approximately 50 per cent in the district to be formed was owned by the company. Chapman explained that he asked this so that he might know how the interests of the public were represented in the matter. Dana Point representatives assured the board that they could bring the signatures of many property owners before the board at the time of the hearing, approving the matter, and were asked to do so.

Receive $527,161 For 215 Cars Of Valencia Oranges

Returns of $527,161 on 215 cars of fruit were reported today by Frank H. Collins, manager of the Consolidated Orange Growers, Orange.

The fruit comprised pool No. 1, which opened April 28 and closed June 26.

The packing plant is now working on pool No. 2, scheduled to close August 15. Approximately 150 cars will be represented in the second pool.

The association expects to ship approximately 175 cars after the conclusion of the second pool,, Collins stated.

The manager expressed himself as highly pleased with the new pre-cooling plant of the association, which was completed just before the opening of the 1930 season. The building has a capacity of 60 cars of oranges.

OSCAR BLANCO TO APPEAR AT BAND CONCERT

BY RUTH ANDREWS

Music lovers of this vicinity will welcome the announcement that as a special feature of the "Russian Night" concert program, scheduled for presentation in Birch park tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock under the direction of D. C. Cianfoni, Oscar Blanco, formerly leading tenor of the Roumanian Royal Opera company, will be heard in a group of typical Russian songs.

Blanco is a favorite operatic tenor, with international reputation. He has sung in grand opera in Europe with such companies as the Berlin Opera company, the Bucharest Royal Opera company, and also in concert. In this country he sang with the Capital Opera company of Illinois, the Chicago Grand Opera company and the St. Louis Municipal Opera company, and later was engaged by the Loew's State theaters as a special attraction.

In Los Angeles Blanco has appeared at the Shrine auditorium and the big production "Hear, O Israel," as the principal soloist. He has a rich tenor voice with an exceptionally fine range.

At the present time Blanco is filling importane engagements in the Hollywood studios, M. G. M., Universal, United Artists and Paramount, singing in various languages. Those who have heard him broadcast over station KFI will probably remember having heard him.

Blanco's offering on tomorrow night's program will consist of Russian folk songs.

In addition to the Russian song group, a colorful Russian ballet furnished through the courtesy of the Claire Coutant School of Dancing will be seen in the characteristic Russian dance form, "The Czarina." Participants in this ballet will include Vera Getty, Lorren MacMillan, Nadine Ogden, Florence Rios, Thelma Trickey, Eileen Edwardson, Lorraine Turk and Le Vene Parks, also Thomas Carl Sutton.

It is anticipated that this dancing feature will add novelty to the unique program.

Among many especially characteristic Russian masterpieces to be rendered by the band will be the famous symphonic work, "Marche Slave" by Peter Tschaikowsky. In this work the composer speaks for all Slavs, and it has been said by critics that no work could be more thoroughly slavic in feeling and expression. The "Marche Slave" was written exactly a century after the American Declaration of Independence, during the war between Turkey and Siberia. Its premiere was given at a concert arranged for the benefit of the wounded.

NOTED TENOR

Oscar Blanco, formerly leading tenor with the Roumanian Royal Opera company and with prominent opera organizations in this country, will sing Russian folk songs tomorrow night in the concert to be presented by the Santa Ana Municipal band.

SERVICES FOR MISS WALKER ON THURSDAY

ANAHEIM, Aug. 6.—The entire community was saddened yesterday to learn of the death of Miss Elizabeth Walker, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas H. Walker.

Miss Walker was stricken Sunday afternoon while sojourning with her parents at their cabin in the San Bernardino mountains near Camp Baldy. She had not been subject to heart trouble and it was at first thought that she was suffering from acute indigestion. Her condition, however, grew worse and she was taken to the San Antonio Community hospital in Upland, where she passed away Monday afternoon without ever having regained consciousness.

The deceased came to Anaheim nine years ago with her parents from Los Angeles where the Rev. Mr. Walker was pastor of the Hollenbeck Heights Presbyterian church, coming to California 17 years ago from Baltimore, Maryland.

During her residence here Miss Walker had lived a most active life. She had for the past four years been teaching music and art in the Roosevelt school, Santa Ana. She taught a senior high school class in the Presbyterian Sunday school and for several years had acted as advisor to the Anaheim union high school Girl Reserves.

Besides her parents, Miss Walker leaves one sister, Mrs. S. K. Burgess, of Los Angeles, and four brothers, Thomas H. jr., Paul S. and Donald W., all of Los Angeles, and Kenneth, at home.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the church, with burial in the family plot in Fairhaven cemetery, Santa Ana.

Members of the Girl Reserves and alumni will attend services in a body, wearing their white uniforms with Girl Reserve ties.

YACHTING NEWS

BY STAURT LUCAS

The morning of the second day of the twin regattas opened with some fog but towards noon the sea breeze had cleared it all away.

As the preparatory gun was fired a 12-mile breeze from west-by-south ruffled the surface, and the absence of ground swells for the last few days permitted the deep blue of the channel to extend almost to the shore.

The two big classes, who started first, were sent away on a special course extending from the starting line to a mark off Huntington Beach pier and return, about 16 miles. With the wind as it was, it made an ideal windward and leeward course. At the start of the race, the Endymion came down to the line at the time of the start of the previous class. The Teva was really starting and poked her jibboom through the dinghy of the Endymion. No damage was done either boat other than the smashed tender.

Some of the boats sailed the proper course and some went around the course prescribed for the smaller boats, and secured no points for the race, but the sailing was good and the crews that went around the triangle twice had a lot of practice in handling the light sails, that will do them a lot of good, and that was denied the brothers that sailed the straightaway.

The star class, as usual, furnished the thrills of the day. Getting away to a perfect start, Webster, in Tom Robin, the winner of yesterday, bid fair to repeat. Keith, in the All Star, was second over, with Plumb, in Westmind, third. At the weather mark Hubbard, in Tempe, had worked into the lead, with Beardslee, in Moira, second, and Bill Lyons, in Veza, third. Keith had dropped to seventh and Plumb to eighth. Dan Murphy had drawn up into his favorite position of fourth and Cheesewright, in the Arrow, was fifth. This order was maintained throughout the first lap but in the second round Keith passed Murphy and Cheesewright on the run home and secured fourth, beating Murphy by one second and Cheesewright by 10. Hubbard never was headed after the first leg, when he secured the lead by a wonderful exhibition of pinching, as he approached the first mark. He increased his lead all the way round and passed all the P. C. boats but one and he gained over four minutes on her.

The San Diego boys consider the P. C. class the "works," but they not only have an extra 100 feet of sail area and have to give the stars time,, but yesterday's race shows conclusively that the stars are faster, in light weather at least.

PLAYFUL BOYS MISTAKEN FOR DOPE RUNNERS

Dope smuggling into Orange county via airplane having been the topic of conversation early Monday night at the sheriff's office while several officers waited for calls, the mysterious flashing of lights near El Toro, several hours later, when Chief Criminal Deputy Sheriff F. W. Howard and Deputy Jess Buckles were on a call to San Juan Capistrano, immediately caused them to stop and investigate.

The flashes were so regular, so true, that Howard and Buckles had dit all figured out that the dope runners had landed. They started up the hill, guns in hand, toward the lights. Cautiously they crawled, for dope runners are wary sort of persons and the slightest sound might mean their getaway.

The officers even crawled the last 50 yards on their stomachs. Then raising up they lunged at two dark shadows. The shadows were two small 14 year old boys, who were whiling away the time before going to sleep by playing with a flashlight.

Instead of dope runners, they were just kids, guarding a lot of grain. They had selected a straw pile in which to stand duty.

Had the boys known how foolish the officers felt they probably wouldn't have been so frightened. Report of the investigation was not made at the sheriff's office.

Lathrop Playground

The boys' elementary indoor team played the Edison boys on Monday and were defeated. They have been having bad luck all season but are not willing to give up yet.

Lathrop has been host to three croquet tournaments. Tuesday was elementary girls' singles, Wednesday was elementary boys' doubles, and Thursday was elementary girls' doubles.

The points have been more than piling up. There are several children ready for silver and gold certificates. There are some who will soon be ready for their playground monograms.

Lincoln Playgrounds

Lincoln challenges any playground to match its record. During the previous week it won six out of the eight croquet championships, won two league and three practice baseball games, and issued six silver and four gold certificates.

Lincoln playground led in money taken in through pageant ticket sales.

Lincoln's girls' indoor team challenges any or all girls' teams at the various playgrounds.

The elementary boys' baseball team established a city record when only 23 Edison boys went to bat against them Wednesday in seven innings. Youel and Partis allowed but one hit, Lincoln winning 10 to 0.

Al Cass and Bob Schwarm have won two doubles city titles and will be gunning for their third in paddle tennis.

The handwork is going along nicely. Everyone seems to be very enthusiastic on the pillow tops and paper belts. The junior high girls are working on the playground scrapbook.

Lowell Playground

At the Lowell playground assembly on Wednesday, silver certificates were presented to the following persons: Norma Area, Beryl Bates, Colleen Block, Neal Gammell, Eleanor Henry, Enola Lundack, Norma Lundack, Ralph Lambert, Helen Tart, Eugene Tart, Margaret Shane, Wesley Ewell, Sedalia Lundack, Irene Lundack. Roosevelt Playground

The Roosevelt Rough Riders defeated the Fremont team 14 to 3 in the league game. By doing so Roosevelt still holds first by winning four straight games in the junior playground league. Smoke Gregory struck out 11 batters to keep his average strikeouts to 12 a game.

Farm Centers Of Orange County To Meet August 15th

A meeting of the Farm center officers will be held on the night of August 15 at the American Legion hall, Orange. A questionnaire prepared by the Orange County Farm bureau was sent out to the Farm center officers, which will form the basis of the program.

The questionnaire deals with the problems and future plans of the district to which it was sent. There are 11 different Farm centers which will be represented.

In a letter sent by Roland D. Flaherty, secretary of the Farm bureau, to Farm center officers, along with the questionnaire, a survey of the principal crops was quoted, which shows that the major income in the county comes from oranges, lemons, walnuts, lima beans, avocados, dairy products, poultry, sugar beets, peppers, grain and cattle.

The letter stated that the major problems at this time center around water, taxation, public utility questions, agricultural education and fire control.

Supervisors Act On Protection Of Funds Of County

Decision was made by the board of supervisors yesterday to substitute a return of securities bond for the protection of securities from theft or loss in the office of the county treasurer, in place of the burglary and robbery policies that have been carried in the past.

It was pointed out that protection on approximately $300,000 worth of additional securities could be carried at the same cost as at present and that rate on burglary and robbery insurance was constantly increasing. The bond was placed with the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Maryland, through Swales and Farwell, but commissions are to be split at all times in the future with all insurance agents now carrying the burglary and robbery policies, in proportion to the amount they handled.

Is Bound Over On Booze Count

Following arraignment before Judge A. C. Eearley at La Habra yesterday, Francisco Marron was bound over to the superior court charged with violating his parole from the county jail, following his arrest Sunday by Constable William Tremaine on a possession charge.

Marron was arrested over a year ago for having operated a still in the La Habra Mexican camp and had served considerable time in the county jail, being out now on parole. A keg containing two gallons of whiskey was found in his possession where he was arrested. Tremaine said.

Belen Gonzalez was arrested with Marron and pleaded guilty yesterday in Judge Earley's court to a possession charge. He was fined $50.

Police News

Charged with being drunk, N. E. Jones, 53, of 122 Orange avenue, was arrested at First and French treets Monday night. He was lodged in the county jail.

J. B. Barker, 50, was arrested in the rear of 2435 Riverside drive early Monday night on a vagrancy charge. Police found him "camping" on the river bank, they reported.

W. A. Stump, of 378 South Orange avenue, reported the theft of his automobile Monday night from a place where he parked it on Third street between Birch and Ross streets.

Sleeper Answers Attack Of Opponent In Placentia

CANDIDATES IN TALKS BEFORE C. OF C. TUESDAY

PLACENTIA, Aug. 6.—Political talks enlivened the luncheon meeting of the Placentia Chamber of Commerce yesterday, with County Assessor James Sleeper and Hugh Miller, campaign manager for Leo Porter, candidate for sheriff, providing the fireworks.

Sleeper was the principal speaker of the day, answering statements of his opponent, George Montgomery of Anaheim, made at last week's meeting of the Placentia Chamber of Commerce. Miller, in a speech as brief as it was scathing, labeled as "criminal" a comment printed in last week's issue of the Placentia Courier to the effect that Leo Porter was reported to be spending $10,000 on his campaign.

Praises Candidate

Mrs. Belle Spangler, candidate for county tax collector, was praised in a short talk given by Mrs. J. V. Kelsey of Garden Grove, prominent P.-T. A. worker of Orange county.

"I have known Mrs. Spangler for a number of years, having worked with her on a number of committees, while I was county president of the P.-T. A. and she was county chairman of the supervised playground work," Mrs. Kelsey said.

"In every phase of her work she was very faithful and loyal and she will bring the same loyalty, the same faithfulness to the office of tax collector."

Mrs. Kelsey, as a member of the fair board, told something of the activities of the board.

Others present who spoke were Harley Brewer of Fullerton, candidate for constable of the Fullerton township; Mrs. Spangler, Leo Porter and Ralph McFadden, both candidates for sheriff; W. Birkel of Anaheim, who was introduced because he had the distniction of not being a candidate for anything.

Mrs. Kelsey-Sleeper Speaks

Sleeper, who was introduced by President A. S. Bradford, explained his reason for being there, and said, "Mr. Montgomery, to the best of my knowledge, has never been in my office; and yet he can tell me more about the business of the county assessor than I can after more than 20 years in the position. In answering Mr. Montgomery, I have prepared a speech based on concrete figures and not vague assertions."

"In replying to the talk made before your body last Tuesday by Mr. Montgomery, candidate for county assessor, I want to state that he made a great many vague assertions about the way I conduct the assessor's office. Why all these underhanded assertions? Why didn't he have his manager and advisor bring these matters before the board of equalization, which it was his duty to do, and insist that he subpoena these big interests before that board and show cause why their assessments should not be raised and equalized with other property? Why was it that no member of the late grand jury came before the board and asked to have the assessments of the big fellows raised? I can tell you why. Neither he nor the members of the late grand jury could show by the assessments that any big interests were favored by the assessments or in any other way. It begins to look to me as if some of the big interests are back of him and his manager and advisor to get me because they can not handle me.

$2,720,740 Value

"It was told around the north end of the county a few weeks ago that a certain oil tank farm near Cypress cost $13,000,000 and that I had assessed it for less than $3,000,000. I assessed this tank farm for $2,720,740, which was a just assessment and Mr. Montgomery's manager knows it. As a matter of fact I think that Mr. Montgomery and his manager and advisor are more interested in the vote of the taxpayer than they are in his financial welfare.

"Mr. Montgomery told you that the assessor's office is conducted in an inefficient manner. He cannot point to an assessor's office in this state that has a better set of records and maps than the assessor's office of this county. Ask the state board of equalization, the state controller or any government inheritance tax agent and they will verify my statement as they deal with all county assessors in the state. He told you of all the wrong things I have done in the assessor's office, but none of the good things as he was not looking for them. I will give you a few of the things I have done that are worth while to the taxpayer and which you should know about. When I became assessor of this county there were but three pieces of oil property assessed for as much as $100 per acre, some land with wells flowing 600 barrels per day assessed at $37 per acre. The same property today is assessed in the thousands of dollars per acre. He did not tell you that there was one oil company in the county which has averaged a tax for the past 10 years greater than the total paid by all the taxpayers of Orange county in 1910 the year before I became your assessor. This same company (Standard Oil company) has paid me for their mineral right tax in the past 10 years $5,108,533.70 and this does not include their real estate, wells, pipe lines, gasoline plants, service stations, shops and other equipment. He did not tell you that 10 of our largest oil companies paid in taxes in 1929 $1,210,686.75. He did not tell you that the Irvine company in 1910 paid a tax of $24,217.73 and in 1929 paid a tax of $205,938.72, they having sold off several thousand acres since 1910."

Hits Article

Sleeper was preceded by Hugh Miller, who said, "I have come here to undertake one of the most unpleasant tasks I have had to perform. Some time ago Henry Schmidt, of Buena Park, and Frank Rospaw, of Placentia, came to the office of Leo Porter, and said that if more campaign advertising did not come to their papers, they would start swinging for McFadden.

"They were told that Porter had no money for campaign advertising, and went away. Then in the August 1 issue of the Placentia Courier this statement appeared: "There is a report that Leo Porter's office is spending $10,000 in the sheriff campaign. None for newspaper advertising. Just wait and see how this checks up when the votes are counted.' I brand this statement as criminal, for while I believe he is entitled to spend $800 on the campaign, he is not spending $10,000 nor has he it to spend. We submit the entire case to the people of Placentia, and we offer our candidate as a man and not as newspaper advertising."

James Tuffree, Ralph McFadden and Louis Jacobsen reported on the Associated Chamber of Commerce committee meeting in regard to the junior college survey, Harry Hale summing up the situation as follows: "Since the Placentia Chamber of Commerce kicked the junior college football into the Associated Chamber of Commerce, some four or five years ago, it has been continually kicked about and it about time they got hold of it and held it down. Fullerton and Santa Ana have nothing to lose except a few professors, for the junior colleges are using high school equipment and in any case what is best for the county as a whole should be considered."

BOARD REFUSES APPLICATION OF CLEANING FIRM

FULLERTON, Aug. 6. — New plans will be submitted by the Unique cleaners for a remodeled plant, it was decided last night, when the city council at a regular meeting at the city hall turned down the application of the cleaning establishment to erect a new plant at its present location at 122 East Amerige avenue after more than a dozen protests had been received from property owners asking the council to reject the application and order the plant to remove to another location.

The argument relative to the application started several weeks ago, when the Unique Cleaners, H. L. Dawson, manager, made application to erect a new building in order to conform to a new state cleaning law. At the same time property owners, headed by S. E. Reed, asked the council to order the dry cleaning establishment to be removed to some "industrial site" because the establishment was objectionable to the residential section.

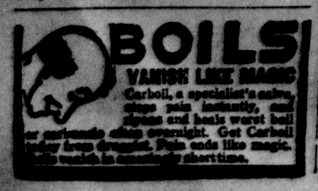

Represented by Tom McFadden, attorney, Dawson asked the council to approve the application. The council replied that the city building code did not allow the erection of such a hazardous building in the present location. As a result the dry cleaner will submit plans for a remodeled building at the present location, all of which is in accordance with the city code provided the state fire marshal approves the plans. The council will consider the plans at the next regular meeting.

Bids were opened for a street roller, one and one-half ton truck and a "pick-up" auto for the street department. The bids were referred to the various departments to check up and report back at the next council meeting.

The assessment list for the Lansdowne Improvement district was presented for protests and with no protests made, was approved. The improvement consisted of street grading, oiling, installing of curbs and sewer on Flower, Vine, Oak and Magnolia avenues. The tract is in the west end of the city limits, three miles from the center of town.

The council approved a request from Chief of Police J. M. Pearson for the placing of four "slow" signs at Harvard and Wilshire avenues.

Possibility that the city will cooperate with property owners in the widening and deepening of the barranca running through the western part of the city was announced following the receiving of a communication from W. M. Muckenthaler, property owner, requesting the assistance of the city. The barranca overflow in 1927 and flooded a greater part of the residential section from Richman to Nicholas avenue, although no serious damage was done. The city cannot do the work without the assistance and approval of the property owners as the barranca is private property, belonging to property owners, fronting on the barranca.

NEW GAS STATION FOR MIDWAY CITY

MIDWAY CITY, Aug. 6.—A new service station of tepee effect is being erected by Walter J. Hill on his property at the corner of Huntington Beach and Bolsa boulevards. The circular building with a tower effect is to be exactly on the intersection and just north and west of the new stucco hotel which is rapidly assuming shape as the second story is nearing completion. The hotel will have eight rooms above and two rooms and two store rooms on the lower floor.

It is understood that the drive-in market which Hill is to put in will be built upon completion of the hotel, the same Long Beach contractor to be in charge of that building. The exact location for the market has not been decided as there are the two locations, one at the intersection of the Adams street cutoff and Bolsa boulevard, the other at the Adams street cutoff on the Huntington Beach boulevard, which seem to offer like locations for the new venture.

PHONE EQUIPMENT FOR SAN CLEMENTE

SAN CLEMENTE, Aug. 6.—The Southern California Telephone company through E. S. Morrow, district manager, announces that new dial central office equipment will be installed here at a cost of $4000. The new equipment will provide facilities for approximately 120 additional telephones, which will make the capacity of the San Clemente station 448 telephones.

Work on the installation in the Ed Bartlett building will start late in the fall. It is planned to have the job completed by the first of December.

The present central office equipment at San Clemente has a capacity of 328 telephones. This station was added to but a short time ago, it being the second addition made to the Spanish village office in about three years.

Mrs. Sarah Key, 100, has resided on the same farm near Beatrice, Neb., for 60 years.

WORK RUSHED ON DANA POINT HOTEL

DANA POINT, Aug. 6.—Pouring in the last of the concrete for the 200 feet runway tunnel at the new Dana Point Inn has been completed. The 100-foot shaft from the hilltop to the tunnel will be completed in about 10 days. J. M. Schuster, superintendent of construction on the building, states that as the shaft is but 9 by 12 feet, only 10 men can work on it. A larger crew will be put to work as soon as the shaft is completed.

The half million dollar inn will be completed next year, in time for summer travel. An outstanding feature of the hotel is the fact that every room but two will have ocean view. A 20-foot passenger elevator will carry guests from sea level to the fourth floor of the building. Construction is of steel, concrete and glass throughout.

250 AT O.E.S. CEREMONIES IN MASONIC HALL

BUENA PARK, Aug. 6.—The Buena Park Masonic temple was the scene of a delightful affair monday evening, when over 250 people, including visitors from all over the Southland, assembled for the official visit of Mrs. Myra Clara Moyse, worthy grand matron of the state, to the combined chapters of Brea, La Habra and Buena Park, with the local chapter as hostess. Walter Bradley, of Berkeley, worthy grand patron, also was a guest of honor.

The marshals of the three united chapters escorted the flag to its place in the east and Mrs. Clara Close, worthy matron of the Brea chapter, had charge of the escorting of the worthy matrons and worthy patrons, and Mrs. Ruth Jane Davis, worthy matron of the La Habra chapter, the escorting of the grand officers. Mrs. Zilmah Cummins, worthy matron of the Buena Park chapter, was in charge of the exemplification of the regular work.

Mrs. Cummins introduced Mrs. Moyse, who spoke briefly. Her gift from the combined chapters was a spray of flowers.

Ralph Cummins, worthy patron of the Buena Park chapter, introduced the worthy grand patron, and the presentation of the gift from the combined chapters was made by Claude Ridgeway, worthy patron of the La Habra chapter. The gift was a white kid case containing three gold coins. Charles E. Miller, worthy patron of the Brea chapter, also had a part in the ceremonies.

Mrs. Moyse wore a shoulder corsage of Cecil Brunner roses with silver ribbon streamers and Mrs. Cummins, Mrs. Close and Mrs. Davis wore shoulder corsages of roses in the pastel shades with silver ribbon.

The banquet room where the guests were invited for refreshments following the ceremonies, was transformed into a garden scene with crepe paper awnings of black and gold over the windows and umbrella plants in tile holders placed about the room. Zinnias in their myriads of bright colors were used in decorating the lodge rooms and as centerpieces on the tables in the banquet room.

The committee in charge of arrangements comprised Mrs. Martha Landall, Mrs. Geneva Greenawalt, Mrs. Margaret Robeson and Mrs. Emily Warren.

Among the guests present were past grand matron, Mrs. Stella Linscott and two deputy grand matrons from San Francisco, deputy grand matron from San Pedro, deputy grand matron, Mrs. Grace Gamble, of Artesia; grand warder and four other grand officers of the 1930 group, and the following matrons and patrons, Else Gligogly, of Orange; Rust Grey, of Anaheim; May Henry, of Garden Grove; Ida Clark, of Fullerton; Jennie Rowland, of Whittier, and Mary O'Brien of Covina.

SUBMIT SITES FOR LA HABRA CITY BUILDING

LA HABRA, Aug. 6.—Although the La Habra city council has virtually selected a site suitable for the erection of a fire hall on the Launer estate at the corner of Main street and Erna avenues, the members listened to a number of propositions last night. Members of the welfare committee of the Kiwanis club, composed of E. R. Berry, Ray Frantz, A. V. Dougless and others, suggested sites.

It was decided to adjourn the meeting until Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the city hall, at which time action will be taken on the actual selection of a site following a request from the committee at the last meeting that they be allowed a little time to secure a site and prices.

In the absence of Mayor L. E. Proud, who with his family is spending the week at Big Bear, the meeting was presided over by Councilman H. A. Robinson.

Members of the site committee are John Knudson, Albert Thurher and H. A. Randall. A definite decision on a site is expected Friday evening.

In making a selection for a fire hall to house the fire equipment already contracted by the city, the committee is bound by two limitations. First is the matter of price, as only $3500 has been set aside for the purchase of land and under the state law the city is resuired to pay cash for the property.

The second matter to consider is that the property must be a corner lot in order to use it to the best advantage in placing a city hall or other city buildings on the property.

Many of the propositions overlooked these requirements. Propositions submitted were the present city hall building and lot for $6000 by W. P. Mills, the house and lot of Louis Muchow on Central avenue with a year's option on a section of his orange grove for $6000 and a lot at the corner of Orange avenue and Erna street for $5,500.

A. J. Wilson submitted a lot on Central avenue in the Aldrich addition for $2500. Charles Brewster submitted a half acre on North Hiatt street with 103-foot frontage on Hiatt street, the central intersecting street of the town off Central avenue with a depth of 220 feet on Erna street. The property is improved with a story and a half house which the owner suggests could be used for a city hall. The price is $7,500 cash.

W. H. Wilber submitted a 50-foot lot on Central avenue in the Aldrich addition for $2500. E. H. Little offered frontage of three lots on West Central in the Little tract for $35 per front foot, or a total of $1750 per lot. An 82 1-2-foot lot at the corner of Central avenue and Lemon street was offered by C. C. Hamilton for $5000. A corner lot 100 by 140 feet on Central and Cypress streets was offered by Neal McEachran, of Bell, for $4000 cash. W. P. Mills submitted two lots on the corner of Main street and Second avenue for $1500 subject to street assessments.

An instrument has been developed by the University of Iowa to test singers' voices, registering off-key notes.

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 6.—Reports, a discussion of finances and plans for the convention of delegates to the regional confernece formed most of the work coming before the local chapter of the American National Red Cross Tuesday at the August meeting.

Most detailed and comprehensive of the reports were those of Dana Lamb, chief life guard, who gave the history of work in salvaging an airplane several weeks agon and the methods pursued, with appreciation expressed for the cooperation of the first aid squad and the police with the beach guards. Another report listed those in the swimming and first aid classes. Two courses have been completed and a third is to be started August 11.

In a third report Mr. Lamb told of the beach organization which has been perfected. Aplication for charter has been made. Edward Fahey is president, and ten local seniors are enrolled. The report states:

The organization work of the local life guard system is now complete with 30 qualified members, whose duties are as follows: Children's guards, Lourella Marshall, Elizabeth Kane, Harriet Shattuck and Marjorie Burns; guards stationed at outlying beaches, Dell Schweitzer, Ed Hobart, Ralph Kennedy, Jack McFadden, John Marshall, William Shields, C. J. Hoffman and city guard Calhoun Beardsley; lokout men in charge of alarm system and life buoys, Bob Sneathen, Jeff Richards, Kimberlin Kane, Creed Watts, Vernon Comer, Clarence Kane and Bob Coleman; lifeboat men with available life boats, Curtis Burns, Freddie Schwankovsky, Graham Hudson and Sam Piety; substitutes for regular guards while performing rescue, Will Morgan, Jack Chambers and Donald Frank.

COUNCIL MODIFIES ACTION ON PAVING

PLACENTIA, Aug. 6.—Modifying its former action to include the south side of Chapman avenue from Murray street to Bradford avenue, and the east side of Bradford avenue to the school house in an improvement district, the city council of Placentia at the regular meeting Monday evening voted to include "that portion of Chapman avenue between Main street and Bradford avenue, and that portion on the east side of Bradford avenut between Chapman avenue and the school, and that for the purpose of constructing said sidewalks, there be acquired a five-foot strip along the aforesaid portion of Chapman avenue and a 10-foot strip along Bradford avenue."

Modification of the action was the result of the protests of property owners on Chapman avenue, who stated that taking a five-foot strip from their property would reduce the value of their property to a great extent, and that they would not only be forced to bear the expense of the sidewalk, but would have to tear down present retaining walls and copings and build new ones. Among the owners present were Grover Murdick, Mr. and Mrs. McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hochstein and Mrs. Sullivan.

Sun-glasses fitted with canvas nose-shields are now being worn by sun and sea bathers at some of the fashionable French resorts. They are intended to prevent freckles and to stop the nose from peeling.

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

CHAPTER 2

Peter replaced the overturned chair by the table. His movements were deliberate, purposely giving Mrs. Everett time to draw upon the reserves of strength which he had guessed lay behind her abandonment to hysteria.

When he turned, she was standing erect, shaking but composed. With a not unkindly hand on her shoulder, Peter pressed her gently into the chair, and with business-like precision drew up another on the opposite side of the table. Between them, inert and sinister, lay the pistol.

Julio, who had watched the scene with apparent indifference, sat stolidly in the corner, his broad shoulders hunched forward, his arms folded across his chest, his heavy-lidded black eyes staring into vacancy.

"You go to my car outside, and wait there," Peter ordered. "I want to talk with Mrs. Everett alone. But don't go any farther. Carter's there to keep an eye on you, and if you try to make a break, you'll find yourself in the hoosgow.. see?"

Julio's shoulders heaved in an immense shrug.

"I wait," he said, and without another glance at the woman in the chair, he lurched fro mthe room.

"Now, then," Peter said briskly, turning to Mrs. Everett. "You're up against it. And it's up to you to keep your head. This is the last time for quite a while that I can assure you that whatever you say won't be used against you."

"Who—who are you?"

Aline Everett was visibly gathering her forces. Gradually inteligence replaced the blank terror in the wide brown eyes fixed on Peter's face.

"I thought I told you. I'm Peter Piper of the Herald—"

"Oh! You're—"

"Yes, I'm just that—a newspaper reporter. What is life and death to you is just a story to me. Maybe that's all anything is—just a story. Maybe God is a good deal like a city editor—city editor of the Daily Universe. He doesn't make the news—He just reads the flimsies as they come in. And once in a while he yells out to an angel: 'Boy! Tell him to give the girl a break.'"

'But why—?"

Peter spread his hands helplessly, palm upward, on the table top.

"I don't know why, any more than you do. But here I am. Even if I'm a reporter, I haven't quite got over being a human being. And you're just part of the story to me, but you're a humen being too, in a hell of a jam." He suddenly laughed, an abrupt, embarrased laugh. Peter prided himself on being "hard boiled," and he always jeered at his own lapses into sentiment.

"Put it," he said harshly, with a change of tone which brought the brown eyes again to his face in startled attention, "that I want to stand in with you because I've stumbled on a hell of a big story, and got in on the ground floor. I can have all my lines laid before the other papers get their men on the job. And there's nothing so good as standing in solid with the defendant before the opposition gets started. Put it that way, if you want to."

Aline Everett's brows drew together in a puzzled frown.

"You might also consider," Peter went on after a brief pause, "that you're in for a lot of publicity anyway, and it might be useful to you to have a member of the press friendly. Mind you, that doesn't mean that I won't print every single thing that tells against you! Think it over."

"I am thinking. But I don't believe I want to put it that way. It's worse than you think. And there's nobody for me to turn to—nobody—" Aline's eyes dropped to the table and lingered with the horrified fascination on the pistol. A violent shudder shook her from head to foot. With an effort she clenched her chattering teeth nad forced her twitching muscles to be still.

"It's a nightmare! A nightmare. It couldn't have happened. I don't know how—"

The sound of heavy running footsteps checked her speech. In another instant a man had entered the room. The momentum of his entrance carried him half way across the open space before he brought himself up. He glanced briefly at Peter, dismissed him from consciousness, and riveted his gaze on Aline's face.

"Aline! What's the matter? Who are those people outside? And I saw the lights of another car coming up the driveway just as I got here."

"Max!" The single word, to Peter's ears, held an accent of infinite desolation. "When did you come?"

"Never mind that now. What's happened? Where's Marjorie?"

"Marjorie's—gone. And Mr. Mortison is—dead."

The sound of a heavy knock on the door frame almost obliterated the sighing whisper of the last word. The man addressed as Max wheeled sharply, facing the door.

"What do you want?" he said, challenging the intruder with an angry stare.

"Take it easy, folks. I want a lot. I want to know what all the shooting's about."

The voice, high pitched, with a nasal drawl, preceded the entrance of a tall, preposterously lank figure, whose bony wrists protruded from the too-short sleeves of his ready-made coat.

His head stooped forward from the shoulders, in the habit of men for whom ordinary doors are too low. An arched, bony nose was the most prominent feature in his sallow face—a nose set between small gray eyes, so light that they seemed almost as colorless as water.

"Hello, Everett. I b'lieve I've never met your lady. I'm Bill Simpson, ma'am—county clerk and county recorder and county auditor. I'm also county sheriff, and that's what I'm being now."

Simpson's eyes traveled enquiringly to Peter, but Peter for the moment said nothing.

"I hear that Mortison's been shot. Whose gun is that?"

With a startling change of tempo, Simpson dropped his habitual drawl. The last words came like the crack of a ship-lash.

For a moment no one moved. Aline had not risen from her chair. She sat perfectly still. Her expression was detached and remote, almost inattentive. She had passed the last limits of feeling and had reached a waste place beyond the rim of the world.

The figures in the lighted room looked curiously tiny, like men painted on a flat surface, very far off. Max turned to her with a beseeching look, but she made no response.

Peter watched the tiny globules of sweat appear on his forehead, like fog on a windshield. But his voice, when he turned to the sheriff, was composed.

"It is my gun," he said. He might have been claiming the ownership of a glove picked up in the road."

"Did you kill him?" the sheriff's voice drawled. There was something curiously soft and sympathetic in his tone.

Again Max turned to Aline. He was questioning her with his eyes, imploring her to give him some sign.

Aline's head jerked upward.

"Oh, no," she said like one startled out of a dream. "He didn't kill him. I did. Julio saw me with the gun."

"Aline!" The single word was a cry of agony.

The sheriff's eyes gleamed briefly, then fastened on the group by the table.

"So that's the way it was, "Why did you kill him, Mis' Everett?" The drawling voice was cold as the slow trickle of ice-water.

"I did it—for my sister." Aline stared straight before her. Her words came slowly. They fell like the footsteps of one who forces himself to walk on, when he is very tired, because a certain distance must be covered before he can rest.

"My sister Marjorie—has been staying with me — for several months."

The pale eyes of the sheriff traveled swiftly from one face to another. They were like narrow searchlights, Peter thought, picking out each object with pitiless intensity.

"Is she here now?" he asked.

"No, she left today. She left because—she told me—that Mr. Mortison had made love to her. He said they would be married afterwards—that it wouldn't make any difference. Then—today—he told her he never expected her to take his promise seriously—that he thought she knew—that is what men always say. I suppose I went out of my head with hate of the man who could do that—to my sister. So I took my husband's gun—and shot him."

"No, I wouldn't say you was crazy, Mis' Everett." The sheriff's eyes were like the gleaming points of icicles. "And where were you all this time, Mr. Everett? How come you weren't at the construction plant?" Again the words cracked out with explosive quickness.

Max Everett wrenched his eyes from his wife's face and sank heavily into a chair.

"My work was at a standstill, waiting for some machinery due from the east, so I came home." Everett's mind crept back, through infinite distance, to the sunshine of the morning, when he had seized with light-hearted eagerness on the unexpected holiday.

"All right. What then?" Again the sheriff's voice was very gentle.

"I got off the train at Hangtown, and walked out."

"The train gets in at three-fifty. You shoulda been home by five," Simpson suggested.

"I didn't come straight home. I walked up into the hills into a sheep herder's cabin in the canyon—the one they call Wild Hog Glory."

"Find him home?"

"No, as a matter of fact, I didn't."

"What did you want to go up there for?"

"Well, I—" For the first time Max hesitated. "I—I just went," he said confusedly.

"What for?" The narrow searchlights of Simpson's eyes played full on Everett's face. The words were less a question than a command.

"Can what I say be private between us?"

"That depends on what it is. I ain't makin' no promises. But you'd better tell what you went there for, and make it reasonable, because so far your alibi isn't worth a cocked hat. I don't know yet that you ain't an accessory to this murder."

'An alibi? I wasn't trying to make an alibi!" Peter saw a muscle at the back of Everett's jaw twitch spasmodically. Was that involuntary storm-signal evidence of anger—or anxiety?

"All right," the sheriff said noncommittally. "Why did you go to the sheep herder's cabin?"

"I went because, like a good many of the Basques around here, he makes wine. I wanted to get a bottle to bring home—to celebrate." Max showed no consciousness of the irony in that last incongruous word.

"So that's how it was," Simpson repeated. "But mightn't it have been some other way?" The nasal drawl became almost singsing.

"Mightn't it have been that you'd heard gossip about your wife and Mortison, and come on a surprise visit to find out? Mightn't it have been that you came to the house, and when you didn't find your wife home, took your gun and went down to the lodge? Mightn't it have been that you found your wife and Mortison there together—or maybe you found him alone and taxed him with it and then shot him?

"Maybe Mrs. Everett came later, found the gun, and ran back to the house with it to put it away in its usual place, or maybe she was there right along and made off with it. You're no fool, Mr. Everett. You was scared into running away at first. But you know that would be as good as saying you done it, so you came back. I don't say that was it. I just say it might have been—and I don't know as I'd feel too hard on you if it was."

"That's—" Max half rose from his chair, then sank back. Again his eyes sought Aline's face in vain appeal.

Peter found himself mentally repeating the sheriff's words of a moment before. He had hoped for a dull-witted "hick" constable! but assuredly this man was no fool.

Suddenly the sheriff whirled and turned upon Peter the sharp directness of his narrow, transfixing eyes.

"Im ready for you now, young feller," he snapped. "Where do you come in on this?"

Councilman L. H. Intorf brought the matter to the attention of council members and pointed out that as the soil was loose and sandy it would be very dusty during summer months and almost impassable after rains. Councilman C. E. Watson recommended that a thorough job of oiling and graveling be done. Approaches to the Santa Fe tracks are to be filled and rolled.

Intorf also called attention to the fact that there is no curbing or sidewalks and both should be put in as the street is used to a large extent by school children.

$75,000 STORM DRAIN PLANS ACCEPTED BY ORANGE COUNCIL; WORK TO START IMMEDIATELY

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Plans and specifications for a $75,000 storm drain were presented to the Orange city council yesterday and were accepted. A resolution of intention ordering work on the drain to follow the preliminary steps was accepted. A motion to accept the resolution of intention was made by Councilman G. A. Shoemaker and was seconded by Councilman Clyde Watson. Both resolutions received the unanimous support of council members all of whom were present. The plans were presented by City Engineer C. C. Bonebrake and the resolutions by City Attorney H. L. Dearing.

August 22 was the date set for hearing protests. The city council will meet at 1 p. m. at the city hall on this day.

Two other resolutions providing for easements across the property of the Orange County Fumigation company and that of Mrs. Emma Gardiner, were adopted. A resolution providing for an easement across the Pacific Electric property near the creek was secured a year ago when a storm drain was proposed at that time. The easement from the fumigation company provides that in case there is rainy weather the company's tents may be spread on city land to dry during the construction of the drain.

A communication from Mrs. Gardiner stated that unless the storm drain was installed within a year she would expect the city to quit claim the property.

W. G. Knox, of Santa Ana, appeared before the council in company with City Engineer C. C. Bonebrake when the plans were placed before the council for consideration. Knox stated that the city of Orange had ideal conditions for installing a storm drain.

The storm drain as planned will be 8600 feet long and will run along Lemon street from Walnut avenue to the Santiago creek. Laterals will serve the high school and the business section of the city.

The assessment district for financing the drain will include the entire city as the city as a whole will be benefitted by its installation. Bonds will be issued and will run nine years from July, 1932, or 11 years from the present time. Payments are to be made in 10 equal payments and the rate of interest will be 6 per cent.

Specifications provide for the installation of a conduit of concrete 24 inches in diameter at Walnut street, gradually increasing in size at each intersection until the maximum size of 48 inches is reached at Chapman avenue.

Along Pine avenue to Orange street and Chapman avenue the laterals will be 36 inches in diameter with two catch basins at each side of Orange street to take care of the water flowing down each side of Palm avenue and Chapman avenue.

Culverts are to be placed under the street intersections on Glassell street which will do away with the dips at Walnut, Sycamore, Palm, Maple, Palmyra, and La Veta avenues.

Reports On Water Given At Council Meeting In Orange

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—While the month of July was the period in which the most water was consumed in this city this year there was one quarter of a million gallons more water consumed during July of 1929, according to figures given by Water superintendent W. J. Richardson at the council meeting yesterday. While days of extreme heat were experienced during July of this year, the heat was steadier in duration last year, Richardson says.

Last month, 35,785,000 gallons of water were used by residents of the city and in one day 1,500,000 gallons of water were used. This amount exceeded a record use of water used in one day of August, 1928.

INSPECTOR IS APPOINTED BY CITY COUNCIL

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Frank Dale was appointed to the office of building electrical and plumbing inspector at a meeting of the city council yesterday. Objection to Dale's appointment was made by Councilman G. A. Shoemaker, who declared that the appointment was out of harmony with conditions and that the burden of a salary of $150 had been put on the city.

"There is no use to pension a man through friendship," said Shoemaker.

Mayor Clement stated that the work of getting ready to work under the new building code required study and was more of a job than might seem.

Shoemaker declared that he was willing to withdraw his objections if it could be shown that Dale's qualifications exceeded those of the present inspector. Clement explained that Dale was a practical builder.

Councilmen Clement, Dierker, Watson and Intorf coted "yes" on Dale's appointment, with Shoemaker voting "no."

Dale's bond was set at $500 and his salary of $150 monthly was scheduled to begin August 1, 1930.

JOINT MEETING OF COUNCILS IS SET FOR AUG. 11

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—A friendly discussion of the discontinuance of the Pacific Electric passenger service between Orange and Santa Ana will be held by the city councils of the two cities Monday evening at the Santa Ana city hall, preceding a meeting of the council of Santa Ana. The meeting is scheduled for 6:30 o'clock.

The time and place for the conference was designated at the regular meeting of the Orange body yesterday afternoon, when a communication from the Pacific Electric asking for the privilege of discontinuance of the service was read by City Clerk Paul Clark. A communication from the railway commission which was the result of the Pacific Electric's application to that body to discontinue the service, was on file and attention of council members was called to its provisions, one of which was that the consent of both the Orange and the Santa Ana city councils must be obtained before the request could be granted.

In an informal discussion of the communication from the Pacific Electric, Mayor W. E. Clement stated that he believed a satisfactory schedule could be arranged to serve patrons on South Glassell street and also patrons of the carline who wished to go to the Santa Fe depot.

Clement said that the idea of a boulevard to replace the present car tracks between Santa Ana and Orange appealed to him personally. On the arrival of Mayor F. L. Purington of Santa Ana, Councilman Stanley Goode and Councilman J. L. McBride at the meeting, the interests of both cities were discussed. Mayor Clement explained the necessity of keeping the freight service of the railway in order to haul freight from the Anaconda Wire and Cable plant and the packing houses to the Southern Pacific tracks.

Mayor Purinton said that Santa Ana would never consent to abandonment of the passenger service unless the tracks were taken out. He stated that he thought two express cars and one motor to haul freight went to Orange from Santa Ana daily. Purinton suggested a joint meeting of the two councils with a representative of the Pacific Electric.

The fact that the Pacific Electric right-of-way between the two cities was mostly in the county and outside the city limits of both cities, was brought to the attention of those present by Mayor Clement.

In their request to the council the railway company states that the service was being made at a loss of about $4,300 yearly and that as the Pacific Electric had recently purchased a two-thirds interest in the Motor Transit company a duplicate service was being made.

A great saving also would be made in the doing away with the interlocking plant on the Santa Fe tracks it was pointed out.

The proposed bus route as indicated on a map presented with the communication from the railway commission followed the present route of the Motor Transit buses.

It is understood that the 20-minute bus service would be provided and that the first bus would start from Santa Ana near 5 o'clock in the morning and from Orange about 6 o'clock running until nearly midnight.

SALARIES FOR POLICE RAISED AT BOARD MEET

ORANGE, Aug. 6.—Salaries of police officers were raised yesterday when a request for such increases was presented to the city council.

The salary of Willett Winslow was raised from $150 to $160; that of Homer J. Davis, from $135 to $145; A. H. Westerman from $140 to $150; Joe Johnson, from $135 to $145 and A. M. Wunderlich from $135 to $145. Chief of Police Richards was allowed $40 a month for the use of his car. It was brought out that at present the city has but one car in the police department.

The increases were recommended by the police committee, L. H. Intorf and Clyde Watson. Intorf said towns of the same size were paying twice the salaries paid in Orange.

Chief of Police Richards presented figures from other cities showing salaries paid in the police department. Anaheim's monthly total was said to be $2400 against $1035 in Orange.

Councilman Shoemaker voted "no" when the resolution authorizing the advance in pay was presented, all other members of the council voting "yes."

DISSENSION IN YANKEE DAVIS CUP TEAM OVER APPOINTMENT OF BILL TILDEN IS REPORTED

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Some of those who have been riding hard over American Davis cup affairs for several seasons are liable to be abruptly unseated as a result of developments in connection with the recent challenge round with France, it was learned today, following the return of the defeated and none-too-harmonious American forces. The apointment of William T. Tilden to one of the singles positions for the challenge round seems to have irked not only the United States Lawn Tennis association but some of Tilden's teammates as well.

The latter probably resent the last minute appointment because it forced them into a negative position after they had carried the burden of small-time play through the preliminary rounds. As for the tennis association, the mere mention of Mr. Tilden in any connection usually is enough to cause it to irk right in your face.

Subtle Discord Noted

Anyhow, a subtle undercurrent of discord was noted among the Americans when they returned yesterday and, when I asked an official whether a change in the administrative side of Davis cup play was possible next year, he said it was more than that. He said it "was very probable."

Another contemplated change, I was given to understand, would see George Lott paired with John Van Ryn for the doubles, thus breaking up the two-time Wimbledon championship combination of Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison.

The latter, it seemed, had fallen off so badly in his play, following his Wimbledon victory over Cochet, that there had been some talk of supplanting him with Lott before the challenge round began. In any case, Allison was strictly sub-normal against the French according to his own teammates, and is now talking of retirement from international tennis.

Three Men Picked Team

The naming of the team for 1930 was left solely in the hands of three men, Fitz Eugene Dixon, the team captain; Joseph B. Wear and Holcombe Ward, and of the three, only Mr. Dixon seems to have pleased everybody. Mr. Dixon, it appears, is like that. If there are to be administrative changes, it is highly unlikely that he will be affected, as for Messrs. Ward and Wear, it seems to be felt that their insistence on Tilden's participation,

It pleased me keenly the other day to read the headline, "Heilmann's hit Wins for Reds." Detroit shipped him away last year as a decadent bit of baseball freight. With Dan Howley cheering him on, the Heilmann has been slapping baseballs with unfeeling abandon.

STAR WELTERS BOX TOMORROW AT DELHI CLUB

When two "wild men" are thrown into the same ring for ten ruonds almost anything is likely to happen, and so the Orange County Athletic club may sound like a shooting gallery tomorrow night when Paul De Hate and "Wild Man" Macias start slinging leather in their ten-round main event.

Long known as one of the roughest, toughest "two-gun" fighters in Southern California, Macias will encounter a battler of exactly the same strain when he runs afoul of the Compton welterweight. That is why the bout appears so attractive on its surface.

De Hate has never taken a backward step in any of his bouts, and he has fought some of the ranking welters of the day. He was at his peak a year or so ago when a torn jaw ligament put him on the sidelines. At the time he was a main-eventer at the Olympic, Hollywood, Wilmington and San Diego, a fighter of the "Goldie" Hess style who always took a punch to strike a harder one.

Works in Films

Doctors warned him that he must quit the ring until his jaw healed and so De Hate took his handsome little son and went to work in the movies. The tot became a star in his own right and De Hate made up his mind never to pull on another glove but eventually the call was too loud, and De Hate answered.

It is understood his Delhi engagement in the first of a series of "tuneup" contests by which the hard-hitting Compton kid expects to work his way back into the Olympic and other uptown rings.

Record and reputation mean a lot in boxing and already De Hate has been made a heavy favorite to lace Macias. The odds are hardly justified because Macias has kept himself in good condition by hard work whereas De Hate will be starting for the first time ni a year and his timing and judgment of distance are sure to be off some. Macias has been knocked out but once and while he has never opposed fighters of De Hate's ability before, he looks like an even bet in every respect.

Macias Ends Training

Macias took a light workout yesterday, then announced he was going to rest until post-time. His last start away from home was in Ventura where he knocked out Matt Codan, well known Los Angeles welter, after putting Codan on the /oor 18 times in four rounds.

Promoter H. T. Foust's supporting card is better than usual and

MAJOR-MINOR LEAGUE DRAFT WAR IS OPENED

BY DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—With the decision of the American association, Pacific Coast and International leagues to ignore the draft ultimatum of the majors, baseball men today prepared for open warfare between the Class AA organizations and the two major leagues.

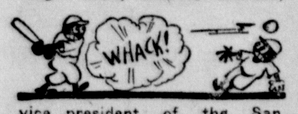

Representatives of the three Class AA leagues met here yesterday and went on record as refusing to conform to the universal draft, thus defying the major league threat to sever all player relations with leagues not accepting the draft before Dec. 1, 1930.

Although refusing to announce their plans for fighting the major league boycott, under which the big leagues would refuse to buy, sell, trade and transfer players to non draft circuits, Class AA leagues indicated that they would act in harmony and planned to seek the support of other minor leagues in their fight.

A committee of three, Walter E. Hapgood, general manager of the Montreal International league club; Charles Graham, vice president of the San Francisco Pacific Coast league club and Oscar Smith, president of the Toledo American association club, was appointed to make recommendations for a common policy in regard to the draft and other problems affecting relations between the majors and minor leagues.

The committee will report at a special conference in Montreal during the first week in December, immediately after the threatend boycott will beome effective.

By ignoring the draft ultimatum the minor leagues have put the issue squarely up to the major leagues. The Class AA organizations declared they were within their rights in refusing to accept the draft and said the threatened major league boycott would be a direct violation of the 1921 national agreement, in which leagues opposed to the draft were granted exemption from draft provisions.

Since that time the Class AA leagues agreed to a modified draft by which major leagues could draft players released to the non-selective leagues. The majors have made many efforts to make the draft universal but the three Class AA leagues and the Western and Three Eye leagues have rejected all proposals for a change in the agrement.

Anaheim 10, Whittier 1.
Olive 5, La Habra 4.
Huntington Beach 7, Fullerton 2.
Long Beach 4, Garden Grove 1 (first game.)
Garden Grove 4, Long Beach 3 (second game.)

Friday's Schedule

La Habra at Santa Ana; Anaheim at Huntington Beach; Olive at Whittier; Garden Grove at Fullerton; Orange at Long Beach.

So near and yet so far from that old tape, Santa Ana today was exactly one and one-half games to the good over the only other contenders for the second half championship of the National Night Baseball league—La Habra and Anaheim.

La Habra lost a full game to the Stars when it was defeated by Olive last night, 5 too 4.

Anaheim easily defeated Whittier, 10 to 1.

Santa Ana has four more games to play, three of 'em at hoome. La Habra and Anaheim both have three too go.

The Stars meet La Habra here Friday. Tickets went on sale today for this "gigantic." Whities invades the Bowl next Tuesday. A week from Friday Santa Ana goes to Long Beach. After that Santa Ana must play a posotponed contest with Orange.

La Habra faces Santa Ana here Friday, Anaheim at Anaheim Tuesday and Garden Grove at La Habra Friday week.

Anaheim meets Huntington Beach at Huntington Beach Friday, La Habra at Anaheim Tuesday and Fullerton at Fullerton Friday week.

Anaheim undoubtedly has the better of the schedule, Huntington Beach and Fullerton being opponents of the easiest sort.

OLIVE HANDS LA HABRA 5-4 TRIMMING

Olive jolted La Habra's championship aspirations by defeating the Violet Rays 5 to 4 at La Habra.

The Packers made their hits off Chico Sabella count for runs in the early innings. Hatfield hit a homer back of Thomas' single in the first inning for two tallies. Turry was safe on an error in the second. He was forced by Sweet who scored on Heman's double. Heman then rang the bell on Thomas' double. The fifth, last and winning Olive run was made in the fifth when Griffith and Hatfield singled and Horn was safe on Wilkinson's error on Horn's grounder, Griffith scoring.

La Habra got two in the fourth when Johnson got a life on Griffith's error, Norton singled and Pancho tripled. The Violet Rays got a couple more but lost a chance to tie the score in the eighth. Rady led off with a double but was out stealing third. Johnson singled and North blasted a home run.

Heman struck out 12. Sabella whiffed 11.

The score.

Although "Red" Moon hit the Although "Red" Moon hit the firs tball pitched in the Poet's first inning for a home run, Anaheim overwhelmed Whittier with surprising ease, 10 to 1, at Whittier.

The first half champions went completely to pieces in later innings, the Valencias pounding Lloyd Johnson to all parts of the park while Al Bushman was setting his opposition down in one-two-three order.

Bill Bushman, Anaheim catcher, sufered a severe cut over his left eye when accidentally hit by a bat in the hands of Hill of Whittier.

PIPING 'EM OFF

Bill Hunter, Santa Ana third baseman, was the goat and then the hero of Orange's fighting finish When he let Bell's snap throw to third get away from him he gave the Orangemen a toehold. A minute later he broke the back of the rally by picking up Pargee's torrid drive down the third base line and throwing perfectly to "Eeny" Wilcox at the plate for a forceout.

Mearl Youel, Santa Ana pitcher for Orange, showed the Stars as much "swift" as they have looked at this season. The practice won't hurt either, with Chico Sabella firing at 'em Friday night.

TAILEND TEAM GIVES LEADERS STRUGGLE, 5-3

..Soaring approximately two full games ahead of their field in the thrill-packed National Night league baseball steeplechase, Santa Ana's Stars were a happy set today—but they didn't care for any more of those "breathers" like Orange, thank you!

While Olive was upsetting La Habra, 5-4, making it pretty for Santa Ana, the Stars were put to one of their hardest tests to win from the lowly Orange tailenders, 5 to 3, at Orange.

Primed for their best fight of the season, the Orangemen actually extended the proud league-leaders to their utmost and "dug in" for a ninth inning rally that chilled the Stars to the marrow. They slipped one run across, had one thrown out at the plate and still had the tying margin on base when Joe Cornelius finally retired the side on a forceout at second base.

Orange Proves Troublesome

The Stars gave Joe Cornelius five runs to work on and their generosity was well received because the "iron man" was well fagged out and needed all the help he could muster.

It started out like a pitcher's battle, both Cornelius and Mearl Youel, transplanted Santa Anan, keeping well ahead of the swingers until the fourth when Youel weakened momentarily because he couldn't control his fast ones and had to slow up to put 'em over.

"Memphy" Hill gave the Stars their first run. He was first up in the fourth and beat out a bunt down the third base line. Richards made a nice play to stop the ball but was out of position to get away a quick throw.

Merrill promptly sacrificed, Youel to Suddaby, putting Hill safely on second.

Bell's Hit Scores Hill

Wayne Nelson dumped a single back of third base, sending Hill to third, and went to second himself without a play being made on him.

Randolph then singled infield, Hill scoring. The hit was a high bounder to Leichtfuss and the Orange shortstop had no chance to throw anyone out. Cole popped out and Hunter forced Bell at second.

Youel got into trouble again in the sixth, but it was not altogether his fault. With one down, Bell was safe when Leichtfuss booted his grounder. Bill Cole dropped a double into right field and Bell went all the way home. Hunter singled to right and Cole scored from second when Middlebrook fumbled the ball.

SCRAP IRON CLOCK

Bill," Hunter sprinted clear to third from where he scored when Wilcox hit the first ball pitched him to right for another single. Cornelius sacrificed Wilcox to second and was safe himself when Thiery's throw to first hit him in the back. Youel then cut loose with a series of wild pitches that scored Wilcox and put Cornelius on third. Still another wild pitch sent Cornelius scuttling for the plate but Thiery made a quick recovery off the backscreen and tossed him out, Youel covering the pan.

Cornelius had allowed only two hits going into the seventh when Middlebrook started Orange's first real rally with an infield single. "Hen" Thiery forced him at second, Cornelius to Daley, but Harvey Leichtfuss boomed a long line drive over Bell in left field that easily scored Thiery. Leichtfuss' smash was well ticketed and would have been a home run had it not bounded into a dirt mound that stopped its flight abruptly. Leichtfuss immediately scored on a short passed ball, however.

Orange Rally Falls Short

That left the count 5-2, and thus it remained until the hectic ninth when Orange made its dramatic gesture for everlasting fame in the National Night league. Middlebrook led off with a single to right and "Hen" Thiery socked a single to left. After that things popped everywhere, and before anyone realized it Orange was in the thick of the ball game.

Taking Thiery's single on the first hop, Bell tossed to Hunter at third base ahead of Middlebrook. The ball caromed right out of Hunter's glove and rolled a dozen yards or so before the Santa Ana infielder could overtake it. Middlebrook made a break for third and Hunter made a play for him, but his toss got away from Wilcox who covered the sack and Middlebrook continued right on home and Thiery pulled up at third.

Cornelius then fanned Leichtfuss, one of the real Orange threats, for the first out of the inning.

Hunter Makes Nice Play

Pargee, who had replaced Ed Thiery in the Orange outfield earlier in the affray, was the next batsman. He smashed a terrific ground ball down the third base line. It looked every ince a two-base hit but Hunter, who had muffed a fearfully easy chance but a moment before, made a spectacularstop of it and easily threw Thiery out at the plate with a perfect peg to Wilcox.

Cornelius put the tying run on base with a walk to "Whitey" Edwards, batting for Suddaby, but Harms brough the contest to a close by forcing Edwards at second, Hill to Daley, on a nice play by the Star shortstop.

PIPING 'EM OFF

never would have touched it.

"Memphy" Hill said he would have hung up his glove for good had he booted Harms' grounder that ended the game. It was a tough chance at that, but the hustling little shortstop came up with a nice play in the clinch.

Bill Middlebrook slapped three singles to lead the hitting parade for both sides. Two of them were hard hit balls to right field, the other a high hopper which he just beat out.

"Rosy" Merrill had to work late and arrived at the park just in time to take his regular turn at bat in the first inning. He did not have the benefit of hitting practice and went without a blow for the first time in weeks. "Rosy" has averaged three swats a game for seven games.

Despite the unalluring prospect of watching a league-leader spank a tailender, the little Orange park was pretty well filled. Most of the spectators were Santa Anans, however.

Reserved seat tickets for the Santa Ana-La Habra scrimmage here went on sale today at the El Corral service station, Third and Birch streets, and at Baker's Bakery, 214 West Fourth street.

The sudden death of his sister, Elizabeth, a teacher at Roosevelt school in Santa Ana, prevented Kenny Walker from taking his scheduled place on the mound for Orange.

Santa Ana has been figuring its postponed game with Orange all the same as won. Doubtless this opinion has been reversed now. The "Fourth of July" affair now looms as a very important one to the Stars' status.

CLAIM DISSENTION ON DAVIS CUP TEAM

even in the face of the man's expressed disinclination, was contrary to the wishes of official tennis in this country.

As far as I can find out, official tennis in this country has arrived at the conclusion that it cannot win the Davis cup with Mr. Tilden and, therefore, would much prefer to lose it without him.

Much capital, for instance, has been made of the fact that Louis B. Dailey, president of the U. S. L. T. A., did not remain abroad for the challenge round, but returned to America, presumably on business.

Why He Returned

It is known that his return was not prompted by official differences with the selection committee; in fact, it has been pretty well established that he had no differences of any kind with the committee. But, at the same time, it is hinted that Mr. Dailey departed in some haste because he sensed that Mr. Tilden was to be named for the team and didn't care to be present when his worst fears were to be confirmed.

Thus, it would seem, a fresh chapter in the eternal vendetta between Tilden and the tennis association was written in the recent challenge round. It probably will be the last. Tilden, they admit, played inspired tennis in winning the Wimbledon championship, just as he did in victory over Borotra and in defeat before Cochet in the challenge round. But he never was a docile man, from their viewpoint, and they have no reason to believe that he ever will be, so it is not likely that he will be asked to play Davis cup tennis hereafter nor is it probably that the men who asked him to play will be in a position to repeat their offer.

It was quite apparent yesterday that, if the association never sees Mr. Tilden again, it will be strictly premature.

LA HARBA DEFEATED BY OLIVE PACKERS

This occurred in the eighth inning. Ochoa then went to the mound and Al Bushman took his brother's station behind the plate.

The Valencias made three in the fifth, one of them a homer by Al Bushman. They got a couple more in the sixth on Bill Bushman's singles and Schuchardt's home run, and five in the ninth on four hits, three walks and a sacrifice. The score:

Anaheim	000 032 005	10	14	0
Whittier	100 000 000	1	2	4

Batteries: Anaheim—A. Bushman, Ochoa and B. Bushman and A. Bushman; Whittier—Johnson and Rasmussen, Phelan.

GARDEN GROVE, LONG BEACH SPLIT TWO GAMES

Garden Grove and Long Beach divided two five-inning games at Long Beach, the Acorns getting the first one, 4 to 1, and the Peppers taking the second, 4 to 3.

Home runs played an important part in the opener, Maness and Davis hitting them for Long Beach and Hapes for Long Beach.

Ed Banta, Santa Ana "B" league pitcher, worked the afterpiece for the Peppers. Long Beach got all of its runs in the fourth when Ballard and Maness singled, and Landreth doubled, coming on home when Speed let the ball go through him.

Garden Grove got its winning runs in the fourth on Hapes' walk, Natland's safe fielder's choice and singles by Bowe, Banta, Heard and Fulsom.

(First Game)

		R	H	E
Garden Grove	000 10	1	3	2
Long Beach	012 1x	4	5	1

Batteries: Garden Grove—Morrill and Hapes; Long Beach—Sheek and Maness.

(Second Game)

Long Beach	000 30	3	5	1
Garden Grove	010 3x	4	6	2

Batteries: Long Beach—Sheek, Downer and Maness; Garden Grove—Banta and Hapes.

HUNTINGTON BEACH WINS FROM FULLERTON

Huntington Beachdefeated Fullerton, Henius hit a home run for the losers. The score:

Huntington Beach	7	10	2
Fullerton	2	6	5

Batteries: Huntington Beach—Morning and Geshert; Fullerton—Willhite and Lemon.

REFORESTATION

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 6.—Noble fir trees, noted for their peculiar sheen and blue-green color of the needles, are being selected in the Cascade National Forest for planting in Palo Alto, Calif., by Henry Stevenson, a resident of that city.

Approximately 500 trees are being taken from 18 to 30 inches in height. The trees were purchased here and are being removed under direction of Smith Taylor of the McKenzie Ranger Station.

It is estimated that 4000 persons were executed with the guillotine during the French revolution.

FIRE MARSHAL FOR COUNTY SUGGESTED

John Luxembourger, chief of the Santa Ana fire department, and W. B. Potter, of Fullerton, appeared before the board of supervisors yesterday and suggested the appointment of a county fire marshal to have jurisdiction in all outside territory. They advised that there was a need for such authority in combatting incendiary fires and cleaning up fire hazards.

The board advised the men, who represented the Orange County Firemen's association in the matter, that the recently appointed state ranger, Joe Sherman, was to co-operate in this regard and that they would find out how far the state intended to go in these matters. The committee also was referred to the district attorney for a legal opinion as to how the marshal would be paid and what authority he would have.

COUNTY VALUE IS PLACED AT $177,456,630

The total assessed valuation of Orange county for the year 1930-1931, exclusive of intangibles, is $177,456,630, according to a statement made by County Auditor W. C. Jerome to the board of supervisors yesterday afternoon. This is $3,464,595 more than the official figure for last year and shows a healthy increase in county valuations despite a decrease in valuations of oil properties.

The difference of $7,250,935 between the figure reported by the auditor and that announced on July 8 by County Assessor James Sleeper is accounted for largely by the fact that intangibles are not included in the figure submitted by Jerome, while they were included in Sleeper's statement. Part of the difference is due to duplications and errors that are weeded out in the auditor's office, it is stated. The segregation of intangibles has not been completed by the auditor's office, where work is being rushed on this phase of the statement.

The statement also shows that valuations in the 13 cities of the county have increased over $500,000, the valuation being $76,843,845 this year, as compared to $76,284,010 last year.

The figures submitted to the supervisors will be used in determining the tax rate that is to apply this year and the supervisors are working on the budget estimates which were submitted two weeks ago, in an effort to ascertain the least amount of money that will have to be raised to finance county government property.

The valuation of the district outside the incorporated cities, as comprised in the four road districts, reaches a figure of $100,612,785. This is itemized as follows: Second road district, $23,303,385; third road district, $44,913,445; fourth road district, $9,679,000, and fifth road district, $22,716,955.

In the city valuations Santa Ana maintains its rank as first with a valuation of $21,982,015, but Huntington Beach, with a material decrease from last year, drops from second to third place. Second place this year goes to Fullerton, which was third last year. Other rankings are the same as last year and are as follows: Fourth, Anaheim; fifth, Newport Beach; sixth, Orange; seventh, Laguna Beach; eighth, Seal Beach; ninth, San Clemente; tenth, Brea; eleventh, La Habra; twelfth, Tustin, and thirteenth, Placentia.

The valuations for the two years were as follows:

1930-31. City.	1929-30.
$ 8,188,260 Anaheim	$ 8,112,345
1,373,575 Brea	1,378,060
12,666,140 Fullerton ...	12,450,310
11,381,810 Hunt'g'n B...	12,638,030
3,346,045 Laguna Bch.	3,055,275
1,066,720 La Habra....	1,031,195
6,342,830 Newport Bch	6,503,580
5,922,695 Orange	5,683,025
467,820 Placentia ...	457,845
1,617,550 San Clemente	1,480,070
21,982,015 Santa Ana..	21,051,600
1,881,585 Seal Beach...	1,879,775
606,800 Tustin	562,900
$76,843,845 Total	$76,284,010

The tax rate last year was $1.45 per $100 assessed valuation inside cities and $1.85 outside cities. The additional 40 cents in the outside territory was for the general road fund.

MONKEY-SHINES ON BEACH

The fad for novel beach companions is growing by leaps and bounds at Catalina island since Lillian Hardaker, of Los Angeles, appeared with Buddy, a pet monkey, with which she is shown below. And now Buddy's monkey-shines draw much attention as all the other attractions put together.

LAGUNA BEACH ARTISTS NAME HEADS AUG. 11

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 6.—William W. Riddell, recently resigned member of the city council, will head the Laguna Beach Art association if the nominations returned by the nomination committee triumph at the election which is to be held the evening of August 11.

In the annual election of officers, interest centers chiefly in the selection of one to take the place of the late Anna A. Hills. Though Frank W. Cuprien was also suggested, he has been placed on the ticket for the place of vice president. Others named are John Hinchman as second vice president, Alice Parker as treasurer, Ida Randall Bolles as corresponding secretary, Maud Robertson as recording secretary. On the board of directors, Elanor Colburn, William A. Griffith and Bruce V. Crandall have been selected by the committee. The latter is made up of Joseph Kleitsch, Virginia Woolley and Mrs. A. B. Marshall.

Mr. Riddell is an artist and proprietor and manager of la Casa del Camino, a hotel in the Arch Beach section of the city. Mr. Cuprien has in the past headed the art association and is a close friend of Mr. Riddell. Bruce V. Crandall, named for the board of directors, is a motor boat manufacturer with his plant in Newport Beach. Mr. Griffith, selected for the board of directors, is vice president who has been in charge of the association since the death of Miss Hills.

It is not anticipated that there will be any serious objection to those selected by the nominating committee as the affairs of the association have been harmonious and elections usually following the list of nominations.

LASSO MUSTARD

SANTA ROSA, Calif., Aug. 6.—When you can't cut the mustard—lasso it! Supervisor Tom Ferguson noticed a mustard tree, or bush, or shrub, or whatever it is mustard grows on, spouting out of the coping on the courthouse here. After a long discussion about harvesting it, one of the employes got a rope, made a lariat out of it, and neatly pulled the mustard plant from its lofty perch.

MOON-EYE FISH RARE

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Aug. 6.—(UP)—The moon-eye, a species of fish once caught in abundance in waters here, is now so rare that it took a host of fish experts of the county to identify a specimen recently angled here.

A metal found in South-West Africa, known as zinc-blende, produces a bright light when struck or rubbed, even under water.

SUN CAN'T PEEK UNDER THIS

You can't stop the sun from shining, but you can do the next best thing by erecting a street awning to protect shoppers from Old Sol's scorching rays. A business man's association in a certain Philadelphia community hit on this novel idea, pictured below, to shade their street, and shoppers have been flocking their way ever since.

TWO EXCHANGE CLUBS JOIN IN MEETING HERE

At a joint meeting of the Santa Ana and Newport Beach Exchange clubs in the Santa Ana cafe yesterday noon those present were addressed by Roscoe A. Goodcell, public service manager for the Automobile club of Southern California. Goodcell explained the proposed international highway which would link the Pacific coast highway in the United States with roads through Canada and Alaska on the north and through Mexico and South America.

Goodcell related the story of the Auto club's expedition last spring on which a trail was blazed through Mexico on the proposed road as far as Mexico City. Governors of Mexican states pledged co-operation in the project, the speaker stated. He also said that the British government will provide funds for the road through Canada and that the United States will finance the building of the road through Alaska.

Carl Stein and Dr. Cassius Paul were in charge of the program, which included outstanding entertainment provided by Miss Louise McCain, who was warmly applauded for her eccentric tap dances and soft shoes dances, in one of which she provided her own music on the harmonica.

The Santa Ana club challenged the Newport Beach club to a miniature golf match. No action was taken yesterday in regard to the challenge.

BOLSA

BOLSA, Aug. 6.—Gus Ward and Bud Justice returned home Monday from the Santa Maria mountains, where they hunted deer. One fine buck was killed but on account of the hot weather the meat did not keep long enough to bring home.

The water level in Bolsa district fell below 40 feet Monday, leaving practically every well here dry as the 40 foot level is the one which is in general use for pumps.

COUNTY CLERK PREPARES WAY FOR PRIMARIES

Preparations are being made today by a large crew of workers under the direction of County Clerk J. M. Backs for mailing out sample ballots, information concerning candidates on the state tickets and notification of the polling place to the 48,937 registered voters in the county who are entitled to vote at the primary election on August 26. This material, which constitutes a bulk almost unimaginable to persons who are not familiar with it, is to be sent through the mails commencing August 16 and the mailing must be completed by August 21, according to state law.

One entire corner of a room in the basement of the court house is stacked high with 287 bundles comprising 47,000 books of 104 pages each, containing information concerning the candidates for state offices which is required to be furnished to all voters. This booklet lists all candidates for the various parties, and contains their statements and lists of sponsors. An additional 2000 books has been ordered from Sacramento by County Clerk Backs to provide a sufficient quantity to furnish each registered voter with a copy.

The task of getting the sample ballots properly alloted according to district and political party and of getting the location of the polling place for each voter in the county is a huge task, requiring close supervision and efficient work.

One crew of workers is now engaged in addressing the envelopes which are to contain all this information. The sample ballots are being printed and will be ready within the next few days.

In addition to this great mass of information that must be sent to every voter, there are seven cases of election supplies which Backs must distribute to the 189 election boards.

There are no fish in the Dead Sea. The salinity of the water is too great for fish life.

DROWNS AFTER PULLING YOUNG LAD FROM SEA

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 6.—Sherwood Peak, 38, was drowned in Coast Royal, two miles south of this city, at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon after saving Frank Hartman, 8, from drowning when the latter fell from Table Rock, where they were fishing. The body was not discovered, despite efforts of the first aid squad of the fire department and others to locate it.

Peak, who was very fond of children, had been accustomed to take the six children of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hartman, living in the neighborhood, to the rock nearly every day to fish. When Frank Hartman fell into the water, Peak did not hesitate, but jumped in, rescued the boy, instructed him to climb over him to safety on the rock, and then himself slipped back, presumably given the impulse by the youngster in his efforts to scramble up the rock.

Peak came up three times, but help was not close enough to get him out. He had been employed as carpenter on a house, coming here from Riverside, where his parents live at Glenavon Heights. His wife and three children are in Canada, it is reported.

Young Girls Assembled For Dinner Party And Swim

Complimenting Miss Nancy White, popular little sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emrys D. White, who will leave tomorrow with her parents and brother, Emrys, Jr., for a six weeks' trip to Montana, Miss Mary Elizabeth Emison and Miss Frances Was entertained Monday with an enjoyable dinner party in the lovely colonial home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Was on Victoria drive.

The honoree was completely surprised and very much delighted when she was led to the attractively appointed dinner table, centered with a miniature beach, complete with mirrored sea and sand, gay umbrellas, and dolls in appropriate garb. The guests fitted into the scheme, for they wore attractive beach outfits in preparation for the swim which was to follow.

After the delectable menu course had been served the happy group, chaperoned by Mrs. Was, motored to Balboa Island, and completed the evening with a refreshing swim.

Those present were the honoree, Miss Nancy White, and the Misses Janet Diehl, Jean McCauley, Valerie Demetrion, Charlotte Mcck, and the hostesses, the Misses Frances Was and Mary Elizabeth Emison.

Quill Pen Club Plans Another Picnic at Early Date

Running the gamut of themes from character developments to the ever popular mystery tale, last night's program of Quill Pen club held the interest of members for an hour or so, then yielded in importance to the friendly hospitality extended by Mrs. R. A. Cushman in her North Broadway home, so that the remainder of the evening was given over to more informal features.

Miss Dorothy Clarkson, Mrs. Frank Was, Mrs. Harry M. Smith, Mrs. J. U. Viau and Mrs. Emmet Elliott were among those contributing manuscripts all of which will represent their "assessment" for this quarter.

As the club members settled down for a thoroughly enjoyable discussion of the various points brought out in the different stories as well as of a multitude of other things, Mrs. Cushman added to the friendly enjoyment by serving ices, cake and coffee. She was assisted in this by Miss Clarkson and Vincent Elliott.

In accordance with the plan for informal affairs during the summer months, it was decided to make the meeting of Tuesday, August 19, a picnic supper in the garden of Mrs. Frank Was, 2019 Victoria drive. Mrs. S. B. Marshall was named general chairman and will advise the members as to requirements in the way of picnic fare.

Mrs. Cushman's hospitality was extended to Mrs. Frank Was, president; Mrs. S. B. Marshall, Mrs. Herman Reuter, Miss Dorothy Clarkson, Mrs. Maude Goff, Mrs. Blanche Brown, Mrs. J. U. Viau, Mrs. Henry M. Smith, Mrs. Marshall Harnois, Mrs. Emmett Elliott, and three guests, Mrs. Earl Lippincott, house-guest of Mrs. Brown; Miss Charlotte Harnois and Vincent Elliott.

Miss Marian Stanley Completes Work at Ohio University

Returning recently from their long summer trip back in Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Stanley of Tustin avenue, were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Marian Stanley, and a friend, Miss Ruth Rodamer of Waterloo, Ia., who will remain for an extended visit in their home.

The eastern trip was taken early in the summer, that Mr. and Mrs. Stanley might reach Athens, O., in time for the graduation of Miss Marian Stanley from Ohio University, where she received her A. B. degree in June. Miss Stanley, who is a native daughter of California, very much enjoyed the experience of attending the university in the little Ohio city which had been the home of her mother's people for many years, and where she, herself, represented the fifth generation.

Her grandfather, the late J. O. Hatfield, Mrs. Stanley's father, had taught Latin in the university for many years, so the place was rich in traditions for this young Californian.

Returning to California, the party traveled through the famous Black Hills country, and stopped also in the Yellowstone, enjoying the varied scenic wonders of the trans-continental trip.

Mid-Summer Bride Will Preside at Dinner Party Tonight

That intimate charm which attached to a congenial family party, promises to be in full play this evening when Dr. and Mrs. A. Karl Loerch, jr., will be hosts at dinner in their home on North Main street.

Dr. and Mrs. Loerch, it will be remembered, were numbered among those who chose June as a bridal month, and the young hostess will draw upon her supply of exquisite bridal linens and china too arrange her table. She has chosen the autumnal russets and golds for her color effect, blending all details with the centerpiece of giant zinnias in rust, burnt orange and golden yellow tones, grouped in an amber crystal bowl. Supplementing her china service will be silver encrusted amber crystal, while completing the charm of the setting, will be the soft light of orange tapers.

Guests will be confined to the little family circle, with covers laid for the hosts, Dr. and Mrs. Loerch, jr., Dr. and Mrs. K. A. Loerch, sr., Miss Esther Loerch and Alfred Loerch, all of this city.

Church Societies

World Wide Guild

Members of the World Wide Guild of the First Baptist church convened for a most interesting session Monday afternoon, when they accepted the hospitality of Mrs. O. S. Catland, and met in her home at 419 Wellington street. About 25 were present.

During the afternoon meeting the members were busily employed in the art of making headbands for the guild, and when the dinner hour arrived they were more than ready for the appetizing meal which had been prepared. Amidst an attractive setting of shrubs and garden flowers at the rear of the house, the menu was served and thoroughly enjoyed.

The business meeting later in the evening concluded the delightful session, with Mrs. Benjamin Brubaker presiding. Plans for the year's work were made at this time.

Las Meninas Members Entertained in Metzgar Home

Miss Eleanor Metzgar again proved a charming hostess last evening, when she extended a gracious hospitality to her sister members of Las Meninas club, of which she is president. The spacious rooms of the Metzgar home, 816 Bush street, were increased in charm, by the lavish use of the prettiest of the season's flowers.

Initiation rites were first in order for the evening, for Pledge Miriam Samuelson, one of two new pledges able to be present. Miss Samuelson was compelled to don a hula costume and perform an intricate Spanish dance, also to wear the costum for the rest of the evening, and serve the other members.

The group later adjourned to the Tom Thumb golf course on South Main street, where moonlight filtered through stately palms, together with the courtesies extended by the management made a happy occasion for the players. After a highly entertaining hour spent on the greens, the party again returned to the Metzgar home.

There the most delectable of refreshments were served on individual trays by the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. J. H. Metzgar. Music and conversation continued until a late hour, together with a brief business meeting, in which officers for the coming year were unanimously elected. Miss Helen Lee received the office of president. Miss Catherine Walbridge, vice-president; Miss Juliette Taylor, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Miriam Samuelson, social chairman.

WETTLIN SPEAKS IN BEACH CHURCH

Making a strong plea for law enforcement in Orange county, David G. Wettlin, Santa Ana attorney, candidate for district attorney at the elections this month, last night was the principal speaker before some 150 persons at the First Christian church at Huntington Beach.

Wettlin's subject was "Religion As An Investment," and in his talk he brought out the importance of religion in the enforcement of the laws in this country and the need for more religion in enforcing the laws.

The meeting held at the church started with a pot luck dinner.

County Clubwomen Join In Attendance at Board Meeting

"Every phase of our ordinary every-day life is affected in some measure and to some degree, by legislative action" yesterday declared Mrs. Agnes McEuen of Riverside, legislation chairman of the Southern District Federation of Women's clubs, and chief speaker on the afternoon program of the executive board meeting of the Orange county federation, in session in this city.

Santa Ana Woman's club members with their president, Mrs. W. H. Kuhn, formed the hostess organization to executive board members and many other clubwomen, and the all-day sessions were held in the Y. W. C. A. on East Fifth street. Mrs. McEuen's address in the afternoon followed an interesting morning presided over by Mrs. E. E. Smith of Anaheim, vice president of the county federation.

Especially valuable to the assembled clubwomen were the morning discussions of program features and themes, in which a round table conducted by Mrs. Albert Launer of Fullerton, brought out many points worthy of note. Luncheon at noon provided an enjoyable social interval during which clubwomen from various communities, exchanged suggestions and details regarding their work.

Tables were flower centered in harmony with the attractive decorations of the pretty clubrooms, all of which had been supervised by a committee from the hostess club, consisting of Mrs. W. A. West, Mrs. William Castler, Mrs. E. C. Wilson, Mrs. James Clark and Mrs. William Whitehead.

Mrs. Kuhn, Woman's club president, was assisted by Mrs. M. J. Marks and Mrs. Clark as a reception committee to greet arrivals, and the club's hospitality was recognized when Mrs. Launer made a formal motion of appreciation to the women for their many courtesies.

Mrs. Smith presented Mrs. McEuen as the speaker for the afternoon, and her informal talk was heard with much interest, as she presented her facts with such forcefulness, and yet with a touch of humor that made it an extremely interesting feature.

This humor was especially pronounced in the replies to the storm of questions that followed her address, many of the questions relating to the means of ascertaining the qualifications of men who will appear for office in the forthcoming election.

Mrs. McEuen stressed the importance of the current year, as the fall elections are of state import as well as local, and need to be approached by woman voters with much thoughtful consideration. She warned her hearers against too strong a faith in political propaganda, advising them to "believe only half of what is said either for or against candidates."

Several mistaken beliefs on the part of woman voters were corrected, including a prevailing idea as to taxes. She explained that many people believed that their taxes went to the state funds, but that is not the case, as taxes go into city and county funds, with public corporations and utilities, banks, railroads, etc., being the source of the state's tax revenues.

Mrs. McEuen was sweeping in her assertion that woman was out of place in political office under existent conditions, and that "until she could use her ideals of purity in politics and interests of the public, she could have no real place in politics—and that seems a long way in the future." According to her belief, it means unending patience on the part of woman voters, and in the meantime, they should be educating themselves to a thorough knowledge of political and legislative conditions. Men, she declared, maintain two consciences—one for their families and personal affairs, the other for big business and politics.

She dwelt upon both the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments, and said that they had been adopted but that it would take time for them to be fully accepted by men and the nation as a whole, but that unending patience on the part of the women and the dry forces would bring that to pass.

The district federation has adopted as its theme for the year, "Our Higher Citizenship," and Mrs. McEuen credited the choice to Mrs. Smith, who had proposed the theme. Mrs. Smith explained that it had been used with much success as a foundation for the Fullerton Ebell's program year.

County club presidents were to be introduced at this meeting and Mrs. Smith had the pleasure of presenting such leaders or their representatives, as were present. These included Mrs. Kuhn of the hostess club; Mrs. Clyde A. Bach, representing Mrs. Robert G. Tuthill of the Santa Ana Ebell society; Mrs. Joseph Walter, vice president of Anaheim Ebell; Mrs. E. E. Anderson of Brea Woman's club; Mrs. A. P. Nelson, Costa Mesa Woman's club; Mrs. Anna Brookhauser, La Habra Woman's Improvement club; Mrs. Elmer L. Johnson, Los Alamitos Woman's Improvement club; Mrs. Hiel, vice president of the Midway City club, latest to join the federation; Mrs. Lee McGavren, Civic League of Newport Beach; Mrs. Leon Des Larzes, Orange Woman's club, and Mrs. Arthur Staley, Placentia Round Table.

Popular Santa Anans Wedded Today In Pasadena

Counteless Santa Ana friends were eagerly awaiting details of the quiet wedding this afternoon, of two of the city's best-known young people, Mrs. Irene Roach, daughter of Mrs. Clara Tolifaro of Spurgeon street, and R. Fred Chambers, director of religious education in the First Baptist church, of which the Rev. Harry Evan Owings is pastor.

The happy young couple motored to Pasadena this afternoon accompanied by Mrs. Tolifaro, Miss Gladys Dunn, Miss Ruth Dunn, Miss Marie Foldesi, and George Ashe. The wedding was to be held in the Pasadena First Baptist church, with the pastor, the Rev. Stanley Silke, reading the service.

Mrs. Roach chose for her costume, a smart ensemble in deep glowing red with white hat and accessories, all extremely becoming to her vivacious brunet beauty.

Following the ceremony, the members of the wedding party were to dine at the Maryland hotel following which, the new Mr. and Mrs. Chambers planned to motor to Arrowhead where they will spend a week among the pines of that beautiful mountain resort.

It is the present plan for Mr. Chambers to return east this fall, where he will study for his degree at Yale university. Mrs. Chambers will remain in Santa Ana with her mother, and plans to continue her duties at the Madden drug store where she has charge of the cosmetics.

TENTATIVE TAX RATE SAME AS FOR LAST YEAR

After several weeks of work on the requests made by department heads for funds with which to operate the county government during the fiscal year commencing July 1, the county board of supervisors last night determined a tentative total and fixed the tentative tax rate for the year. The figure is the same as that of last year, $1:85 outside of incorporated cities and $1.40 inside incorporations.

Although the total rate remains the same, there were numerous changes in the various items comprising the total, with increases in six divisions and decreases in two divisions. The rate remained stationary on three items.

County Auditor W. C. Jerome, who has worked with the board for the past three weeks in arriving at the totals to be used, stated today that the tentative rate, although remaining he same, would result in an increased revenue of approximately $40,000 based on the increased valuations. Practically all the balances in county funds are lower than they were last year, Jerome stated, and the officials were faced with a difficult task in working out sufficient revenues to meet the increasing demands on government caused by the growth of population and improvements.

The tentative budget is required by law to be published in pamphlet form before August 10 and notice given to the public of a hearing at a time to be fixed by the board on or before August 20, at which time objections to the budget in its tentative form may be presented by the tax payers before it is formally adopted by the supervisors. This meeting may be held on August 19, it was indicated today.

Variations of 14 cents occur in the different divisions of the items making the total tax rate, with increases of that amount in six of the funds, being off set by an equivalent decrease in two other funds.

The largest increase is that of the county hospital rate, where a new rate of 19 cents is five and one-half cents higher than the rate of 13 and one-half cents last year. This is accounted for, according to Jerome, by the fact that the budget request has increased from $316,000 to $380,000, a reflection of the hard times, which require more financial relief at this county institution.

Increase of two and one-half cents also is indicated in the tentative rate for each of the county general and salary funds. The increase in the county general fund is to provide for election expenses this year and for increased expenditures in the flood control department. The increase in the salary account is required to care for legal increases in salaries provided during the year and to building up a balance which has been depleted.

The largest percentage of increase is in the county park rate, where it is now 300 per cent of what it was last year, the rate being increased from one cent to three cents. Necessity of providing additional and increased sanitary facilities and building up the park fund are assigned as the cause for this upward trend.

Other increases are provided in the interest and sinking fund rate, which is boosted one cent, and the advertising fund rate, which gets an additional one-half cent this year.

The decreases are in the county good roads fund, where it was found possible to lop off six cents from the 14 cent rate of last year, and in the unbudgeted reserve, where a rate of eight cents last year was wiped out entirely. These decreases were made possible by the fact that the roads are now in good shape and the eight cent rate is expected to bring sufficient revenue to take care of necessary work, and that there is a large balance totaling $600,000 in the unbudgeted reserve and general reserve funds of the county.

The tentative rates as determined by the board last night are as follows: county general, 27½ cents; salary, 15 cents; hospital, 19 cents; interest and sinking, seven cents; advertising, two and one-half cents; county school, 38 cents; county high school, 25 cents; county park, three cents; county good roads, eight cents; total inside cities, $1.45; road, 40 cents; total outside, $1.85.

The school rates remained the same as they were last year, and were the only ones which sustained no change, with the exception of the general reserve, for which no provision was made either last year or this year.

How to Make a Dressing Table

If you can handle a hammer efficiently, have a stray mirror and an eye for color, you can make a love of a dressing table for ten dollars.

First buy an unpainted dressing table with a kidney shaped top, drawers in it if you wish, but the one I saw had none. Draw the exact dimensions of the top on a piece of paper, take it to a shop selling mirror glass and have a piece cut to the pattern, the edges bevelled.

Drape the table in anything your taste and purse runs to, but I am going to drape mine in a long shirred skirt of apricot-peach marquisette over plain glazed chintz, same shade—finished at the bottom with a 3-inch ruffle held in place by a thick cord of robin's egg blue taffeta. A deep valance finishes the top of the able and this is ruffled to match the bottom.

Hang your stray mirror over this lovely table with heavy silk cords of apricot or robin's egg blue. Of course you aren't going to let the dressing table get away with all the ruffles and the color scheme—

Buy two sets of ruffled marquisette-gauze curtains and enough of the one shade to make a ruffled valance. Two sets of rods are necessary also. On the under set hang the apricot curtains and on the outer set hang the contrasting shade. Loop each set of curtains back with its own color but tack the tie-backs securely in place with the one ornamental fastener. The top of the window is finished by the ruffled valance.

I saw just such a pair of windows so treated, and in the shades described for the dressing table. The effect was indescribably lovely, the sheerness of the gauze, and the delicate shades made one think I was looking at an early sun rise.

TODAY'S RECIPE
CHEESE ROLLS
1 Philadelphia cream cheese
½ cup Maraschino cherries
Mayonnaise
Very fresh white bread

Mash the cheese fine with a fork and use just enough mayonnaise to blend to creamy softness. Drain and mince the maraschino cherries, mix with the cheese and use for filling. Get the freshest bread possible, cut off all crusts, and cut in very thin slices, spread liberally with the filling, roll up, put in a bread tin close together and chill until ready to serve.

MINCED LOBSTER SANDWICH
1 small can of lobster
1 small bottle of capers
Mayonnaise
Paprika and salt
Bread and butter

Pick over the lobster and run it through the food chopper to mince. Season it with paprika, salt and a little lemon juice and mix to a soft paste with mayonnaise. If possible buy a round loaf of bread, if not, cut the crusts off a white or dark loaf and then with a cooky cutter and a doughnut cutter of equal size cut an equal number of slices into rounds. Spread with soft butter, on the bottom round spread the lobster paste and in the center of this round drop a few capers or finely chopped pickle. Put the slice with the hole so that the capers are left exposed. It is best to have everything ready but make the sandwiches up just before serving, they get messy looking if left too long.

Each of these sandwiches has a calory value of 150. The filling makes them a distinct energy making food, but on picnics the excess oxygen and exercise take the curse off them.

Several Guests Share Honors at Pretty Dinner Party

Unique in the fact that practically all the diners were there as honor guests was the prettily appointed dinner presided over Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Thornhill in their home at 502 East Fifth street.

Centering the table were pastel-toned garden flowers in every imaginable variety, harmonizing with those used as decorations throughout the rooms. Equally prominent, although losing its identity with the dessert course, was the delicious white cake, elaborately decorated. This was a tribute to Mrs. Guy Thornhill, who was celebrating her natal day anniversary, and to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tatum, of 519 South Parton street in honor of their fifth wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Conaway shared honors as recent arrivals here from Freeport, Ill., who are spending the summer at 611 West Fifth street.

Those who were present to share in the delightful dinner and the social evening which followed it, were the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Thornhill, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tatum and daughter Jackie May, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Conoway and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Thornhill.

Also, tonight is gift night at Shelley's and at 8:30 p. m. a diamond ring is to be given away.

Feature Women's Matinees At Fox Theaters Here

Announcement was made today by the Fox theaters of Santa Ana, that starting on next Tuesday, August 12, a Ladies Bargain Matinee schedule would go into effect, doing away with the usual two for one coupon matinees which have been in vogue here for the past several months.

Special prices will be in effect for the "Ladies Matinees" according to Manager Norman Sprowl, who stated that the bargain shows would be held at the Fox West Coast theater on Mondays and Thursdays of each week and at the Fox Broadway theater on Tuesdays and Fridays.

The first show to which women will be admitted on the bargain prices will be "Our Blushing Brides," latest Joan Crawford picture, which comes to the theater for four days starting next Monday. The first bargain matinee will be held on Tuesday.

To every woman who attends the first matinee, a bottle of "Gerty" perfume, Joan Crawford brand will be given with the admission ticket, it was announced.

DUNCAN SISTERS AT WALKER'S THEATER

"It's a Great Life," opening tonight at Walker's State would be a very interesting story even if it were not enlivened by the antics of the inimitable stars, the Duncan Sisters, and nearly a dozen brand-new catchy songs.

It plants the Duncans as clerks in a department store who are fired because Rosetta "ad libs" on a rah rah type of "organization song," euphoniously named "Smile, Smile, Smile, with Mandelbaum and Weil." That makes the opportunity for the formation of a team, the Hogan Sisters, with James Dean at the piano. Dean's courtship of Vivian, and Rosetta's resentment of his overflowing vanity, lead to a split. The story follows throughout to the final reuniting of the girls, with a side, by-plot concerning Rosetta and "Parker," played by Jed Prouty.

GET SWIMMING POOL

PLYMOUTH, Wis., Aug. 6—(UP)—A petition signed by virtually every youth in Plymouth aroused the city council to action and as a result a temporary swimming pool has been promised. An indoor tank later will be housed in the proposed municipal building.

'MANSLAUGHTER' FILM CONTINUES

A society girl, rich, beautiful and reckless, kills a man in an automobile accident. She was driving in a reckless manner at the time. She is arrested and sent to prison by the very man who loves her more than anything else in the world.

In a nutshell, that is the story of "Manslaughter", great Paramount production which is now ploying at the Fox Broadway theater. The picture opened there Monday and plays through tomorrow night.

Claudette Colbert has the principal feminine role in the production. She will be remembered here in "The Big Pond" and "The Lady Lies". The male lead is played by Frederic March.

The story of "Manslaughter" is not new. It was a great stage play, and in 1922 it was made into a silent picture, with Thomas Meighan in the leading male role and Leatrice Joy as th egirl.

"Manslaughter" is the kind of a picture that appeals to any audience. It has romance, adventure, a number of particularly good court room scenes and a climax that will jar and thrill througaout.

A Fox Movietone news reel, together with an all-talking comedy and other short subjects also are shown.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

All afternoon the Tinymites walked 'round the town, just seeing sights. "By night," exclaimed the Travel Man, "we'll sure be all tired out. But, while we're here, it seems to me, 'tis best to see all we can see. Then, when we leave you'll just know what this country's all about."

So, on they went till Scouty cried, "Where's Clowny? Is he trying to hide? I cannot see him anywhere. Perhaps he's dropped behind." And, sure enough, as Scouty feared, he suddenly had disappeared. Said Coppy, "If he's fooling us, he isn't very kind."

The Travel Man was much concerned. Down several streets they quickly turned, but nowhere was poor Clowny seen. He'd simply dripped from sight. "We must find him, at any cost," said Coppy. "Now, I'm sure he's lost. I only hope, where'er he is, that he is quite all right."

The search kept on till almost dark. Then Scouty loudly shouted, "Hark! I think I heard wee Clowny's voice. Somebody's shouting, 'Hey'!" Then, for the bunch there came a treat. They spied poor Clowny down the street. He ran right up to them and said, "Oh gee, I've been away.

"I hopped a cart that passed our way and then the pony ran away. When someone caught him I jumped off. That was a trip quite rare." "Well, have your fun, lad, now and then, but please don't pull that trick again. We've all been looking 'round for you. You gave us all a scare."

That night the Tinies slept real sound and in the morning they were bound for some new land. The Travel Man was teasing them. Where they were bound he would not tell, but said, "I know you'll think it's swell." They took a train and then a boat and sailed right out to sea.

(The Tinymites arrive in a big city in the next story.)

RULES:

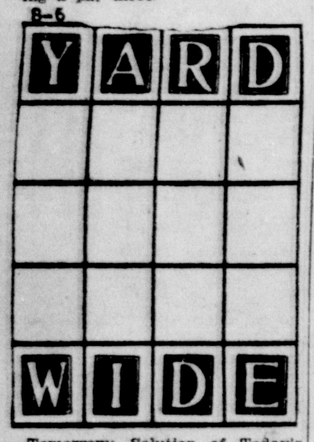

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters can not be changed.

YARD to WIDE—Today's hole is a YARD WIDE. Therefore, you should have no difficulty in shooting a par three.

CULEX PITINES

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 6.—People in Portland are taking pains to see that no basins of water are standing idle around their homes.

Dr. M. V. King, government entomologist, said he had discovered culex pitines in Portland. Culex pitines, it might be added, is a species of home mosquito which breeds in standing water around the house.

Previous to this time, it was said, culex pitines had not been found in the Pacific Northwest.

URGES CHAPPARAL FOR STATE FORESTS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Rather than plant trees, which take from 100 to 150 years to attain their full growth, to protect California's water supply areas, chapparal, a natural growth of the mountains, should be planted, according to Rolf N. Newman, past president of the local chapter of the American association of engineers.

Newman, who recently spoke before the Los Angeles City club, stated that chapparal takes from 10 to 15 years to attain full growth and does not require the care given to forests.

"It does not have to be planted again after a fire," Newman said, "because the life of the plant is preserved in the roots and in the course of a few years a new growth will appear."

Newman declared that more than 100 different kinds of chapparel grow naturally in California and the preservation of planted areas now existent will give immediate benefits to the present generation and posterity.

A NEW EFFECT

We were glad to see Stribling score that quick knockout over Otto Von Porat, not because of any animosity we bear toward the Norwegian, but because it marked an important phase of Stribling's battle to come back. For the same reason it was like meat and drink to hear Strib had socked Mr. Scott.

Sande's great comeback last spring in the Wood Memorial and his subsequent victories on Gallant Fox gave us an honest thrill.

IT DOES US GOOD

The other day the Athletics beat the Senators, but in the ninth inning a large gent came to the mound for the Washington team and struck out three men in a row. We thought back to 1925 when the same Firpo Marberry won a pennant for Washington, pitching in 55 games and never starting one! Why are we so happy every time the ancient Jack Quinn or venerable Clarence Mitchell pitches another well-earned triumph? Why are we so glad to read that a great athlete has come back?

Is it because we all must slide down the same old hill ourselves? Because we like to see our own physical limitations surpassed by an effort that seems to be superhuman?

Father time is not often cheated. The odds are on his side every time It's good to win a bet from the Old Gent now and then.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

In five months, Hal Finney, the young catcher for the Pirates, has missed writing to his sweetheart just three nights. . . . She lives in Buffalo, Ala., and is quite a lot older than Hal. . . . she happens to have the same family name as Hal . . . yep, it's Mrs. Finney . . . she's his mother. . . . When Willie Stribling reaches these shores, he will go to Madison Square Garden at once, where he will be signed for a match with somebody, probably Campolo . . . between you and me, Lucius, he would ruin the big horse. . . . He would beat Schmeling, too, I think, but Sharkey? I just don't know. . . . John McGraw says the drinking problem among big league ball players is more acute now than in ye olde wide-open days. . . . He says the drinking ball player today isn't content with a few beers, but doesn't know when to stop.

FINANCIAL AND MARKET NEWS

NEW YORK CURB

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Selling of oil stocks and special issues spread reactionary tendencies to other sections of the list on the curb exchange today and the market as a whole drifted irregularly lower in continued dull trading.

Increase in production of oil during the last week increased bearish sentiment regarding the oil shares and selling came in to Gulf and Humble, the former declining almost 2 points and the latter a point. Cosden, Vacuum and Standard of Indiana made fractional recessions.

Deere and Co. was subject to another bear drive in the general list and dipped to a new low for the year on a decline of more than 2 points. National Family Stores was another weak spot, breaking more than a point. Exceptions to the trend were Mead Johnson and Saxet company, which moved up fractionally to new highs for the year.

An early displjay of resistance to selling on the part of the utilities vanished when offerings became more plentiful and an early gain in American Gas was ubstituted with a loss, while declines took place in Electric Bond, Cities Service, United Light, Niagara Hudson and American Superpower.

Investment trust issues drifted lower in apathetic trading.

A CANDIDATE SPEAKS OUT

We would like to call the attention of the readers to the advertisement in last night's Register of Harry Westover, candidate for district attorney. We hope you read it. We are going to repeat two or three sentences from it. To quote him, he says:

I promise to divorce that office (district attorney) from control of the political bosses.

I promise actual and real enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and all other laws, and prosecution in any case the facts warrant.

And last:

I expect opposition from those who do not want this program, but it is fair and just, and I will stay with it.

We recall when Wendell Phillips was about to rise to address a public meeting where there was feeling on both sides of the slavery question, his wife turned to him and said: "Now, Wendell, don't shilly-shally."

We want to express appreciation of the fact that there is one candidate for the most important office, in our judgment, in Orange county, who is not shilly-shallying. Law enforcement conditions in Orange county need officers of ability, energy and conviction, and it is refreshing to find a man who embodies these qualities and is actually willing to inform the people without equivocation exactly where he stands and what he stands for. There is no side-stepping or pussyfooting, and he frankly says that he knows there will be those who will oppose him.

Yes, every man who is violating the law for profit will oppose him. Every one who is exploiting the weakness of other people as a bootlegger will oppose him, and they will oppose any one else who stands as he does. Those whose interests are advanced by law officials selecting what laws they are to enforce and selecting those against whom they will be enforced, will oppose him.

What we want to say also is that by the same token, if he is nominated and elected, some of this same ilk in the county who are profiting from their violations will fold up their tents and steal out of Orange county, for they will prefer leaving the county to going to jail.

We have had requests from all over the county for information as to whom to vote for. Certainly here is one candidate whose personal reputation squares with his public declaration, and for whom the voter can safely vote, knowing that he will be their servant.

From declarations of Mr. R. E. Haynes of Fullerton, we judge that he is the same type of man. Orange county can count itself fortunate that at this crucial time, men of this type will offer themselves as candidates for the people's suffrage.

Cyril Tolley, former British golf champion, is considering locating in Chicago. Probably in an effort to improve his shots.

THE RUSSIAN DEBT

The question of Russia paying the debts that the Czar incurred is again before the public mind. There is a great deal that can be said on behalf of the Russian in his determination not to consider these obligations as a part of the national debt.

Much of this money was incurred by the Czar in the very act of keeping these people in a practical bondage and punishing them. If the debt is attached to people and not to the country, certainly there is nothing to be said on behalf of the payment of the debt. But debts of nations, even with changing governments and revolutions have usually been recognized, and they have been recognized on the theory that people outside of the state cannot be responsible for the good faith of the people inside, or pass judgment upon the government of whether it is a good government or a bad one.

We can well see how Russia should refuse to pay debts of the Czar's government to nations or to people of nations which refuse to recognize her present government, but those nations that do recognize it, and have adopted a policy of accepting any government of another nation that establishes itself and keeps itself in power for a fair length of time, should certainly have the debt of Russia paid to them. The truth is that if the people, even those who have not had a revolution, repudiated debts that were incurred through unwise, foolish or even corrupt management, there would be no credit for nations anywhere.

If debts are to be paid by people and not by property, and if creditors are to loan simply on the theory that a nation is just and the people contented, how could Russia now expect to negotiate credit? Certainly there are thousands who believe that eventually certain elements in Russia will rise and overthrow the government. Debts, whether public or private, cannot be repudiated without misfortune by either private or public debtors.

Men, according to the headlines, used to end their lives over their fiancees, but now it's because of their finances.

A NON-SPIN AIRPLANE

They claim now to have a non-spinning airplane, one that is insured against either a nose-dive or a tailspin. Soon we hope they will have them insured against a fall regardless of what may happen.

We wonder if it will ever come to pass that in order to get people up into a plane, they will have to advertise that there are some elements of chance in the particular plane. It almost appears at times that people desire to take a chance.

EXTENSIVE READING

Miss Jeanette McFadden, head city librarian, reports that 327,109 books were circulated during the year ending June 30th. The figure represents a gain this year of 25,000 books.

The other day we quoted the opinion of Aldous Huxley, who maintained that reading is a vice, a means of escape from thought. Miss McFadden's figures bear out Mr. Huxley since more than sixty per cent of the books circulated were fiction, thirty-three per cent juveniles, with biography, the nearest approach to the story type as the second most popular with adult readers. The per cent of juveniles and fiction combined leaves but four per cent for biography and other types of books, which would include books on poetry, drama, essay, science, domestic arts, political economy, history, and every other type.

But granting that the bulk of the reading was done for amusement or a means of escape, it is one of the best occupations for the individual. He does absorb ideas as he reads. He cannot help doing so for the very novelty of some of them, to the reader, makes an impression and the mental vacuum is filled.

Wise folks have said, long before Mr. Huxley came along to startle us, that the boy or girl who read a great deal would not go wrong.

Joseph Wood Krutch says: "I never found a triple-brass cynicism acquired anywhere except in a library." That presents another phase of discussion on reading. At least the cynic is not hurt as much by the world as other folks, because he doesn't expect much. But on the other hand cynicism and courage are not kindred qualities.

Now that Denmark has decided to dispose of its only two cruisers, opponents of disarmament will be expected to laugh it off with the remark: "There's something rotten in Denmark."

RADIO SEEMS DRY TO HIM

A man down in Charleston, West Virginia, a coal operator, declares that the drought is due to the radio broadcasting institutions. He is writing President Hoover requesting that all radios be closed for a period of time to determine whether this be true.

In looking around for possibilities of reasons for the drought, we do not wonder that he has struck upon the radio. Something has caused this terrible unusual drought. We have no idea that the radio has anything to do with it. We have had droughts in other years, and years ago. The cause of them has never been determined. We doubt if there is anything that man can do to either prevent or bring a drought.

People in certain sections of this country now have been setting apart days of prayer when they shall petition the Creator, the God of the weather to bring forth an abundance of rain. When either water is withheld or when it comes in unusual and unprepared for quantities, man beholds how puny he really is.

Developing a Father

Imperial Valley Press

A good deal has been written about the importance to any growing boy of having a father to train him in the way that he should go and see that he develops properly. Not so much has been said on an equally vital subject—the importance to a man of having a son.

For the truth is that the son's influence on the father is usually greater than the father's influence on his son. No man, however educated, talented and cultured he may be, is truly developed the way nature intended until he has had the companionship of at least one son.

Mr. Solomon Levitan, state treasurer of Wisconsin, pointed this out very neatly in a speech made recently to a Wisconsin Father and Son's banquet.

"Sons," he declared, "are a vital factor in the development of fathers. From the moment a son rises on the horizon of a father, the father's hopes and interests are transferred from himself to his son, freeing him from self-centered ambitions and giving him the joy of planning for another's good.

"A man with a son better understands the problems of other men with sons, and he is more sympathetic and understanding in his endeavors to solve these problems."

It is just as important for the father as for the son, says Mr. Levitan, that the two develop as pals.

"The son," he says, "should have the benefit of his father's wisdom gained from the experience of living, but the father needs even more to gain a sympathetic understanding of his boy's needs. It keeps him from growing old and renews the enthusiasm of living."

There is sound sense in all of this. We owe our sons more than we dream. Haven't you ever seen some man, ordinarily brusque, thoughtless and somewhat self-centered, soften up and become pleasant, kindly and thoughtful simply because his son, all unconsciously, has taken him in hand? Of course you have. It happens every day.

The man who hasn't had a son—or who, having one, has failed to be a real father to him—has missed something priceless.

Hazy Geography Not Always Indifference

San Francisco Chronicle

Governor Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico protests against American lack of information as to the island. Letters come to him addressed to "Porto Rico, Cuba," "Porto Rico, Central America," and one friend asked him when he expected to return to the Philippines.

Some people are like that. Georgraphy is often a closed book to minds otherwise alert. A sweet voice called The Chronicle the other day to ask: "Is it Idaho or Iowa that lies between Oregon and Montana—no; I mean Oregon and Arizona?" A woman eminent in education circles confesses to her friends that she never can remember how far north of Sacramento she rides to get to Fresno.

Wasn't it Governor Roosevelt's famous father who told about stopping at a wayside ranch in Wyoming and asking how far it was to Laramie? "Well, stranger," replied the native, "it's about 24,996 miles if you keep going the way you're headed."

There are a lot of things besides latitude and longitude worth knowing about Porto Rico. If Governor Roosevelt quickens curiosity and interest among Americans he will serve continentals as well as islanders.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

ON THE ROAD TO WISDOM

If little Ramon doesn't try
To get his lessons well,
To add, subtract and multiply
And read and write and spell,
To learn the story of the Cid
In early literature,
And find out what his forebears did
To drive away the Moor,
And how Columbus sailed his ship
Another world to seek,
He cannot make a gala trip
To bullfights once a week.

No town that is not justly proud
Of it's scholastic lore
And mental fitness, is allowed
A local matador
Of all the things that educate
The cranium must be full,
Or people can't appreciate
The throwing of a bull.
No bulls will bellow, roar or mill
If erudition nods,
The fighters cannot waste their skill
Upon a crowd of clods.

And so the tiny tots of Spain
Continuously grind,
So that they finally may gain
Great qualities of mind.
And when they sit, an eager band,
And shout with all their might
One knows they fully understand
The fine points of a fight.
And thus we see that very soon
The carefree Spanish nation
Is on its happy way to un-
Iversal education.

The Blood-Letting Doctors of Despair

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

The economic Doctors of Despair still have their most doleful bedside manner. Commercially, they say, the country has been on a spree. There must be a letting of blood. Wages and prices must be further reduced.

In unison, the Doctors chant: "To every action, there MUST be an equal and opposite reaction; and we have not yet had reaction enough."

What is enough? Already, in one short year, we have gone back to the Pre-World War level of prices. How much further back must we go? Will a return to the prices of Pre-Revolutionary days mark the complete recovery of health?

The Doctors of Despair do not say. Possibly they are aware that prices will react even further than that, if it really is true that every action MUST be followed by an equal and opposite reaction.

But in affairs ecenomic it is not true; and it wever was true. The level of prices is determined almost entirely by the level of wages; and both are almost entirely subject to human control. There is no scientific basis whatever for making a law of PRICES out of a law of PHYSICS.

It may be that the declining rate of gold production will force the world to accept a long period of slowly declining prices. We do not think so. Ways have been found in the past of making a given volume of gold support a larger volume of money. Other ways can be found in the future.

In any event, a decline in prices, over the next twenty years, having to do solely with the world's stock of monetary gold, is nothing for the Doctors of Despair to shake their heads over. Such a decline would be too gradual to send the patient to the hospital.

The Doleful Doctors demand more than that. They want to operate at once. The deeper the wage-cuts the better. The life-blood of the body economic must be drawn.

The blood-letting Medical Doctors of the age of ignorance and superstition are now forbidden to practice.

The blood-letting Economic Doctors are still at large.

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files 14 Years Ago Today

AUGUST 6, 1916

Mrs Esther Faul, of this city, is still the favorite among the contestants for the office of queen of the Balboa Water carnival, to be staged August 10 to 13.

Preparations have been completed for the Woman's Missionary society and Young People's Alliance camp meeting and convention, to be held in Santa Ana, beginning on Tuesday and continuing until August 16.

A number of people are expected to be on hand Friday evening to attend the first Tustin band concert to be given at the pavilion on the school grounds.

The Tustin ball club defeated the De Luxe Penny Dance hall team of Los Angeles yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 0 at the grounds on Fruit street.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac O. Robbins were hosts at a delightful informal noon dinner yesterday, honoring the birthday of Mrs. Robbins' mother, Mrs. O. M. Robbins.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

IF JEFFERSON COULD SPEAK

If inter-stellar radio and postal communication were established between the mortal and post-martal worlds, I think Thomas Jefferson would want just now to write a letter of counsel to the Democratic party.

And here are some of the things I think he would have in mind as he wrote:

I think he would, first of all, want to advise his followers to be more scientific and less sentimental about democracy.

I think he would confess that the experience of the last century had convinced him that the rights of man may prove worthless after they are won unless the right man is brought into the position and power of leadership.

He would, I think, urge the Democratic party to assume as its special responsibility in contemporary America the revision of the theory of democracy in the light of later experience and newer knowledge of the actual way the mind of the citizen and the mind of the crowd work.

Now that the quantitative extension of political democracy has been virtually completed, I think Jefferson would urge his followers to buckle down to the job of its qualitative development.

I think he would remind the Democratic party of the fact that when he was an active participant in American politics, he was, along with other colleagues of the time, very skeptical of the soundness of the permanent political party system, that he thought the permanence of a party and its need to win elections would inevitably lead it to keep intellectual honesty, moral courage, and disinterested statesmanship in the background, when these qualities threatened to split the party. He would doubtless document this part of his letter with such current instances as the disgusting dishonesty and evasion practiced by all parties in the face of an issue like prohibition.

But, for all his theorizing, Jefferson was a practical man, and he would know that there is not the ghost of a chance that America will, within the lifetime of any of his followers now living, evolve any workable substitute for the permanent political party, and so, I think he would content himself at this point with an appeal to the Democratic party to do its best to substitute courage for compromise when it comes to writing its next platform.

And, finally, I think Jefferson would urge his followers to work out in detail the obviously necessary new application of his opposition to centralization and his advocacy of decentralization.

Were Jefferson alive and leading the Democratic party, I think this is the point on which he would try to focus the statesmanship of the party, but this is a point that deserves separate treatment tomorrow.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

SUMMER COACHING

It often happens that a child falls behind his class in one subject or another and the teacher says, "Bobbie can do the work of the next grade but he is a little behind in grammar. It might be well to give him a little practice during the summer."

Some children need an hour or so of study during the vacation months. Usually they have failed in class because of illness, absence from school, change of school, or like causes. The others those a little behind the class but fit for promotion, are different.

These children usually profit most by complete rest from school work. Let the lessons go and allow the child to turn his mind toward other subjects and activities.

We find that many children have to be allowed a certain span of time for mental digestion. They have stored away the facts but they have to wait until the mind digests the material before they can call upon it for daily service.

Perhaps you have worked with a child in despair of ever getting him to understand what is expected of him only to have him surprise you with sudden power? That is what happens many times. The child's mind needed time to season the idea.

This process cannot be hurried. It is a hidden mysterious working of the mind. It is not always evident. Some children seem never to have to pause for it at all. Others seem to have to wait for long periods, as long as 27 days. Some children have to wait for one subject and not for others. When this characteristic shows itself the wise teacher and parent gives the child slow, steady, well-proportioned work during the school term. Then sits by to wait the perfection of the process.

So, if your child has been poor in a subject and you have decided to coach him, watch what happens. If the child makes no progress, if he yawns, fidgets, looks uneasy and appears to be very dull, tell him he has done enough work for the term and forget all about the matter.

Change the child's activities. Give him the benefit of some new experience, even though he seems to want to stay in his rut. The change of work, of environment, will stimulate his mind and bring it to better health. Mental growth is not a single, isolated process at any time. It is a varied and multiple process that draws from a large field of experience. The broader that field the better during the vacation months.

This is why it is often better to send the failing child off for a visit to the farm, off on a fishing trip, off to a camp, or a berry picking, than to coach him. Try it and see.

THE TRANSFIGURATION

On August 6, Greek and Latin churches commemorate the anniversary of the Transfiguration, when Christ ascended Mount Tabor with his three favorite disciples, Peter, James and John, and revealed a supernatural change in his personal appearance.

A chapel dedicated to the Transfiguration caps the highest peak of Mount Athos in Greece, where a great annual service is performed on the recurrence of the festival. Tozer describes the scene as follows:

"As we approached from the east we first heard the sound of chanting from within the chapel, and when we came round the platform in front a scene appeared which I shall never forget. Distinctly seen in the moonlight were the weird, ghostly figures of the monks, closely wrapped in their gowns, with long black beards and mushroom locks, some sitting close to the little window of the chapel, where the service was going on, some lying about in groups, like the figures of the three apostles in Raphael's picture of the Transfiguration. . . . At intervals, as we sat there, the priest came out arrayed in gorgeous vestments and swung the incense about us. The vigil lasted a whole night."

Time To Smile

WHAT DOES SHE MEAN?

FATHER: This is a nice state of affairs! Here you've got engaged to this young fellow—he's been coming here every night for weeks—and you know absolutely nothing about him!

DAUGHTER (dreamily): Now you mention it, he DOES rather like keeping me in the dark!—The Humorist.

HIS IDEA

"Have you such a thing as a thick piece of cardboard, mother?"

"Why do you want it, dear?"

"Those next door boys won't return a ball I sent over, and I want to write them a stiff letter."—The Humorist.
